NO TRIAL AT ARMS.

Prospect Brightens at Karlstad.

Announcement That Definite Result is Probable Gives Christiania Relief.

England, France and Germany Offered Their Services, if Necessary.

It Is Taken for Granted That Compromise Was Reached as to the Forts.

[BY THE ASSOCIATED PRESS—P.M.]

KARLSTAD, Sept. 16.—[By Atlantic Cable.] The first official announcement indicating that the delegates of Norway and Sweden were approaching any understanding in their effort to establish a modus vivendi for the countries as separate governments, was given out tonight at the close of the joint session of the delegates. The announcement reads:

"The probabilities are that in the near future negotiations can be brought to a definite result."

This somewhat cryptic announcement is accepted as indicating that the negotiations have reached a stage when an agreement is in sight, and that a resort to arms, which might have involved either power, may safely be considered to be out of the question. At this hour, the delegates and other officials decline to throw further light on the subject of the negotiations, which will be resumed tomorrow.

It is taken for granted, however, that a compromise has been reached on the subject of fortifications, which has been the crux of the situation since the start, and that the main questions will be arbitrated. It is believed, however, that considerable influence was brought to bear on both sides, looking to concessions by which the wounding of sensibilities of the [illegible] avoided and an [illegible] between the Scandinavian people secured.

The lateness of the hour of adjournment made it impossible to obtain the result of the conference from the delegates, but a distinctly better feeling prevails, and it is believed that the next few days will see an amicable ending of the conference.

The report that the powers had made representations to Sweden was based on the fact that Great Britain, France and Germany offered their services, if they became necessary.

WILL RESULT IN PEACE.

[BY THE ASSOCIATED PRESS—P.M.]

CHRISTIANIA, Sept. 17.—A pregnant expression of the feeling in Norway at the reception of the communication given out by the Karlstad conference is had in the leading article of the prominent newspaper Verdensgang this morning. It says:

"The message that was awaited with the highest tension has at last arrived. The negotiations at Karlstad will result in peace. This will be accepted by the two peoples with intense satisfaction and greeted by the civilized world with entire sympathy. The Scandinavian nations have settled a most serious conflict as never has such a quarrel been arranged. It is only a few months since Norway entered the path of independence leading to the abyss of dangers, and no drop of blood stained the divorce, which was accomplished in a manner to prepare for the future concord and fertile coöperation of the politically-separated nations.

"The result of the negotiations is as yet unknown. It may not correspond with the wishes of Norwegians, but surely we secured all that it was possible to attain without diminishing our dignity or national independence. When the Norwegian people take the occasion to coolly deliberate upon results of the negotiations, they will not find they paid too high a price, as compared with what they have gained for all time."

CHRISTIANIA IS RELIEVED.

[BY THE ASSOCIATED PRESS—P.M.]

CHRISTIANIA, Sept. 16.—The official communication issued at Karlstad was received here at 10:45 o'clock tonight, and was immediately spread on bulletin boards to be read by crowds waiting quietly but eagerly in the vicinity of the newspaper offices. The communication is interpreted as confirming optimistic reports published this morning, and there is a feeling of intense relief.

NORWAY MOBILIZING.

[BY THE ASSOCIATED PRESS—A.M.]

PARIS, Sept. 16.—Despite the contradictory statements made on the subject, information reaching the highest authorities shows that the mobilization of Norway's forces is now going on. The French government has made conciliatory representations at Stockholm with the view to averting a rupture. Official sentiment here tends toward an arrangement whereby Norway could be permitted to continue some of her frontier fortifications. It is understood that other powers are joining in pacific representations, as a rupture is considered likely to cause entanglements throughout Europe.

SCHAMUS ADJUDGED INSANE.

NEW YORK, Sept. 16.—Isaac Schamus, the young man who recently attempted to secure an audience with President Roosevelt at Oyster Bay in order to submit to the Presiden a scheme for settling the coal-mining question, and who was arrested at the instance of secret service agents, was today adjudged insane.

BRITAIN'S NELSON MEMORIAL.

Centennial Anniversary of the Great Admiral's Embarkation to be Celebrated October 21.

[BY DIRECT WIRE TO THE TIMES.]

LONDON, Sept. 16.—[Exclusive Dispatch.] One hundred years ago last Thursday, Nelson embarked at Portsmouth on his ship, the Victory, for the voyage which crowned his marvelous life and made him a British national hero for all time.

That day was the occasion of the launching of a movement for a centenary memorial under the auspices of Lord Brassey, Lord Kinnaird, Sir Thomas Sutherland and many other distinguished people.

October 21, all parts of the British Empire will celebrate the Nelon centennial. In the afternoon of that day, there will be a great gathering at the Albert Hall, followed by a big evening concert. Collections are now being started, the proceeds of which will be devoted to the benefit of the royal mercantile fishing fleets.

PLOT TO UNSEAT MAYORS FAILS.

CUBAN POLITICIANS UP AGAINST THE SUPREME COURT.

Acting Governor of Santa Clara Ordered Arrested for Disobeying Presidential Decree—Great Excitement Reported, and Fears are Expressed That Liberals May be Rash.

[BY THE ASSOCIATED PRESS—P.M.]

HAVANA, Sept. 16.—The arrest of Acting Civil Governor Alberti of the province of Santa Clara has been ordered by the Supreme Court. He was charged with ordering the Mayor of the town of Vueltas to disobey a Presidential decree in refusing to allow the Mayor, whom he had unseated in favor of an opposing political leader, to resume his functions. Bail has been fixed at $1500 and Señor Alberti has been given seventy-two hours in which to comply with an order to turn over the government to the president of the Provincial Council.

Señor Diaz, whom the Governor of Pinar Del Rio succeeded as Mayor of Guanajay, as part of an alleged Liberal plot to unseat all mayors and the leading municipal officials in the provinces of Santa Clara, Camagury and Pinar Del Rio, has been arrested and imprisoned on a charge of refusing to comply with a Presidential order to turn over the mayoralty.

Great excitement is reported at [illegible] Diaz from the jail. The Secretary of the Interior, General Andrade, has telegraphed Mayor Aristi, of Guanajay, authority to call on the rural guards in case assistance is required.

INDEPENDENCE OF MEXICO.

CELEBRATION OF UNUSUAL BRILLIANCY AND ENTHUSIASM.

President Diaz Opens the Congress and Speaks of the Sending Back of the Body of the Late Ambassador Aspiroz by the United States.

[BY THE ASSOCIATED PRESS—P.M.]

CITY OF MEXICO, Sept. 16.—The celebration of the anniversary of the national independence here has been unusually brilliant and enthusiastic. President Diaz opened Congress tonight, a large and distinguished audience being present.

In the course of his semi-annual message, the President spoke in recognition of the sending back to Mexico by the United States government of the body of the late Ambassador Aspiroz on an American warship. He referred to the excellent work accomplished by the Superior Board of Health in stamping yellow fever out of the republic; to the progress made in public education, and touched upon subjects relating to the notable increase in mining and agriculture and the vast amount of labor performed on port works.

President Diaz commended the increase in every construction, and mentioned the remarkable increase in the business done by the postoffice and the Federal telegraph departments and the excellent showing of the revenues for the past fiscal year.

NO CITIZENSHIP FOR ANARCHIST

Initial Steps in Wholesale Disfranchisement in Chicago Taken by Federal Authorities.

[BY THE ASSOCIATED PRESS—P.M.]

CHICAGO, Sept. 16.—Initial steps for a wholesale disfranchisement of citizens of Chicago were taken today by United States Dist.-Atty. Morrison. The Federal prosecutor instructed Assistant Dist.-Atty. Marston to act in the cases of 166 persons admitted to citizenship without inquiry as to their sentiment on the subject of anarchy, as required by a law passed after the assassination of President McKinley.

Coincident with the action by the Federal authorities, four indictments were returned by the Cook county grand jury as a result of investigation by State's Attorney Healey into naturalization frauds by minor politicians for personal gain. Perjury was charged in each case.

FIGHT WITH HOTTENTOTS.

BERLIN, Sept. 16.—A dispatch from Harushas, German Southwest Africa, says Maj. Meister's column of colonial troops engaged the insurgent Hottentots westward of here September 13. After five hours fighting, the natives gave way, leaving sixty dead. Two Germans were killed, and twelve, including Maj. Maeker, wounded.

WASHINGTON.

PRESIDENT URGING PROMPT CANAL WORK.

He Wants a Plan Which Will Admit of Immediate Building.

Chief Executive's Remarks to the Commissioners Made Public by Gen. Davis—Sea-level Waterway Would be Best in the End, if Feasible—Engineers are Expected to Make Known Their Opinions.

[BY THE ASSOCIATED PRESS—A.M.]

WASHINGTON, Sept. 16.—The President is urging in the strongest terms the necessity for a plan for the construction of the Panama canal which may be accomplished in the shortest possible time. In his recent remarks to the consulting board of engineers of the Isthmian Canal Commission, he said many things which are regarded as of the utmost importance in that connection. These remarks have been transcribed and transmitted to the board here, and Gen. Davis, its chairman, has been authorized to make them public. The President said:

"What I am about to say must be considered in the light of suggestion, not as direction. I have named you because, in my judgment, you are especially fitted to serve as advisers in planning the greatest engineering work the world has yet seen, and I expect you to advise me, not what you think I want to hear, but what you think I ought to hear.

"There are two or three considerations which I trust you will steadily keep before your mind in coming to a conclusion as to the proper type of canal. I hope that ultimately it will prove possible to build a sea-level canal. Such a canal would undoubtedly be best in the end, if feasible, and I feel that one of the chief advantages of the Panama route is that ultimately a sea-level canal will be a possibility. But while paying due heed to the ideal perfectibility of the scheme from an engineer's standpoint, remember the need of having a plan which shall provide for the immediate building of the canal on the safest terms and in the shortest possible time.

[illegible] course, it is preferable, but if to adopt a plan of a sea-level canal means to incur hazard and to insure indefinite delay, then it is not preferable. If the advantages and disadvantages are closely balanced, I expect you to say so. I desire also to know whether, if you recommend a high level multi-lock canal, it will be possible, after it is completed, to turn it into or to substitute for it, in time, a sea-level canal, without interrupting the traffic upon it. Two of the prime considerations to be kept steadily in mind are:

"One. The utmost practicable speed of construction.

"Second. Practical certainty that the plan proposed will be feasible, that it can be carried out without minimum risk.

"The quantity of work and the amount of work should be minimized so far as possible.

"There may be good reason why the delay incident to the adoption of a plan for an ideal canal should be incurred; but if there is not, then I hope to see the canal constructed on a system which will bring to the nearest possible date in the future the time when it is practicable to take the first ship across the Isthmus; that is, which will, in the shortest time possible, secure a Panama waterway between the oceans of such a character as to guarantee permanent and ample communication for the greatest ships of our navy, and for the largest steamers on either the Atlantic or the Pacific. The delay in transit of the vessels, owing to additional locks, would be of small consequence when compared with shortening the time for the construction of the canal or diminishing the risks in its construction.

"In short, I desire your best judgment on all the various questions to be considered in choosing among the various plans for a comparatively high-level multi-lock canal; for a lower level with fewer locks, and for a sea-level canal. Finally, I urge upon you the necessity of as great expedition in coming to a decison as is compatible with thoroughness in considering the conditions."

MEETING OF THE BOARD.

[BY THE ASSOCIATED PRESS—P.M.]

WASHINGTON, Sept. 16.—A meeting of the board of the consulting engineers of the Isthmian Canal Commission was held today, and the question of the construction of the dams further considered. This work is being facilitated by the use of drawings prepared to illustrate the points of discussion. The object is simply to exchange ideas among the members of the board prior to their visit to the isthmus in the latter part of the month. It is officially stated that no vote on any subject relating to the construction of the canal will be taken until after this visit.

The board today decided to hear Buena Varilla Tuesday, instead of Wednesday, and Bates Tuesday afternoon, at which time the respective plans of the gentlemen will be presented for the consideration of the board.

ANOTHER PEACE CONFERENCE.

MATTERS DESERVE ATTENION

[BY DIRECT WIRE TO THE TIMES.]

WASHINGTON, Sept. 16.—[Exclusive Dispatch.] It was admitted in the State Department, this afternoon, that after the President has returned to Washington and has had an opportunity to consult with Secretary of State Root, it is quite possible that he will issue a note to the powers calling attention to the present time as opportune for another peace conference to complete the work done by the Geneva convention.

Among the questions which may be suggested for consideration are the statutes for the Red Cross in the time of war, that of hospital ships and the care for the wounded upon battlefields. Another matter is the dropping of explosives from balloons or airships, as well as the use of wireless telegraphy and floating mines.

ARMY DESERTERS.

GEN. CARR'S OPINION THEREON.

[BY DIRECT WIRE TO THE TIMES.]

WASHINGTON, Sept. 16.—[Exclusive Dispatch.] Brig.-Gen. O. C. C. Carr, commanding the Department of Dakota, thinks that the chief difficulty about desertions from the army is the [illegible] tract.

In his annual report he says upon this subject: "Perhaps the most potent factor in causing desertion is the regard in which an enlistment in the army is held by the average American citizen. I believe that in time of peace most of our people look on an enlistment as a contract merely, and desertion as nothing more than a breach of contract.

"A more severe punishment for the crime, for such it is, and an inflexible policy of not condoning the offense in any way might possibly cause our people to view the subject in a different light."

That the number of infractions of military law is practically equal to the number of enlisted men is made clear by the following paragraph in the report: "The discipline of the troops, as evidenced by the number of trials, has not varied from that of the previous year, the trials in the fiscal year 1905 being 2514, as against 2563 in 1904, the strength of the department being 2542 for 1905 and 2470 for 1904."

FAMILIES OF SOLDIERS.

SUGGESTION OF QUARTERS.

[BY DIRECT WIRE TO THE TIMES.]

WASHINGTON, Sept. 16.—In his annual report, Brig.-Gen. Frederick D. Grant, commanding the Department of the East, makes the suggestion that the families of some of the officers and enlisted men in the army transferred to the Philippines be allowed to live in the barracks and quarters in a limited number of abandoned forts while the husbands are absent from the country. He suggests Fort Trumbull, Ct., as an excellent place for such use.

Speaking of the many trials by court-martial Gen. Grant says that fully 75 per cent. of these trials were due to the use of bad liquors in dens of vice near military posts. Says the General: "It is distressing that the prosperity of the vile resorts is due to the activity of good and worthy though misguided citizens who have succeeded in abolishing the canteen of the army."

ARGENTINA'S TARIFF BILL.

HIGH RATE ON MACHINERY.

[BY THE ASSOCIATED PRESS—P.M.]

WASHINGTON, Sept. 16.—Minister Beaupre at Buenos Ayres, in accordance with instructions cabled to him by Acting Secretary of State Loomis, has investigated the matter of the proposed new high rate of duty on agricultural machinery and extra parts for repairs, and reports today by cable that the tariff bill has been passed by the Argentine House and is now before the Senate. This bill provides

M'CALL WANTED IN INSURANCE INQUIRY.

[BY THE ASSOCIATED PRESS—A.M.]

NEW YORK, Sept. 16.—John McCall, president of the New York Life Insurance Company, has been subpoenaed by the Joint Legislative Committee on Insurance Inquiry to testify before the committee when it resumes its sittings next week.

Assemblyman Prentice of the Insurance Legislative Committee, who is a Republican, said: "The committee wants it understood that the revelation of the campaign contributions on the part of the New York Life was not any surprise to the committee. We knew of the transaction long before it was brought out in the testimony of Mr. Perkins and it was led up to gradually."

SAMPSON OF ARIZONA.

His Place as Minister to Ecuador Will be Filled by a Man from Maryland.

[BY THE ASSOCIATED PRESS—P.M.]

OYSTER BAY, Sept. 16.—The President today made some changes of importance in the diplomatic and consular service. A few days ago he received the resignation of Archibald J. Sampson, American Minister to Ecuador, and accepted it, to be effective at the conclusion of Minister Sampson's leave of absence, which will expire the latter part of October. Minister Sampson now is sojourning in this country. His home is in Arizona. To succeed Sampson the President today appointed Joseph W. Lee of Maryland, at president American Consul at Panama.

Howard D. Vansant of New Jersey, American consul at Gueiph, Ont., has been promoted to be consul at Kingston, Ont., and Alex Heingartner of Ohio, until recently consul at Trieste, Austria, has been appointed to be consul at Gueiph. The Trieste consulate was filled several months ago.

The President spent most of the day in and about Sagamore Hill. No visitors were received.

MONEYED MEN OF NEW YORK.

MOST OF THEM ARE BACK FROM THEIR VACATIONS.

"Bears" See Breakers Ahead, but the "Bulls" See Only Encouraging Signs—Much Talk of Impending Deals in the Railroad World—Coin for Big Enterprises Can be Had.

[BY DIRECT WIRE TO THE TIMES.]

NEW YORK, Sept. 16.—[Exclusive Dispatch.] Most of the men prominent in the fields of finance and commerce have returned to town from their vacations. J. P. Morgan was at his office early and was closeted with his partners for some time. James Stillman, president of the National City Bank; George F. Baker, president of the First National Bank; James J. Hill, James R. Keene and George Gould were at their offices and appeared to be taking part in the opening of the fall's activities. Jacob H. Schiff is at Bar Harbor and E. H. Harriman is in the Far East.

Although the stock market is active, the commission houses have not been busy since the month opened. [illegible] portant enough to [illegible] presence in town.

There is much talk of impending deals in the railroad world which will require considerable cash, and which just now are being considered by the Morgan and kindred interests. Bears see many breakers ahead. A disturbed if not tight money market, a confused and uncertain cotton situation, uncertainty regarding the corn crop, the diversion of funds to the West—all these are food for the pessimist. On the other hand, the bullish element as well as many calm observers see none but encouraging signs.

They hold that despite the hardening tendency in money, the situation is healthy and the money needed for the financing of any great undertakings will be forthcoming, and that, too, without the slightest disturbance. The foreign exchange houses take this view.

A corner scare is always disturbing, but the best informed say that there is so far no evidence to justify the suspicion that Reading will upset the market conditions to any serious extent.

The cotton men say that while conflicting statements of the crop will cause lively speculation and uncertainty, there is nothing in the situation which can be regarded as menacing.

STEELE-STURGES.

Contracting Parties in Marriage in Washington Society Will Reside in Los Angeles.

[BY DIRECT WIRE TO THE TIMES.]

WASHINGTON, Sept. 16.—[Exclusive Dispatch.] Miss Jeanne F. Steele, daughter of Mrs. Charles S. Steele, of this city, was married at St. John's Episcopal Church this afternoon to Hollister Sturges, son of Mrs. Francis Leggett of New York. The bride was attended only by her father. Elder Steinway acted as best man to the groom. Mrs. Leggett, the groom's mother, and his sister, the wife of Hon. Charles Montague, M.P., were among those who witnessed the ceremony.

Mr. and Mrs. Sturges will reside in Los Angeles.

KAISER RECEIVES MEYER.

BERLIN, Sept. 16.—[Exclusive Dispatch.] The American Ambassador, Mr. Meyer, took a train last night to Hamburg, in consequence of a special invitation to lunch with the Emperor today. As Meyer is bound to see the President, to make a direct report on Russian affairs, it can be taken as certain that the Emperor proposes to intrust Meyer with a political message of partcular importance with reference to the altered situation in the Far East, and the position of the powers there.

MISS ALICE IN KOREA.

SEOUL (Korea) Sept. 16.—Miss Alice Roosevelt, Maj.-Gen. Corbin and Rear Admiral Train and party are expected to arrive here Tuesday next. The Emperor is preparing to welcome them with high honors. The travelers will remain a few days in Korea, whence they will go to Japan by way of Fusan.

PRETENDER'S SUCCESSFUL RAID.

THE HAGUE, Sept. 16.—An official dispatch reports a successful raid made by the pretender, Sonnebalt, of the Timorar Archipelago, who recently invaded Dutch territory, killed thirty-two persons and carried off sixty-two captives.

WATERS RISING.

Flood is Serious in Kansas.

Kaw River Threatens to Repeat Disasters of Two Years Ago.

Soaking Rains Continue in Western Missouri and the Streams Run High.

Packing-house Districts of Kansas City Swamped. Omaha's Distress.

[BY THE ASSOCIATED PRESS—P.M.]

TOPEKA (Kan.) Sept. 16.—The flood situation here tonight is most serious. The levees protecting the farming lands along Soldier Creek have broken, and thousands of acres of corn fields are under water. A wagon bridge across Soldier Creek went out late this afternoon, carrying eight boys and a horse and buggy down with it. Seven of the boys have been rescued, but one is still reported missing. The horse was drowned.

The Kaw River is rising rapidly at this point, and a repetition of the disastrous flood of 1903 is feared. Railroad communication between Topeka and Kansas City on the north side of the river has been completely cut off. Communication over the Rock Island is still cut off. The Union Pacific has two bridges out west of Topeka, and is using the tracks of the Rock Island. Both the Union Pacific and the Rock Island are using the same tracks between Topeka and Kansas City. It is expected that communication west over the Rock Island will be cut off some time tonight.

LATER: At midnight the Kaw River was still rising steadily at this point and at all points above Topeka. Alarm in North Topeka is increasing and the streets in the outskirts are flooded with three feet of water.

At Menoken, a village ten miles west of North Topeka, about one hundred persons have been driven from their homes by the water which is rushing through the streets.

The Rock Island Railroad has succeeded in getting a train through to the north over its St. Joseph line.

It is now known that Guy Place, a ten-year-old boy who was on the Soldier Creek bridge, which washed out, drowned. His body has not been found.

SOAKING RAINS CONTINUE.

MISSOURI STREAMS ARE UP.

[BY THE ASSOCIATED PRESS—A.M.]

KANSAS CITY (Mo.) Sept. 16.—Soaking rains have fallen in Western Missouri and Kansas in the past twenty-four hours and continued today. The flood, coming on top of almost continuous heavy rains during the past ten days, all streams are up and more or less damage has been done. Low-lying portions of Argentine and Armourdale districts of Kansas City, Kan., occupied principally by packing-houses and railway employés, have been flooded. This has been caused principally by back water from defective sewers, and no serious damage is likely.

Although the Kaw River at this point has risen rapidly and continues to come up, it must rise ten feet yet before it becomes really threatening. The Chicago, Rock Island and Pacific pile bridge across the Kaw near Kansas avenue in Armourdale was carried out today, and the Kansas City Southern pile bridge was threatened.

UNUSUAL SEVERITY.

OMAHA STREETS FLOODED.

[BY THE ASSOCIATED PRESS—A.M.]

OMAHA (Neb.) Sept. 16.—The rain and windstorm which passed over Southeastern Nebraska and Southwestern Iowa last night, was of unusual severity. Shortly before midnight, the storm reached the point of a cloudburst, flooding the streets and many cellars and basements. Plate-glass windows all over the city were broken, the loss reaching $3000.

Several persons were injured by falling signs and broken glass, among them Chief of Police Fitzgerald of Plattsmouth, Neb. He had sought refuge from the strom by standing close to a large plate-glass window, when a terrific gust of wind smashed the plate glass, a large piece of which struck him on the haed, cutting a gash several inches long and rendering him unconscious.

A panic was narrowly averted at one of the local theaters by the prompt action of the manager of the playhouse, who stepped to the front of the stage and assured the spectators that there was no danger. The lights were extinguished, and the emergency curtain lowered, and the occupants, mistaking this action as a sign of impending danger, started to rush for the exits.

TROOPS SENT TO CAUCASUS.

Situation at Batoum is More Alarming.

Czar Starts on Trip, but a Storm Delays It.

Mikado Sends to Komura to Get Well.

[BY THE ASSOCIATED PRESS—A.M.]

ST. PETERSBURG, Sept. 16.—[By Atlantic Cable.] Part of the Twenty-first Infantry Corps stationed at Kieff has been ordered to the Caucasus.

Dispatches from Baku say the troops are getting the situation well under control. The Tartars and Armenians have not been reconciled. Many additional stabbing affrays have occurred, but there has been little shooting in order to not attract the troops. The shops and offices remain closed.

Prince Louis Napoleon, the new governor-general of the Caucasus, reporting upon the situation, confirms the reports of the increasing ferment among the Persian tribesmen, owing to the massacre of Armenian villagers of Mirkenden, where the dead and wounded were in the proportion of four to one. Prince Louis reports that this happened under the eyes of the commissary of police, who took no action and did not even inform the military authorities of what had occurred. The commissary will be placed on trial.

ALARM AT BATOUM.

[BY THE ASSOCIATED PRESS—A.M.]

ODESSA, Sept. 16.—Information received here from Batoum describes the situation there as alarming. The authorities fear massacres similar to those which occurred at Baku, and have sent Batoum a brigade of infantry and artillery.

TWO MUTINEERS EXECUTED.

[BY THE ASSOCIATED PRESS—A.M.]

SEBASTOPOL, Sept. 16.—Two of the mutineers of Georgi Pobiedonosts were executed here today. The sentence of death on a third man was reduced to penal servitude for life.

CZAR'S STORMY WEATHER.

[BY THE ASSOCIATED PRESS—A.M.]

ST. PETERSBURG, Sept. 16.—Emperor Nicholas, accompanied by Minister of Marine Birelieff, left Peterhof today for a cruise in the Finnish archipelago, but it was ascertained this afternoon that the Emperor and Empress' intended trip to Finnish waters was postponed on account of stormy weather. The Minister of Marine at Cronstadt telegraphed to His Majesty this morning that the weather conditions were extremely unfavorable and advised a postponement of the trip.

RADICAL WRITERS DIFFERING.

[BY THE ASSOCIATED PRESS—A.M.]

ST. PETERSBURG, Sept. 16.—A meeting of a number of prominent radical writers of Russia to discuss their attitude toward the national assembly has developed a divergence of opinion. The majority indorsed the platform adopted by the League of Emancipation at Moscow last week, favoring participation in the elections to and sessions of the assembly, but solely with the idea of making it a constituent assembly and adopting a policy of obstruction toward all business except the reconstruction of the governmental system.

The minority favored an entire boycott of all the preliminary work for the establishment of the national assembly, and expressed dissatisfaction with its insufficiency.

RELIEF FOR JAP PRISONERS.

[BY THE ASSOCIATED PRESS—A.M.]

ST. PETERSBURG, Sept. 16.—The American Embassy has received from the Japanese Legation at Berlin $20,000, to be devoted to the relief of 1716 Japanese prisoners now at Medvid, province of Novgorod. Chargé d'Affaires Eddy will go to Medvid next week to make arrangements for the distribution of the money. The prisoners will be released as soon as the signed peace treaties are executed. With the Japanese are several Americans and Englishmen found on board the captured Japanese transports. These foreigners will probably be released before the Japanese.

WITTE'S GUARDS REWARDED.

[BY THE ASSOCIATED PRESS—A.M.]

NEW YORK, Sept. 16.—Through an order issued by Commissioner of Police Adoo it was learned yesterdan that Harry Foye and James Downing, a detective sergeant, who were assigned to guard Serguis Witte, Russian peace envoy, while in this city, received present of $50 each. The commissioner's order was that permission be granted for the detectives to receive the present, which is required under the police regulations before such gifts can be accepted.

THE MIKADO TO KOMURA.

LATTER MUST GET WELL.

[BY THE ASSOCIATED PRESS—A.M.]

NEW YORK, Sept. 16.—A cablegram containing a message from the Emperor of Japan was received today by Baron Komura, the Japanese peace envoy. It read:

"His Excellency, Baron Komura, New York.

"His Majesty, being much concerned at your illness, has commanded me to inform you that he wishes you to take good care of yourself and hopes for your speedy recovery.

[Signed]

"THE GRAND CHAMBERLAIN."

The peace plenipotentiary replied by cable to the Emperor, stating that his present condition was satisfactory.

The daily bulletin of one of the baron's physicians announced that all developments during the past twenty-four hours have been favorable to the patient.

JAPANESE SECURITIES RISING.

[BY THE ASSOCIATED PRESS—A.M.]

TOKIO, Sept. 15, 3 p.m.—According to reliable statistics, the foreign capital invested in Japanese industrial securities at the beginning of the war only amounted to $1,000,000. Recently foreigners have been eagerly buying Japanese government bonds, causing a most unexpected appreciation in their value. Even after the announcement of the unsatisfactory treaty of peace, these securities are now selling $1.50 higher than at the beginning of the month.

The Tokio Electric Light Company and the Hokkaido colliery and Railway Company have successfully negotiated a foreign loan of $1,500,000 and $5,000,000, respectively.

YOSHIKAWA IS OUT.

[BY THE ASSOCIATED PRESS—A.M.]

TOKIO, Sept. 16, 2 p.m.—The resignation of Viscount Yoshikawa as Minister of the Interior has been accepted. Baron Kiyoura, Minister of Agriculture and Commerce, succeeds Viscount Yoshikawa as Minister of the Interior, while retaining his original post.

TAFT IN YOKOHAMA.

[BY THE ASSOCIATED PRESS—A.M.]

YOKOHAMA, Sept. 16.—Secretary of War William H. Taft, has arrived here, and today received visits from distinguished citizens of Tokio, a large number of local Japanese and foreign residents. There was no formal reception, the visitors calling direct upon Mr. Taft at his hotel. Afterwards he was the guest of M. Otani, a prominent merchant of this city. All is quiet here.

DE MAARTENS CONGRATULATED.

[BY THE ASSOCIATED PRESS—A.M.]

PARIS, Sept. 16.—Prof. De Maartens today attended the session of the Academy of Political Sciences, where he was the center of attraction and congratulation upon the results of the Portsmouth conference. M. Leon-Caen, the president of the academy, addressing the Russian professor in behalf of the academy, expressed its felicitations on his participation in the great work accomplished on the other side of the Atlantic. Many academicians were present to greet Prof. De Maartens, and personally congratulated him upon his work.

TOROGONI RESURRECTED.

[BY THE ASSOCIATED PRESS—A.M.]

PORTLAND (Or.) Sept. 16.—A Victoria, B. C., special to the Evening Telegram states that the Empress liner reaching Victoria from Japan, October 3, is expected to have as a passenger from Yokohama, Prof. Alexieff Torogoni, at one time among the most distinguished savants of Eastern Europe, a doctor in the University of Moscow and a lecturer on international and constitutional law, with a continental reputation. Prof. Torogoni has been dead to the world for the past quarter of a century, and his resurrection, due to the Japanese occupation of Sakhalin, is one of the dramatic minor features of the war.

Prof. Torogoni, upon his arrival in Japan after the Japanese occupation of Sakhalin, had prepared for the press a detailed account of the horrors of exiledom. This was suppressed by Japanese authorities for political reasons, Dr. Torogoni at the same time being requested to leave Japan at the earliest possible date. Dr. Torogoni tells a most remarkable story of barbarous cruelties endured during his quarter of a century's imprisonment in various parts of Siberia.

ANTI-RUSSIAN PROTEST.

[BY THE ASSOCIATED PRESS—A.M.]

NEW YORK, Sept. 16.—Delegates representing fifty-three anti-Russian societies met here last night on the East Side to protest against what they termed the friendly attitude of the United States toward the Russian government. After a spirited discussion, it was decided to have a monster protest parade of the Russian Jews next Monday, calling attention to the sufferings of their people. All the Polish societies are to march, and the labor organizations of the East Side will be asked to join the parade.

FATALITIES NOW REACH ELEVEN.

AVON (Conn.) Sept. 16.—With the death of Miss Dorothea Legeyt, this afternoon, the number of fatalities following the explosion and fire in the factory of the Climax Fuse Company has reached eleven. Today the ruins of the main building cooled sufficiently to allow workmen to go into the basement, where they found parts of charred bodies. Identification was made possible, however, in all but two instances by some metal article, such as watches, pins and buttons. The two bodies not identified are thought to be those of Mollie McCarthy and Robert McCarthy. No statement of the loss incurred by the destruction of its plant has been made by the company.

BRANCH OUT UNDERGROUND.

New York Requires New Rapid Transit Lines.

Nineteen Routes Laid Out by the Commission.

Marvelous Work Undertaken by American Metropolis.

[BY DIRECT WIRE TO THE TIMES.]

NEW YORK, Sept. 16.—[Exclusive Dispatch.] Within the next five years, unless something shall intervene to alter existing conditions and plans, certain sections of New York will suffer greater congestion and overcrowding of its transportation lines than ever before in the history of the city. That is the generally expressed opinion of those familiar with transportation problems. Today a large area of the eastern part of the Bronx is inadequately provided with rapid transit facilities, and none of the improvements contemplated by the Rapid Transit Commission promises any relief there before the year 1909 at the earliest. Meanwhile every east side line from the Battery to the northerly city limits is increasing its burden daily. There are other sections where the congestion is, or soon will be, as great as in the Bronx.

Nineteen rapid transit routes, most of them subways and including three tunnels under the East River, have been laid out by the Rapid Transit Commission and approved by the Board of Estimate. For five months canvassers have been obtaining consents of property owners along these routes, but they have failed in procuring a majority of consents on most of the routes, and it will be necessary to go to the Appellate Division of the Supreme Court for the appointment of a commission and proceed as is common in such cases.

September 20 bids will be received by the Rapid Transit Commission for "wash borings" for all these subways and tunnels, but the commission does not expect that contracts for the building of any of these subways will be let before next spring, or at least, until after adjournment of the Legislature. After the contracts are made, in the peculiar conditions which are expected, it is estimated that at least four years will be required for the completion of any continuous route that will afford considerable relief for the city's constantly increasing crowds.

Of the score or more underground thoroughfares which have been talked about since the Interborough subway was finished, the McAdoo tunnel route, which is to connect Manhattan with New Jersey, is the only one from which the people of New York and vicinity may expect to derive material benefit much before the year 1910. That system, with its twin tunnels under the Hudson between Morton street and Hoboken and a subway extension under Sixth avenue from Tenth to Thirty-third street and a crosstown subway through Ninth street from Sixth avenue to Fourth avenue, will be in operation inside of two years, if present plans of the company are carried out.

Not only have the two steel tubes under the river been completed for some time, but the tunnel has been extended eighteen hundred feet under the streets and buildings on this side of the river. So well has the work been done that thousands of persons passing over the pavements and even those living in the buildings directly over these tunnels have not been aware that the work was progressing many feet below the surface.

Engineers from all parts of the country have watched the work with interest because of its demonstration of possibilities in the use of the compressed air shield in tunneling. Not only was this method employed with great success under the Hudson River, but it is being used in the tunnel under Sixth avenue. Recently at Morton and Greenwich streets the sharpest curve ever made in shield tunnelling was bored. It has been widely commented upon by engineers. It is of 150 feet radius. One interesting incident of the work is that a family living in a house directly over the curve never knew that so important a piece of engineering work was being done beneath their cellar.

This, however, is only a part of the important work that is being done by the McAdoo companies. Two other tunnels of similar character are being constructed under the Hudson between Jersey City and Cortlandt street. Work in one of the tubes is now well under way on the Jersey City side. These south tunnels will have an entrance into the Pennsylvania station in Jersey City, and will form an almost direct connection between that system and the New Jersey trolley lines and Brooklyn.

On the Manhattan side a terminal building is soon to be constructed which will be twenty stories in height and occupy two blocks in the west side of Church street, between Cortlandt and Fulton. Its cost will be about $6,000,000. The tunnel will have a loop in that building and an underground passage will extend from the building to Broadway, connecting there with the Interborough subway.

On the Jersey side equally extensive developments are in progress. When the system is complete the McAdoo tunnels will not only pass under the river at two points, but will connect all railroad and trolley terminals along the Jersey shore by underground railways. These subways will connect the terminals of the Pennsylvania, Erie, Lackawanna and all other roads which come in at Jersey City or Hoboken.

The companies now employ between 500 and 1000 men day and night, and plan to have electric cars running from Thirty-third street to Hoboken within two years, and the tunnels between Cortlandt street and Jersey City built in another two years. While no provision has as yet been made for actual connection between the McAdoo line and the Pennsylvania tunnel at Thirty-third street, many persons believe such an arrangement is contemplated, and that it will be announced long before either route is finished.

Complaint has been made to the Rapid Transit Commission about the delay in completing the Fort George section of the Interborough subway and the East River tunnel at the Battery which is to connect the Manhattan division of the subway with Brooklyn. It was said last week by members of the Rapid Transit Board that the Fort George section probably would be finished by January 1 next, but that another year would be required for finishing the Brooklyn contract.

FREIGHT HANDLERS' VOTE.

Voluntary action on the part of one of the local freight handlers' unions today showed conclusively that the rank and file of the members are opposed to a strike against the railroads. Local No. 1, comprising the freight handlers employed by the Chicago and Eastern Illinois, Grand Trunk, Erie and Santa Fé railroads, placed the proposition of accepting the conditions offered by the railroad to a vote, and the vote was almost unanimously in favor of acceptance. Six hundred and forty men voted. The men agreed to waive the demand for a 10 per cent. increase in wages, and to renew the old wages and conditions of employment.

AIRSHIP PROPELLOR.

David R. Proctor, a 70-year-old inventor, has constructed an airship propellor guaranteed to overcome adverse winds and to impart high speed to the aerial craft. The Proctor propellor is constructed on a principle akin to that of the Maxim dynamite air gun, throwing the air backward much as an oar blade or the foot of a swimmer throws back the water. Proctor claims his invention gives the mysterious "multiple power" sought for ages as the key to navigation of the air.

Brother of Notorious Therese Humbert Comes to America to Get Away from France.

[BY THE ASSOCIATED PRESS—P.M.]

NEW YORK, Sept. 16.—Romaine Daurignac, a brother of Therese Humbert, who is now serving a term in a French prison on swindling charges, arrived in New York tonight on the steamer La Touraine. As the brother of Madame Humbert was convicted of a swindle in connection with a life insurance company and served a term in prison, the immigration officers were compelled to hold the man, pending an investigation, and he is still on board the steamship.

At first, Daurignac was inclined to deny his relationship to Madame Humbert. He said: "I was led to come to this country for two reasons. In the first place, I wanted to get away from France, and then I have always been fond of travel. I have no fixed idea regarding my plans. Gentlemen, I traveled under my first two names not because of any fear, but because I wanted to avoid just such a scene as is here tonight."

SAN FRANCISCO, Sept. 16.—[Exclusive Dispatch.] William Hammond Hall, formerly State Engineer, has acquired extensive water rights on Cherry River and Lake Eleanor watersheds of the Sierra Nevadas in Tuolumne county, as well as Stanislaus River rights.

Hall has given out that these rights are acquired in the interest of the Spring Valley Water Company, which supplies San Francisco with water, but those who have watched his operations say the Standard Oil Company is back of him and that the Standard has secured this great body of water in order to utilize it in the production of electric power.

With this power the Standard would be able to dominate a large part of California in electric lighting; and with the gas and electric light plants it has already secured, it would have almost a monopoly of the lighting situation in California cities.

[BY DIRECT WIRE TO THE TIMES.]

SAN FRANCISCO, Sept. 16.—[Exclusive Dispatch.] Senator Thomas C. Platt of New York, feeble and ill, arrived in this city this morning. He was supported to the elevator of the Palace Hotel and found great physical difficulty in getting to his room. Such is his condition that the burden of registering for himself and party was undertaken by his wife.

Platt cordially greeted Gen. B. Stuart [illegible] and said to him: "Well, I am glad to see you. I am a pretty sick man, but expect to regain my health [illegible]."

"[illegible]," said the General, "California is the place to regain one's health."

Mrs. Platt, who looks after the Senator as if he were a child, then took the Senator's arm; and, excusing herself to the people about her, went to the elevator. She is a young and handsome woman and her attention was divided between the Senator and a lap dog which she carried under her arm.

When the party arrived, women surrounded the Senator, supported on the arm of his wife, and protected him from the approaches of those who had gathered to give him welcome.

Platt's voice was low when he addressed any members of his party and his feet shuffled as he walked to the elevator. He hopes to regain his health before returning East and may stay here for some days.

Platt didn't leave his room today. He says he is attempting to evade process servers employed by Miss Mae Wood.

OLD OFFICERS REELECTED.

AMERICAN MISSIONARY BOARD.

[BY THE ASSOCIATED PRESS—A.M.]

SEATTLE (Wash.) Sept. 16.—The American Board of Commissioners for Foreign Missions today reëlected all its officers of the past year for the coming term. Five changes were made in the personnel of the Prudential Committee, Rev. J. F. Van Horn being chosen to fill out the unexpired term of a member who died during the last year, and the following being elected to serve until 1908: Rev. [illegible] C. Moore, Samuel C. Darling, Frederick Fosdick and Arthur Well-[illegible].

The meeting of the board is now practically over.

Late last night, delegates were in favor of either North Adams, Mass., or Springfield, Mass., for the next meeting place, these towns being in close proximity to Williamstown, where, in 1806, the famous "haystack meeting" was held, at which was planted the seed from which sprung the present board.

[illegible] Henry Hopkins, vice-president of the board, has been persuaded to stand for reëlection, now that the next meeting place will be there, as he is professor in Williams College, at Williamstown.

The centennial of the "haystack meeting" will be observed next year. Following is the complete list of officers elected by the Board of Commissioners for Foreign Missions at today's session: President, Samuel B. Capen; vice-president, Henry Hopkins; Prudential Committee, term expiring 1907, [illegible] Edward C. Moore, Samuel C. Darling, Frederick Fosdick, Arthur H. Wellman; corresponding secretaries, [illegible] Smith, James L. Barton, Cornelius H. Patton; recording secretary, [illegible] A. Stimson; assistant recording secretary, Edward T. Packard; editorial secretary, E. E. Strong; treasurer, [illegible] H. Wiggin; auditors, Edward H. [illegible], Henry E. Cobb, William B. [illegible].

MEET NEXT AT TWO PLACES.

[BY THE ASSOCIATED PRESS—P.M.]

SEATTLE, Sept. 16.—The next meeting of the American Board of Commissioners for Foreign Missions of the Congregational Church will be held jointly at North Adams and Williamstown, Mass., the choice being made by a unanimous vote today. The centenary of the "Haystack meeting," held at Williamstown in 1806, will be celebrated next year, and for this reason the board decided to alternate the meetings between the two points in order to be present at the centenary.

DRIED FRUIT UP IN SMOKE.

FRESNO PACKING-HOUSE BURNS.

[BY THE ASSOCIATED PRESS—P.M.]

FRESNO, Sept. 16.—Fire destroyed a large packing-house on the Southern Pacific Railroad reservation this morning, causing a loss of $100,000. The building and its contents, mostly dried fruit, were insured for about $75,000.

The fire was discovered breaking out under the roof by F. E. Ward, night watchman. The heroic efforts of the Fresno Fire Department, combined with the fact that one end of the house was of brick, saved the Roeding packing-house, next north. Two cars on the Southern Pacific tracks were burned. Others were switched to safety.

It is believed that the fire was caused by the crossing of electric wires. The building and the dried fruit were the property of the Droge Packing Company.

JUDGMENT FOR STOCKHOLDERS.

NOTED ARIZONA COPPER SUIT.

[BY THE ASSOCIATED PRESS—P.M.]

TUCSON, (Ariz.) Sept. 16.—In the case of Louis Zeckendorf of New York vs. Albert Steinfeld of Tucson and the Silver Bell Copper Company, involving the disposition of the purchase price of the famous Imperial Copper Company's mines, judgment was today rendered in favor of Zeckendorf and the other stockholders.

This will result in Steinfeld repaying to the company approximately $300,000 which Zeckendorf claims was misappropriated by Steinfeld. Dr. H. W. Fenner is named as receiver.

Attorney Meserve of Los Angeles was leading counsel for Zeckendorf. The case excited intense interest here for twelve months past.

WILDS YIELD WITNESS.

JOSEPH COSGROVE FOUND.

[BY DIRECT WIRE TO THE TIMES.]

GRANT'S PASS (Or.) Sept. 16.—[Exclusive Dispatch.] Word has been received here from Kerby, in Southern Josephine county, that Joseph Cosgrove, the young man wanted as a witness in the land-fraud trials and who disappeared from Takilma smelter, at Waldo, nearly two weeks ago, has been found. Cosgrove crawled into the camp of his uncle and father near Kerby in a horrible condition. He had been lost thirteen days in the wilds of Southern Josephine and had had nothing to eat.

He fell from a cliff and was badly injured over a week ago and since then had crawled about the woods, with a sprained ankle, a bruised arm and badly cut face and head. He was almost starved. Cosgrove is too weak to talk except in whispers and can tell but little of his awful experience.

Two weeks ago Deputy United States Marshal Clark served a subpoena on Cosgrove but the young man threw the papers down angrily and told the officers he would serve when he "got good and ready."

FIRE WIPES OUT TOWN.

STRAWBERRY DISTRICT'S LOSS.

[BY THE ASSOCIATED PRESS—A.M.]

SACRAMENTO, Sept. 16.—The business section of the little town of Florin, a few miles southeast of this city, and the center of the strawberry district in Sacramento Valley, was practically wiped out by fire last night. More than half the business structures were burned. It is believed the loss will exceed $20,000, with little or no insurance.

The fire started in the basket factory conducted by E. Oppenheim and spread rapidly to other buildings, among them the general merchandise store of Oppenheim, which was burned to the ground. Oppenheim's hotel and public hall and his barn were soon in flames, which were communicated to the saloon and blacksmith shop of George Jones. A barn belonging to Milton Casey, which was filled with hay, was also destroyed.

SCHWAB AND GOLDFIELD.

SEEKS CONTROL OF BIG MINES.

[BY DIRECT WIRE TO THE TIMES.]

SAN FRANCISCO, Sept. 16.—[Exclusive Dispatch.] Report comes from Goldfield that a syndicate of capitalists headed by Charles M. Schwab has undertaken to secure control of the more important mines of the Goldfield district and merge them into one huge corporation. Multi-millionaires are credited at Goldfield with the intention of taking the pick of the district's developed properties. Schwab and his associates now control several of the richer mines in Tonopah, twenty-five miles north of Goldfield, on the same stretch of desert.

Among the properties that are to be merged are the Combination, the Jumbo, the Florence, the January and the Atlanta mines. These have all produced a heavy tonnage of high-grade shipping ores. The group forms the core of the district.

Possession of these properties in one ownership would illustrate the modern tendency to concentrate great interests in a new field.

THE VALUE OF CHARCOAL.

Few People Know How Useful it is in Preserving Health and Beauty.

Nearly everybody knows that charcoal is the safest and most efficient disinfectant and purifier in nature, but few realize its value when taken into the human system for the same cleansing purpose.

Charcoal is a remedy that the more you take of it the better; it is not a drug at all, but simply absorbs the gases and impurities always present in the stomach and intestines and carries them out of the system.

Charcoal sweetens the breath after smoking, drinking or after eating onions and other odorous vegetables.

Charcoal effectually clears and improves the complexion, it whitens the teeth and further acts as a natural and eminently safe cathartic.

It absorbs the injurious gases which collect in the stomach and bowels; it disinfects the mouth and throat from the poison of catarrh.

All druggists sell charcoal in one form or another, but probably the best charcoal and the most for the money is in Stuart's Charcoal Lozenges; they are composed of the finest powdered Willow charcoal and other harmless antiseptics in tablet form or rather in the form of large, pleasant tasting lozenges, the charcoal being mixed with honey.

The daily use of these lozenges will soon tell in a much improved condition of the general health, better complexion, sweeter breath and purer blood, and the beauty of it is, that no possible harm can result from their continued use, but on the contrary, great benefit.

A Buffalo physician in speaking of the benefits of charcoal says: "I advise Stuart's Charcoal Lozenges to all patients suffering from gas in stomach and bowels, and to clear the complexion and purify the breath, mouth and throat; I also believe the liver is greatly benefited by the daily use of them; they cost but twenty-five cents a box at drug stores, and although in some sense a patent preparation, yet I believe I get more and better charcoal in Stuart's Charcoal Lozenges than in any of the ordinary charcoal tablets."

that agricultural machinery and implement repair machinery may be imported free of duty, but says that the clause in the bill seems ambiguous, and reads as follows:

"Repair pieces, by which are to be understood such as form an integral of the machine for which they are intended, shall enjoy the benefits accorded by this law only when they are imported with the machines."

It would seem that repair pieces not shipped with the machines of which they are an integral part, will be subject to an advalorem duty of 25 per cent.

The Minister has been instructed to be unceasing in his efforts to bring about a satisfactory adjustment of the matter. From some statements made to the department by American exporters, it is surmised that the purpose of this new Argentine legislation may be to stop a practice which is said to have grown up of evading larger tariff duties on machines exported to the Argentine Republic by shipping in a large number of parts at a lower rate of duty and assembling these parts into complete machines after their admission into the country.

SANTO DOMINGO CLAIMS.

HOLLANDER'S INVESTIGATION.

[BY DIRECT WIRE TO THE TIMES.]

WASHINGTON, Sept. 16.—Prof. J. F. Hollander has arrived in Washington from Santo Domingo. The Professor has collected a vast amount of data by direction of the President respecting the character of foreign interests in Santo Domingo, and has been particularly diligent in looking into the merits of certain claims some American citizens preferred against the Dominican republic, which, it is alleged, have been very much inflated.

This data is regarded as sufficient for the guidance of the United States Senate when it takes up the pending Dominican treaty at its next session.

GEN. MACARTHUR'S RISE.

WILL BE CHIEF OF STAFF.

[BY THE ASSOCIATED PRESS—P.M.]

WASHINGTON, Sept. 16.—Maj.-Gen. Arthur MacArthur, who has been the senior United States military attaché with the Japanese army, will not return immediately to this country, but he has received orders to travel to India, for the purpose of inspecting the British military forces in that country. In view of the fact that Gen. MacArthur is expected to succeed Gen. Corbin next year as chief of staff, it is the desire of the President that he shall receive every opportunity to observe modern military methods and campaigns.

CRUISER CHARLESTON.

WILL COME TO PACIFIC.

[BY THE ASSOCIATED PRESS—P.M.]

WASHINGTON, Sept. 16.—The Navy Department today preliminarily accepted the protected cruiser Charleston from the Newport News Shipbuilding Company. The Charleston will soon go into commission, and be sent to the Pacific, where she will be the flagship of Admiral Goodrich. The Charleston is a newly-protected cruiser, with side armor, giving her some of the qualities of an armored cruiser, and she has a speed of twenty-two knots.

SEEK CONTROL OF THE BANK.

May be Change in Well-known Local Institution.

San Francisco Capitalists are After the Stock.

Heavy Loans to Cashier Off are Called in.

There is a likelihood of a change in the control of the State Bank and Trust Company, one of the old banking institutions of the city, of which H. J. Woollacott is president.

San Francisco parties with large capital are negotiating for the stock. President Wollacott said last evening that they were offering as high as 115 per share, and as the market price is about 102 they may secure a majority holding by bidding this high figure. President Woolacott's personal holding of the stock of the institution is only $16,000, but he says his friends control $100,000 additional stock. The two combined do not constitute a majority.

There is also some dissatisfaction among the local stockholders with the management of the bank—a state of things which will encourage the proposed change of control. Certain stockholders are displeased because heavy loans were made to the cashier of the bank, J. W. A. Off. State Bank Examiner Eldridge, it seems, on discovering that these loans had been made to the cashier, directed that they be called in, informing the bank directors that such outstanding loans were in violation of a State law. President Woollacott said last evening that this action of the Bank Examiner was in conformity with notifications that he gave to banks throughout the State. He said that these loans to Cashier Off aggregated about $75,000.

WOOLLACOTT TALKS.

Discussing the affairs of the State Bank and Trust Company, at the Jonathan Club last night, President Woollacott said to a Times representative:

"I want to go on record, as president of the institution, as declaring that the bank's affairs are in splendid shape, and that there has been no improper conduct of any sort on the part of Cashier Off. These statements I am willing to swear to on a witness stand.

"Maj. Off at the present time does not owe the State Bank and Trust Company more than $35,000, and the bank is amply secured against that loan to him by $50,000 worth of Huntington Beach stock, which he put up as collateral.

"Further than that, his fine home on South Figueroa street [No. 2625] now stands in his own name again, and it is worth probably $30,000. Also, Mrs Off in her own right is worth $60,000, as the Off's ranch at Capistrano, valued at that figure, is in her name. You see, if the State Bank and Trust Company needed any more security against Maj. Off's present indebtedness, it would be easily and promptly forthcoming.

PUT UP HIS HOME.

"The State Bank and Trust Company had been lending money to its cashier for about three years, and at one time his total indebtedness to the bank was about $75,000. I want it distinctly understood, however, and I wish you would emphasize my statement, that no loan was ever made to Maj. Off without the sanction of the Financial Committee (which meets at the bank every morning at 9 o'clock,) and the subsequent approval of the board of directors at the regular monthly meetings of that body.

"Sir? Well, I don't know that I could say that Cashier Off speculated with the money the bank lent him. He negotiated the loans in the regular and proper manner, and the money became his to do with as he saw fit.

"Yes, sir, it is perfectly true that to secure the State Bank and Trust Company for one of these loans he transferred to the bank the title to his Figueroa-street home. He later paid back the borrowed money, and the title was restored to him. It now stands in his name. No, Mrs. Off did not at any time become his surety with the bank. Her $60,000 ranch at Capistrano never has been held as collateral against the State Bank and Trust Company's loans to her husband.

BANK EXAMINER INTERFERES.

"Some time ago a State Bank Examiner, making his customary visit of inspection, called to the directors' attention the State law which forbids banks to lend money to their officers, and he requested that the bank call in the Off loans.

"Since that time Maj. Off has repaid to the State Bank and Trust Co. all of his indebtedness except about $35,000, and that balance will be cleared up by him within the next ninety days. It is true that if the bank had required it he could have paid off all his loans within sixty days of the Bank Examiner's request; but he could have done so only by sacrificing some of his property. He was paying his interest at 6 per cent. regularly and promptly, and never once had defaulted in it. The bank saw no reason why its cashier should be made to suffer heavy financial loss, and so has allowed him a reasonable time within which to release his obligations."

STATEMENT OF VICE-PRESIDENT.

R. H. Howell, vice-president of the State Bank and Trust Company, is firmly convinced that Mr. Off has not been guilty of any wrongdoing, but he frankly admits that the loan transactions were peculiar in the eyes of the bank examiner and unfortunate for the bank and Mr. Off.

"I understand that the total indebtedness of Mr. Off so far as the bank is concerned, amounts to about $40,000, and not $90,000, as stated," said Mr. Howell when interviewed by a Times representative at his residence, No. 1122 West Seventh street, last night.

"And I want to say here and emphatically, too, that Mr. Off has not been guilty of anything wrong," continued Mr. Howell.

"He has ample collateral with the bank to secure his loans and he is rapidly paying off his indebtedness.

"I am sorry this thing has come to the attention of the public, but since it has, we have nothing to conceal, and I will gladly tell you everything I know in connection with the affair," resumed the vice-president.

"Several months ago State Bank Examiner Eldridge checked up our business and at that time he recommended that Mr. Off's indebtedness should be canceled as speedily as possible, as we might be called upon to face a charge of infringing upon the State banking laws which restrict loans to directors.

"We had always trusted Mr. Off implicitly and we were perfectly satisfied with the loans, but in deference to the suggestion of the bank examiner we asked Mr. Off to take up some of his notes. He hypothecated his Figueroa street home for something like $15,000, which was turned over to us, and in addition he furnished us with other securities including some Huntington Beach stock.

"Since that time Mr. Off has further reduced his indebtedness until now as I said before, he owes the bank only about $40,000.

"Mr. Woollacott can give you the exact figures as he has charge of the loans and knows to a cent Mr. Off's indebtedness."

"Mr. Howell, how do you account for Mr. Off's losses?" asked the reporter.

"I do not pretend to account for them for that is his private business," answered the banker. "But I know he lost some money in oil ventures and real estate. I believe he was compelled to lose his equity in a number of lots at the beach and then he may have lost some money in mines.

"He borrowed the bank's money in sums of $2000 or $3000 at various times covering a period of several years, but always with the full consent of the directors."

CANADA MAY LEAD WORLD.

French Authority on Metallurgy Predicts Great Things for Dominion Within a Decade.

[BY DIRECT WIRE TO THE TIMES.]

OTTAWA (Ont.) Sept. 16.—[Exclusive Dispatch.] Dr. P. G. T. Heroult, the celebrated French authority on metallurgy, now in Ottawa, predicts that Canada will lead the world in the production of iron and steel within the next decade.

Dr. Heroult owns the immense works at Lapraz, France, where aluminum and steel are produced by electricity. He says the same system can be installed at Sault Ste. Marie, when pig iron can be produced at $4 a ton. If this proves true, it will open immense iron tracts that cannot now be worked. It will also mean a saving of $60,000,000 now sent abroad annually for iron and steel.

The experimental plant now operating at the Soo is to be replaced by a great establishment.

If Dr. Heroult's predictions are verified, no country can compete with Canada, as it has mines and unlimited cheap power.

UNIONISTS DRAW THE COLOR LINE.

[BY THE ASSOCIATED PRESS—P.M.]

SPRINGFIELD (Ill.) Sept. 16—The American Brotherhood of Cement Workers decided today that hereafter negro cement workers shall form separate unions.

A resolution was unanimously adopted excluding from membership Japanese, Koreans and all other Oriental laborers.

The following officers were elected: President and organizer, Hugh Falvey, Chicago; second vice-presidents, R. H. Wunderlich, San Francisco; J. H. Watson, San Jose, Cal.; secretary and treasurer, T. K. Ryan, San Francisco.

UNIONS ALLEGE DESERTIONS.

[BY THE ASSOCIATED PRESS—P.M.]

CHICAGO, Sept. 16.—Desertions from the ranks of the Chicago Typothetae in its fight against the establishment of the eight-hour day in book and job offices were reported today by union officials, who declared that several members of the master printers organization have signed the union agreement providing for a shorter work day January 1, 1906.

A report compiled by strike leaders tonight shows that 112 printing houses have agreed to grant the union demands. Included in this list, it is declared, are firms that have heretofore employed non-union printers exclusively. The signatures of twelve additional concerns were secured to the union agreement today and no more srikes were called.

It is estimated by union officials that the eight-hour day has already been established for 1400 union printers in book and job offices throughout the city. Firms employing 700 printers are still to be heard from.

In the face of these claims by the union officials, the members of the Chicago Typothetae declare that the fight has just begun and that the smaller printers who have signed the union agreement will eventually be governed by the principles which prevail in the Typothetae.

NORTHERN PACIFIC PLANS JOINT LINE.

[BY THE ASSOCIATED PRESS—A.M.]

PORTLAND, Sept. 16.—Assistant General-Passenger Agent A. D. Charlton of the Northern Pacific Railroad, acting under telegraphic instructions from President Howard Elliott, today made public a formal announcement that the Northern Pacific Railroad and the Great Northern Railroad will jointly build a road from Kennewick, Wash., to Vancouver, Wash., along the north bank of the Columbia River. Bridges will be built across the Columbia and Willamette rivers in order to secure an entrance to Portland.

President Elliott's announcement as given out by Charlton follows: "The Great Northern and Northern Pacific companies have organized and own jointly the Portland and Seattle Railway Company. That company will build a railroad as rapidly as men and material will permit from Kennewick, opposite Pasco, along the north bank of the Columbia River to Vancouver, Wash., bridge the Columbia and Willamette Rivers, forming a connection with the present line of the Northern Pacific north of Portland. When the railroad bridges are furnished, they will give the Great Northern and Northern Pacific a first-class entrance to Portland and a direct line to and from the east."

Supplementing President Elliott's announcement, Chorlton said it is estimated that about two years will be required to put the road in operation.

Articles of incorporation of the Portland and Seattle Railway Company were filed at Olympia, Wash., yesterday the nominal incorporators being Portland men. The objects of the company are to build a road from Spokane, Wash., to Seattle and from Spokane to Portland with any necessary branches.

The distance from Kennewick to Portland is a little more than two hundred miles, and unofficial estimates place the cost at approximately $12,500,000.

BIG PROFIT ON SHARES.

SYNDICATE'S SALE TO MORGAN.

[BY THE ASSOCIATED PRESS—A.M.]

NEW YORK, Sept. 16.—Members of the H. B. Hollins syndicate made a profit of about $1,400,000 by the sale of their contracts for subscription rights to the stock of the Cincinnati, Hamilton and Dayton road to J. P. Morgan & Company, according to the Herald. They disposed of 45,000 shares at 160, making a profit of $25 a share.

No statement regarding the acquisition of the railroad property was given out yesterday by Morgan & Company. Interests identified with the Cincinnati, Hamilton and Dayton Railroad pointed out that while the firm nominally had taken over a majority interest, the voting trustees still hold control of the property in that they had 55,000 shares tied up in the trust agreement in the hands of the United States Mortgage & Trust Company. Voting trustees who were seen acknowledged that the situation was unchanged, and that officially they knew nothing of the Hollins sale.

Members of Hollins & Company, on the other hand, said that the next Cincinnati, Hamilton and Dayton meeting of the directors of the road would decide where the control had gone. This question, he said, did not rest with the voting trustees.

LITTLE KANAWHA SALE.

PRICE REPORTED AS $10,000,000.

[BY THE ASSOCIATED PRESS—P.M.]

PITTSBURGH, Sept. 16.—Bishop Ramsey, Jr., president of the Wabash Railroad, today announced that the sale of the Little Kanawha properties was completed with the exception of a few minor details which would be disposed of immediately. The announcement was made after most of the day had been spent in conference with J. W. Patterson, Sr., and J. L. Blair.

The purchasers are interested, representing the Pittsburgh and Lake Erie Railroad, and it is said the Pennsylvania and Baltimore and Ohio railroads are also interested in the sale.

"Without a doubt a line now will be built," said Ramsey, "which will give Pittsburgh what it has been in great need of—a railroad to the South."

The Little Kanawha properties are extensive and include coal lands from west of Parkersburg, W. Va., into Greene county, Pennsylvania. The price paid by the Vanderbilt interests is said to be $10,000,000. The property was first offered to George Gould, who held a minority interest in the syndicate, but it is said he refused to pay the price demanded.

VIRGINIA AND TRUCKEE.

CONTRACTS FOR EXTENSION.

[BY THE ASSOCIATED PRESS—A.M.]

RENO (Nev.) Sept. 16.—The Virginia and Truckee Railroad at Carson has closed up a contract for the construction of the first eighteen miles of its new road, headed, it is thought, for Sacramento and tidewater. Actual construction work will begin, it is said, next Monday morning.

The right of way has been surveyed, the surveys completed and everything is now ready for the graders. The new road will open up a rich agricultural country, as well as tap one of the richest mineral regions in Nevada and California. Other contracts will be let as fast as possible.

TO IMPRESS CONGRESS.

OBJECT OF RATE CONVENTION.

[BY THE ASSOCIATED PRESS—P.M.]

MILWAUKEE, Sept. 16.—E. P. Bacon of this city, chairman of the Executive Committee of the Interstate Commerce Law Commission, today issued a formal call for a convention to be held in Chicago October 26, at the Auditorium Hotel.

The call states that the object of the convention is to impress upon Congress the extent and persistence of the demand of the people of all parts of the country for legislation outlined in the President's last annual message to Congress, in which he advocated that power be given the Interstate Commerce Commission for the regulation of railroad rates.

Lieut.-Col. A. D. Schenck, United States Artillery Corps, commandant at Fort Venson, Or., died yesterday morning, after a brief illness.

California has a "new Richmond in the field" to contest honors to be showered upon the genius who shall solve the problem of aerial navigation, in the person of W. E. Damon, a well-known mechanic and inventor, of a suburb of Los Angeles, and it is believed he has completely solved the problem of aerial navigation.

Santos-Dumont had "a good idea, Baldwin improved upon it and Roy A. Knabenshue demonstrated to the "Baldwin's California Arrow" would whiz through the heavens amid "zephyrs" in obedience to the human will.

But it remained for W. E. Damon to successfully solve the difficult problem, resulting in general utility commercial value and a realization of the most sanguine dreams of convenience in rapid transportation. The and flight of "Damon's Comet" will not be dependent on the conditions, direction and velocity of the uncertain the hour or season, but at the will and pleasure of its operator, may be put in motion as an automobile, or desired altitude, and wing its flight without limitations in time or distance of voyage.

The machinery of "Damon's Comet" is the essence of simplicity and philosophical application of practical knowledge. The carriage is not unlike the ordinary rowboat in shape; with powerful wings perfected for that can never become cumbersome, useless or unwieldy. Whether in perfect calm or raging storm, the "Comet" spond to its powerful wings under the direction of the human mind.

The engine and complete machinery will weigh, including four persons, about 1600 pounds.

Mr. Damon has incorporated the DAMON AIRSHIP COMPANY, with a capitalization of $200,000, shares of value of $1.00 each. For the purpose of securing funds for the construction of his first ship a small amount of stock is offered at fifty cents per share.

Application for stock should be sent to the office of the company, 212 Braly Building.

Side Talks by the Office Boy

I've heard so many people use the expression, "He got cold feet on the proposition," that I asked the old man what they meant by "cold feet." He says "cold feet is a punishment for those that stand around and wait for dead men's shoes." The fellow who sits around and waits for opportunity to call on him isn't in the same class with the wise guy who runs down the road to meet him. We're certainly giving everybody an opportunity to buy some shirts, ties, vests and things cheap; we're holding the sale down at our Sixth and Broadway store; we've got plenty of windows to display the goods there, so that you can select the article from the window and drop in the store and get your size. We're giving away some very expensive and handsome souvenirs with every purchase of $2.50 or over down there. Now don't put it off and get cold feet, but drop around at your very first opportunity; the goods won't last long at the prices we've marked them.

Diamond History

After the Boer War, when the mining of Diamonds was again actively taken up, it was found that a number of the older mines which had been temporarily deserted, were in bad condition. As it was becoming expensive to operate the mines, even before their shutdown, and as the lower workings were less productive of fine Diamonds, it was found, in many cases, that it would be unprofitable to again place the mines in working order. This further explains the advance which has taken place in the price of Diamonds, and with the production growing more limited year by year, further advances must be constantly reckoned upon.

We feel that every dollar spent on fine Diamonds, which are purchased "right," is placed where it will bring exceptional returns by increased value and through the pleasure and prestige which their wearing gives. Our Perfect Blue White Diamonds are really rare gems. The prices are as low as most careful buying, direct from the cutters in large consignments, will enable us to offer.

"the new million dollar story"

—By Crowquill

If your boy slides down a cellar door once a day he slides down cellar doors, and anything he can slide on, twenty times once. Yet you buy him a cheaply put together suit of loosely woven cloth made of twenty threads of cotton to one of wool and then wonder why he goes through it so quickly.

Next time buy him a "Hercules-Kantwearout" Shower-Proof Suit—will cost you no more than one "ordinary" suit but will last as long as two—will look better all the time and save you hours of mending.

A "Hercules" suit free if you find a thread of cotton in the fabric—neither sun, rain nor wear will fade the colors. Fabrics or linings will never shrink. Coat and pants will always keep their shape.

Coat lined with extra heavy double warped Italian cloth. Two sleeve linings instead of one—outside lining wears out, rip it off and you have a new lining ready for wear.

Pants full lined with cold shrunk Irish linen—makes them sanitary, stronger and more comfortable in cold weather. Seams double stitched with heavy silk thread—inside leg and seat seams covered with tape—cloth will wear down to paper thinness before a seam will give.

Look sharp for imitations—"Hercules" label on inside coat collar and on sleeve.

Made in double breasted two-piece Knee Pants suits for boys 6 to 16. Five Dollars everywhere.

Send us name of your clothes man and age of your boy and we will send you a "Hercules" free for your inspection.

CHOKED TO DEATH AND ROBBED.

POLICE UNCOVER ONE OF NEW YORK'S WORST CRIMES.

Body of Handsome Young Woman, With Her Garments Almost Torn to Shreds, Found in Clump of Bushes in the Bronx, Where She Fought Assailants Desperately.

[BY THE ASSOCIATED PRESS—P.M.]

NEW YORK, Sept. 16.—The finding today of the body of a handsome young woman, about 25 years of age, lying, bruised and battered, in a clump of briar bushes near Pelham road, in the Bronx, revealed one of the worst crimes with which the police have had to deal in many years.

An autopsy showed that the woman had been criminally assaulted and choked to death. There was every indication that she had fought her assailants desperately. Her garments were torn almost to shreds. Tonight the body rests in the Fordham morgue, while half a hundred detectives are endeavoring to establish the victim's identity, and to find some clew to her murderers.

The autopsy physicians were of the opinion that the woman had been dead about twelve hours. Evidence points to the fact that at least two men were implicated in the crime. That the woman was robbed is not doubted, for nothing of value was left on her person, while her fingers showed that rings which she must have worn were torn from them.

The girl was 5 feet, 2 inches in height, of fair complexion, with brown hair and blue eyes.

An empty dress-suit case was found near the scene of the crime, but neither on this nor any article of clothing was there the slightest means of identification.

SAM SWEARINGEN IS SWEATING.

[BY THE ASSOCIATED PRESS—A.M.]

STOCKTON, Sept. 16.—Sam Swearingen, alias Harry Love, who confessed to the murder of Mrs. Phoebe Williams and Chester Maker, her grandson, near Lancha Plana, Amador county, some months ago, implicating Clarence Murphy, who is also in jail, has pleaded guilty to the crime, and evidence will be taken Monday to fix the degree. The evidence against Murphy is confined to Love's statements.

Swearingen will also be charged with the murder of James E. Nighswonger, the 19-year-old son of Hamilton Nighswonger of Lodi. November 17, last, Nighswonger was found murdered in a field southwest of Stockton. He had been stabbed in the throat, and about his neck was a handkerchief, pulled tight, with the initials "S. S." thereon. The mark was put on at Alcatraz by a laundryman, who identified it and the handkerchief was that of Swearingen, who disappeared on the 14th, two days before the murder.

In confessing the Lancha Plana murders, Swearingen said he had been in Stockton two days following his desertion of the laundryman and had "butted around with a kid." Sheriff Sibley has other evidence against Swearingen.

SHOOTS HUSBAND, KILLS SELF.

TRAGEDY IN APARTMENT HOUSE.

[BY THE ASSOCIATED PRESS—A.M.]

OAKLAND, Sept. 16.—Jealous of her husband, whom she believed to be unfaithful to her, Mrs. Anna C. Dauth, shot her husband, Arthur K. Dauth, a furniture salesman, in the head while he was asleep in bed this morning. She lacerated his throat with a razor and then cut her own throat and died. The tragedy took place in the Colonial apartment house, at the corner of Eighth and Castro streets.

Dauth was not seriously injured, although the bullet passed from the left temple through the head and came out of the forehead, falling on the pillowslip beneath his head. Both Dauth and his wife were taken to the receiving hospital but before they reached their destination, the woman was dead. After Dauth's wounds had been dressed, the injured man was taken to the police station, where he will await development by the officers. In her frenzy, Mrs. Dauth nearly severed her head from her body with the razor which she had also used upon her husband. Both jugular veins were severed.

Mrs. Dauth had several times intimated that when she died she would make her husband go with her. Dauth, accordingly, had hidden his revolver.

Dauth declares his innocence of the charge of unfaithfulness on the part of himself.

HUSBAND'S TESTIMONY TWISTED.

STARTLING CONTRADICTIONS.

[BY THE ASSOCIATED PRESS—P.M.]

GRANDON (Or.) Sept. 16.—The Coroner's investigation today into the death of Mrs. Frances Walsh, who was killed by a pistol shot August 22, last, was marked by startling contradictions in the testimony given by the husband of the dead woman and that of Miss Mildred Ward, a visitor at Walsh's home at the time of the shooting. Miss Ward declared that, after Mrs. Walsh had forcibly entered the bedroom where her husband had retired, a conversation took place in which the husband insisted his wife occupy a separate room.

Walsh, in his testimony, adhered to his previous story, that he did not hear his wife break in the door and that his first knowledge of her presence was when she fell across his bed, crying that she had been shot.

Conflicting statements of the two most important witnesses in the investigation created a sensation in the courtroom. Miss Ward, during a rigid cross-examination, adhered to all the facts in her testimony without deviation.

INSURANCE MAN MURDERED.

ROBBERY WAS THE MOTIVE.

[BY THE ASSOCIATED PRESS—A.M.]

DES MOINES (Iowa) Sept. 16.—George R. Griswold, State manager of the Mutual Life Insurance Association of Worcester ,Mass., was murdered and his body thrown into Raccon River. Robbery was the object, the man's pockets having been turned inside out and cut. Every article of value but a plain gold band ring had been removed. The identification was made by means of letters and papers in his pockets.

Griswold has been missing since Tuesday, when he left for Omaha. The murder probably was committed near the Great Western depot, a blunt instrument being used to knock him senseless.

The dead man was a former resident of Omaha, coming here to take charge of the State Mutual Life, two or three years ago. He leaves a widow and three children.

There is no clew to the murderer.

FOUND DEAD, AS NOTIFIED.

CIRCUMSTANCES PECULIAR.

[BY THE ASSOCIATED PRESS—P.M.]

NEW YORK, Sept. 16.—A telephone message from a woman in Baltimore today notified Roches Hotel, Thirty-eighth street, that J. S. Green, a Baltimore boy, eighteen years old, was probably dead in his room. The woman said she was the sister of Green and asked that the management hurry to her brother's room to save his life, if possible. She had just received a letter from the young man announcing that he intended to commit suicide.

The hotel management found the boy in his room, dead, with a bullet in the region of his heart. He came to the hotel last Wednesday. In an unaddressed note which Green left in his room, he named a Baltimore man as the cause of his trouble. The note also said that the writer had had a good time since his arrival in New York. To it was pinned a $2 bill ,the purpose of which, the letter said, was to reimburse the hotel people for the inconvenience to which his death might put them.

SHIFTED INTO SUICIDE.

YOUNG MAN'S BODY IDENTIFIED.

[BY THE ASSOCIATED PRESS—P.M.]

NEW YORK, Sept. 16.—The body of the suicide who ended his life by hanging last night at Mammaroneck, near this city, was positively identified today as that of a young man who had represented himself to be William A. King, son of a wealthy cotton-mill owner of Augusta, Ga. The identification was made by Mrs. George E. Jardine, at whose house young King stopped for shelter last Monday during the height of a severe storm. The identification was confirmed by Mrs. Jardine's son.

Young King had told Jardine that he was penniless, having spent all of the allowance from his father. He had been warned by the latter that if he lived beyond his income he would have to shift for himself until the next installment was due King said he had met a number of women while stopping in New York and had squandered his money on them.

It was at first reported the suicide was Paul Kelly, motorman of the elevated railroad train which was wrecked recently, with a loss of twelve lives.

CRIME BRIEFS.

Lineman Shot in Road-house.

SACRAMENTO, Sept. 16.—Edward Wilson, a mulatto, shot and slightly wounded a telephone lineman named Williams in an encounter in a roadside house conducted by Mrs. Maggie Fee, at Brighton Junction, a short distance from this city, at an early hour this morning. Williams received a slight flesh wound in his left arm. However, after the shooting, it is said, Mrs. Fee was at the mercy of Wilson, who held two revolvers to her head for nearly four hours and threatened to kill her at every move she made to escape from the maddened man. Wilson was arrested by Sheriff Reese.

I have been treated by Dr. Schiffman for years. I have tried all his different methods, and can say unhesitatingly no dentist or physician has ever operated with such success or skill. In extracting my teeth he did it without any pain to me. It is a great pleasure to me to recommend him and his method of treatment. MILO M. POTTER,
Prop. Van Nuys Hotel, L. A., and Hotel Potter, Santa Barbara.

Ten years ago a reputable dentist of Virginia told me that a certain molar tooth could not be satisfactorily saved, and that it would probably not be of service for one year. It has not only served me for ten years, as Dr. Schiffman saved and crowned it, and comparatively speaking, without pain. I sing his praise.
OWEN M. ANDREWS,

It gives me great pleasure to state that Dr. Schiffman extracted an impacted wisdom tooth for me, which had been giving me great annoyance for years. It was extracted absolutely without a particle of pain to me. It was easily worth 100 times the amount paid.
ROBERT MARSH,

On account of some unfortunate experience I had in the extraction of my teeth I became a great coward in this respect. Today Dr. Schiffman extracted one of my very refractory teeth without causing me one particle of pain. D. K. TRASK,

Flexible Rubber Dental Plates

Have many advantages over the old thick, cumbersome, ordinary rubber plates and even over gold plates, being much lighter and thinner. These plates are flexible, only a trifle thicker than heavy writing paper, fit closer and adhere better to the roof of the mouth. Particles of food and small seeds cannot get under them. They will last longer, are stronger than any others and will not break, as they will give first, being flexible. Dr. Schiffman's own process, and made only by us.

For the Little Ones

To Keep Their Digestion Perfect Nothing is so Safe and Pleasant as Stuart's Dyspepsia Tablets

Thousands of men and women have found Stuart's Dyspepsia Tablets the safest and most reliable preparation for any form of indigestion or stomach trouble.

Thousands of people who are not sick, but are well and wish to keep well, take Stuart's Tablets after every meal to insure perfect digestion and avoid trouble.

But it is not generally known that the Tablets are just as good and wholesome for little folks as for their elders.

Little children who are pale, thin and have no appetite, or do not grow or thrive, should use the Tablets after eating and will derive great benefit from them.

Mrs. G. A. Crotsley, 538 Washington St., Hoboken, New Jersey, writes: "Stuart's Dyspepsia Tablets just fill the bill for children as well as for older folks. I've had the best of luck with them. My three-year-old girl takes them as readily as candy. I have only to say 'Tablets' and she drops everything else and runs for them."

A Buffalo mother, a short time ago, who despaired of the life of her babe, was so delighted with the results from giving the child these Tablets that she went before the notary public of Erie Co., N. Y., and made the following affidavit:

Gentlemen: Stuart's Dyspepsia Tablets were recommended to me for my two-months-old baby, which was sick and puny and the doctor said was suffering from indigestion. I took the child to the hospital, but there found no relief. A friend mentioned the Stuart Tablets and I procured a box from my druggist and used only the large sweet lozenges in the box and was delighted to find they were just the thing for my baby. I feel justified in saying that Stuart's Dyspepsia Tablets saved my child's life.

MRS. W. T. DETHLOPE.

Subscribed and sworn to before me this 12th day of April, 1897.

HENRY KARIS,
Notary Public in and for Erie Co., N.Y.

For babies, no matter how young or delicate, the tablets will accomplish wonders in increasing flesh, appetite and growth. Use only the large sweet tablets in every box. Full-sized boxes are sold by all druggists for 50 cents, and no parent should neglect the use of this safe remedy for all stomach and bowel troubles if the child is ailing in any way regarding its food or assimilation.

Stuart's Dyspepsia Tablets have been known for years as the best preparation for all stomach troubles whether in adults or infants.

WE ANNOUNCE FOR MONDAY OUR

...Grand Millinery Opening...

Together With a Most Brilliant Special Display of

Autumn's Most Select Apparel

Including Imported Costumes, Dress and Theater Coats, Tailor-Made Suits, Skirts and Waists

A Cordial Invitation is Extended to all Ladies of Southern California to be Present on this Occasion.

Annual Fall Millinery Opening

SOUVENIRS FROM 10 TO 12, AND 2 TO 5

Tomorrow we shall reveal an assemblage of styles representing the noteworthy conceits of world-famous French milliners. Among the most favored shapes are the Paul Jones, and the rolled brim French sailors, although a notable characteristic of millinery this season is the great diversity in models. Fashion permits of an infinite variety of modifications in all the accepted shapes so that every woman will be able to select a proper hat that will be becoming as well as correct.

The favorite trimmings will be birds and wings, and while white and black will be much worn yet the most pronounced favor will be shown to Alice blue, plum color, and certain exquisite shades of green.

Our opening display embodies all the charms of exclusiveness combined with the rarest good taste.

Here is a while Maline hat of the Louis XV period, trimmed with cream plumes, and beautiful Spanish lace drape, designed by Caroline Rebaux of 23 Rue de la Paix, Paris.

Another exquisite French creation is a white velvet hat trimmed with elaborate lace applique, velvet foliage, and bird of Paradise, designed by Madam Carlile, 16 Rue de la Paix.

Still another beautiful hat comes in apricot color, fashioned with lace and shaded plumes, a creation by Ancienne Maison, Paul Vird Berthe, Paris.

Esther Meyer of 6 Rue Royale, Paris, has sent us a marvelously beautiful hat of gray velvet, decorated at the back with heavy plumes and shaded roses.

A host of such imported masterpieces together with fetching productions from our own millinery art rooms makes this opening display the most lavish millinery exhibition which has ever occured in Los Angeles.

EXHIBITION OF AUTUMN'S QUEENLIEST GARMENTS

The endless variety of costumes, evening coats, tailor-made suits, and fancy waists which has been gathered for this exhibition is more extensive and includes garments of a higher order than were ever before included in the regular stock of any establishment west of Chicago.

Each production is a study in all the arts and devices of style building. The world affords no garments more beautiful, elegant and captivating than those which will be ready for your inspection tomorrow.

Imported Costumes

Each costume in our exhibition possesses such a wealth of individuality and charm that no single one could be said to be prettier or more fetching than any of its companions.

However, all women will agree that the elaborate white costume designed by Paquin which will be exhibited in our window fulfills the highest ideals in designing.

The material is a lovely white Messaline. The waist is a wonderful rich and effective combination of hand made Spanish lace and Irish crochet lace, designed with a lapel effect which is edged with genuine gold bullion. It comes with half sleeves, trimmed with lace to harmonize with the balance of the costume.

The entire bottom of skirt is composed of Spanish lace and Irish crochet lace intermingled with which are ruffles of self material, and around the extreme bottom of skirt is a ruffle of self material forming a finishing touch.

An equally effective costume comes in Alice blue and is made of delicate chiffon velvet. The yoke of waist is a fine, imported dotted net. The boleros are trimmed with Irish crochet lace in daisy designs. The collar is beautified by a touch of rich Persian embroidery. Half sleeves, set off with a row of daisy lace extending from shoulder to cuffs, the latter being of delicate lace to correspond with yoke. The skirt comes in plain circular style, giving the whole costume an air of exquisite simplicity. This costume by Drecoll will have many admirers.

Tailor-Made Suits

Our stock of tailor-made suits embraces the full range of Fall designs, colors and materials. It is impossible to name a single new Fall model which has not been secured for our department and a large part of these have already been received from the East and will be ready for your inspection tomorrow.

Imported Evening Coats

Our extensive collection of evening coats and theater wraps includes examples of all the correct models bearing the names of designers which are held in reverence throughout the world.

Each garment is the conceit of an authoritative designer reflecting individuality in color, trimmings, and style. The high character of these creations may be illustrated by a glance at any one of them.

You will be immediately captivated by a beautiful white broadcloth opera coat devised by Reichenbach of 14 Rue de Boissoniere, Paris. It is a luxurious, graceful garment, 52 inches long, with real sealskin collar and one row of real sealskin down the front of coat diverging into three rows of sealskin around bottom. The effect is still further beautified by a row of pink rose buds running from the collar down the front to bottom of coat. Finally, the effect is made perfect by trimmings of imitation flowers made of white broadcloth edged with silk braid and with centers of sealskin. The sleeves come in cape effect with sweeping drapes of hand-made Battenberg lace. It can be said that this opera coat is one of the most beautiful creations produced in Paris this season.

From Callot Soeurs, 24 Rue Taithout, Paris, comes an exquisite opera coat in pink broadcloth. The extraordinary beauty of this garment is produced by a wide collar of silk velvet in beaver brown color, trimmed with real bullion braid. It comes with half sleeves, trimmed with chiffon and rich lace.

These garments are in no way more worthy of notice than hosts of others which will greet you tomorrow.

Beautiful Fancy Waists

The fact that our waists, while very moderately marked, include creations which command prices as high as $55.00 each, serves to suggest the elaborateness and comprehensiveness of our stock. There are exquisite models composed of solid lace and silk and lace in exquisite combinations. Designs will be shown which are suitable for afternoon functions and evening wear.

HANLON'S CHALLENGE.

WANTS TO FIGHT BRITT.

[BY DIRECT WIRE TO THE TIMES.]

SAN FRANCISCO, Sept. 16.—[Exclusive Dispatch.] Eddie Hanlon is out with a challenge that offers some enterprising fight manager a chance to get a good attraction for one of the early dates. Hanlon wants to fight Britt, and he says that there will be no difficulty about the terms, as all Jimmy has to do is to write his own terms.

A fight between Britt and Hanlon ought to fill any pavilion. The pair have never been in the ring together, and each has enough admirers to make speculation on the result widespread. Hanlon's easy victory over Fitzgerald, even though it was on a foul, shows he has not retrograded, and Britt's defeat at Colma has added to, rather than detracted from his popularity.

FIGHT GAME KILLED.

SEYMOUR TO BURY IT.

[BY DIRECT WIRE TO THE TIMES.]

SAN FRANCISCO, Sept. 16.—[Exclusive Dispatch.] It looks as though the days of prize fighting in California were numbered and all because the men who manage this most lucrative of all sports have fallen out about the profits of the game and have made damaging charges against each other. Billy Nolan, manager of Battling Nelson, is responsible for the scandal which will soon appear in the courts. He demanded the return of $1000 in Harry Corbett's hands and when Corbett held it, claiming the payment of an old debt, Nolan charged that Corbett retained this money as Nolan's contribution to the $7000 corruption fund, which last year was put up by local sports to defeat the Ralston Anti-Prize fight bill.

If Nolan had stopped there no trouble but the scandal would have ensued, but he actually made an affidavit to his charges. Now Sacramento's District-Attorney Seymour is a man who is ambitious to be in California the reformer that Folk has been in Missouri. Seymour has convicted one boodling State senator and has three who are as good as convicted. When he saw this Nolan affidavit he recognized its value and he declares he will use it to convict the seven members of the legislature who changed their votes at the last moment and voted against the anti-prize fight bill, thus killing the measure. In addition to this Foreman Mitchell of the San Francisco grand jury promises to lend a hand by indicting Harry Corbett for raising the $7000 fund to corrupt legislators.

Altogether it looks bad for any more fights in 'Frisco, the last hope of the pugilists.

In the Seventh Inning.

PHILADELPHIA, Sept. 16.—In the seventh inning, with the score tied and the bases full, a base on balls forced Powers across the plate. Cross followed with a double, sending in three more runs. Plank kept Boston's hits well scattered. Attendance 12,900. Score:

Boston, 2; hits, 6; errors, 0.
Philadelphia, 6; hits, 9; errors, 3.

LOS ANGELES WOMEN HURT AT SAN BERNARDINO.

Dash of Frightened Horses Causes Collision and Victims are Hurled Into Creek Bed Where They Have Presence of Mind to Avoid Animals Rolling Down Embankment.

[BY DIRECT WIRE TO THE TIMES.]

SAN BERNARDINO, Sept. 16.—[Exclusive Dispatch.] Mrs. Flossie Melrose and Mrs. Lucy Chandler of Los Angeles and Thomas Campbell, dairyman at the Southern California State Hospital for the Insane at Patton, were badly injured today in a runaway at Eighth and E streets.

The women, who are guests at the hospital, were driving to town in a carriage with Campbell. When coming along E street two bicyclists shot out from an alley, frightening their horses which took to flight, throwing Campbell out, and continuing at a mad pace down E street.

They collided with another vehicle, which was wrecked, and both women were thrown into the bed of the creek. The horses rolled down the embankment also, but the women managed to maintain their presence of mind and escaped from the path of the horses, which plunged through a barbed wire fence and were badly injured.

Mrs. Melrose sustained a slight concussion of the brain, and Mrs. Chandler has a badly sprained ankle. Both women are painfully cut and bruised. Campbell's shoulder is dislocated and his body is bruised. Fred Heilman, owner of the wagon with which the carriage collided, is suffering from the shock and minor injuries.

LONG-PARTED PAIR JOIN.

MARRY IN SAN BERNARDINO AFTER TWENTY YEARS.

Were First Wedded a Quarter of a Century Ago but Were Divorced Five Years Later—Death of Mrs. G. W. Tape, One of the Promoters of Arrowhead Hotel.

SAN BERNARDINO, Sept. 16.—James Cloyd Johnston, station keeper, water seller and roadmaster at Cactus Flat, and postmaster at Doble, thirty-five miles from Victor, was married today by Judge F. F. Oster, in the Superior Court chambers to Jessie Electa Johnson.

Behind the ceremony lies a little romance. Twenty-two years ago they were married at Los Angeles, and after five years of married life separated. The woman secured a divorce, and the couple made a satisfactory division of their property rights.

Mrs. Johnston went to San Francisco, and there married a painter, named Johnson, who died the following year, and ever since then the children of the couple have been working to bring about a reconciliation between the old folks, which was finally accomplished a few days ago when the former wife agreed to reunite the bonds which had been severed seventeen years ago.

After the divorce Johnston fled to the desert, drifting from one mining camp to another, and at last settled in the Cactus Flat region, took up land, developed water, and now his place is a veritable oasis to the weary miners and prospectors.

ARROWHEAD PROMOTER DIES.

This community was greatly shocked this morning to learn of the death at the California Hospital, at Los Angeles, of Mrs. G. W. Tape, wife of Dr. Tape, through whose energy the rebuilding of the Arrowhead Hotel on the mountains north of town was made possible. Mrs. Tape underwent an operation at the hospital several days ago for appendicitis, and was supposed to be recovering. Few persons here knew of her illness. She was a native of Detroit, aged 46. Arrangements for the funeral have not been completed.

BLACK JEWEL SO ROUGH.

Ophelia Flanders, a 250-pound negress, has been lodged in the county jail from Daggett to serve six months for dragging an English woman from bed at a late hour of night, never stopping with her until the street was reached. Ophelia took this method of freeing her house of an undesirable tenant, who refused to pay rent. The negress is black as charcoal, and has a row of solid gold teeth each of which blazes with a diamond setting.

POLICE DECLINE TO ACT.

Chief of Police W. A. Shay tonight received a telephone message from a man giving his name as Miller, at the Santa Fé freight depot in Los Angeles, asking that a woman dressed in black, wearing glasses and having a little child, be taken off the overland, as she was traveling on a scalper's ticket. Miller claimed he was no relation, but a railroad official later telephoned he was the woman's husband but would not give particulars. The police refused to act.

SAN BERNARDINO BRIEFS.

The hay barn and hay shed at the Southern California State Hospital for the Insane at Patton were completely destroyed by a fire of unkown origin yesterday afternoon, together with twenty tons of hay. The loss is estimated at $1600.

An answer to the petition of Mrs. Ada Hosking of Redlands for the probate of a will of the late David Morey, was filed today by K. C. Wells, E. C. Truesdell and other legatees in which they set forth the claim that Morey had revoked the first will in a letter which he had written to Wells a few days before his suicide at San Diego two years ago.

Mrs. John Ver Bryck, formerly Estella Frye, a bride of a year, died yesterday at the home of her parents at Highland in the first crisis of her married life. The young mother and infant were buried together.

Mr. and Mrs. John Kaus, keepers of a winery, were arrested today on complaint of Sheriff J. C. Ralphs, charged with selling intoxicating liquor without license. It is alleged that they sold beer to Deputy Sheriff Belarde and twenty-two bottles of beer to one Recardo Bargue. They will plead Monday before Justice Thomas.

USE CORPSE AS OBJECT LESSON.

SCHOOL FOR YOUNG TRAMPS IN SANTA BARBARA.

Young Men Beating Their Way on Railroad are Arrested and, in Spite of Their Protests, are Compelled to View Body of Young Burris, Killed by Freight Train.

[SPECIAL CORRESPONDENCE OF THE TIMES.]

SANTA BARBARA, Sept. 16.—The remains of Joseph M. Burris, the young man who was killed under the wheels of a freight train while trying to steal a ride, have been shipped to the young man's home in Cheyenne, Wyo. It was found that he was well educated, and came from a good family.

The unfortunate death of Burris was used by the local police and constables as an object lesson to young tramps who were found beating their way into this city. Several of them were arrested and taken to the corpse of the man killed by the cars. Some of them objected to standing in the presence of the dead, but their protestations did not save them from the ordeal. Before being released, each one promised that he would never again attempt to ride the brakebeams.

TWO ENGINES COLLIDE.

Two locomotives collided with great force in the local freight yards last night, and were so badly damaged that they will be sent to the railroad shops in Los Angeles for repairs. One man, Engineer Davis, suffered a sprained ankle in the accident, the other engine men escaping with a few bruises. The accident occurred after dark, when engine No. 1620 was returning to the barn, after a run with a freight train, and stopped on the tracks while a switch was being turned. Switch engine No. 1079, which has only been in service here for two weeks, coasted down the track and crashed into her side, the two locomotives being firmly wedged together.

WILL PLANT PALMS.

The Chamber of Commerce at last night's meeting discussed a proposition to plant palm trees on both sides of the Cliff drive for a mile or two, adjoining the place where the Hope Ranch Company ceased to plant trees of the same kind. If the trees are planted the Cliff drive will be lined with palms for over three miles, and will be one of the prettiest driveways on the Coast.

SANTA ANA.

SORROWS OF CUPID.

SANTA ANA, Sept. 16.—Mrs. Mary A. Collins of this city filed suit for divorce today from William S. Collins, well known as an oil and real estate speculator and investor.

Mr. and Mrs. Collins formerly made their home at Riverside, when Mr. Collins became interested extensively in the Bakersfield oil district. Three years ago they moved to Newport Beach and this city, upon the purchase of the Newport Beach properties by Mr. Collins and a group of associates. Mr. Collins is now extensively interested in Newport Beach property, is owner of Fairview Hotel and hot springs and has other varied land interests hereabouts. He is out of town at present.

A party of local Nimrods, including Henry Diers, John McFadden, A. J. Visel, Wm. F. Lutz and John Cubbon, left today for Nordhoff upon a short hunting expedition. From Nordhoff they will pack back into the Matilija Mountans in quest of big game.

A new Baptist Church is to be organized at Huntington Beach, with Rev. Petty, formerly of this city, as the pastor.

ORANGE.

HIGH SCHOOL CELEBRATION.

ORANGE, Sept. 16.—The dedication of the new Orange Union High School last night drew a throng of patrons from all parts of the district, more than a thousand assembling to inspect the building and to listen to the dedicatory exercises. From 7 o'clock until 8 committees of the pupils ushered the guests through the different classrooms and laboratories.

A programme was presented in the assembly hall. Brief remarks from Prof. Charles E. Taylor, principal of the High School, called the assemblage to order, and Rev. Alexander Parker, pastor of the Orange Presbyterian Church, pronounced the benediction. After an orchestral number, G. D. Toothaker, president of the High School board, was introduced and presided. Brief speeches of congratulation were made by J. B. Nichols, County Superintendent of Schools; by Prof. Walker, principal of the Anaheim High School; by Rev. Cooks, of the Ville Park district; and by Mrs. Alice Armor, editor of the Orange Post.

Then followed a violin solo by James Rice of Tustin, accompanied by Clarence Gustlin of Santa Ana, after which the formal address of the evening was made by Dr. Millspaugh, president of the Los Angeles State Normal School. A vocal number by Mrs. James S. Rice and the benediction, pronounced by Dr. Parker, concluded the programme.

The new High School was built at a cost of $35,000 for the structure and equipment. The arrangements for school work are thoroughly modern and the building is complete in its details. School sessions were opened two weeks ago, with an enrollment of 115 pupils.

"BONNIE CLARE MINE"

Mr. Lauzon's Report.

GOLDFIELD, Nevada, Aug. 5, 1905.

MR. W. H. WHITMORE, Goldfield, Nevada.

My Dear Mr. Whitmore--In response to your inquiry, will say that I have made a most careful and exhaustive examination of the "Courbet" group of claims; the "Hard Luck" group of claims, and the "Rattlesnake" group of claims, now owned by the Bonnie Clare Bullfrog Mining and Milling Company. I made this examination last March before the present winze had been sunk to its present depth, which cuts the vein at the 600-foot level.

I have been a mining man for twenty-nine years. Have operated in Colorado, Canada, British Columbia, Arizona, and the Republic of Mexico. My principal experience, however, was in the State of Colorado, where I mined continnously for over twenty years. I shall be only too glad to give you a list of references of men of large capital, who have amassed fortunes in the mining business in Colorado, and who are well acquainted with me and my ability and judgment as a mining man. I make this preliminary statement, to explain that I ought to know what I am talking about when I say that I regard the Bonnie Clare properties as one of the most valuable I have ever seen or examined in my life, considering the development work done.

This property differs from other Nevada properties in this, that there are some 6000 feet of work done underground, and on veins of ore. I took some seventy-three samples for the purpose of advising myself fully as to the exact values of the ore, and the general average clear through the "Rattlesnake" mine was about 98 cents higher than the general average report of Mr. H. C. Johnson, made later. His general average was $22.85, if I remember correctly, and mine was $23.83 per ton.

If Mr. Johnson, the engineer, had permitted his assays to have been tested for the silver as well as gold, I believe that his general average would have been at least $6.00 higher per ton. At least this is the result of my test for silver, that is to say, if the silver values are added to the gold values, it will bring the value of the ore in the "Rattlesnake" group of claims up to a little more than $29.00 per ton. The "Courbet" and the "Hard Luck" groups of claims both show average values of about $38.80; this includes the silver values, as well as the gold. The H. C. Johnson report shows a few cents less than $33 in gold values in the "Courbet", which is about right; that is, I mean to say, that it agrees with my gold assay. This property is clear from debt, and under its present conservative management always will be.

I consider Mr. L. E. Chiatovich one of the most remarkable characters in the world. To think of a young man coming over from Austria and settling down in Southwestern Nevada, twenty years ago, and staying right there, developing the mining property with the ore he took out in driving tunnels, drifts, etc.; putting up a 5-stamp mill, and running it successfully for the last ten years without previous experience, financial aid or help from any one, certainly is a test of merit worthy of the Bonnie Clare property that admits of no possible question.

In Goldfield the upheaval condition was sporadic and more or less broken, whereas in the Bonnie Clare District, forty miles south of Goldfield, the leads are absolutely defined, while the great vein is one of the truest fissures I have ever seen in my life.

Trusting I have answered all your inquiries, I am, Yours very truly,

F. C. Lauzon

Mining Engineer.

GOLDFIELD, Nevada, August 5th, 1905

MR. W. H. WHITMORE, Goldfield, Nev.:

My Dear Mr. Whitmore--I have carefully read the foregoing statement of Mr. F. C. Lauzon, and I can say, after having hauled and milled 3500 tons of ore from the mining property above described, that the above statements of Mr. Lauzon are in every way fair and truthful; in fact, I consider his statements conservative.

L. E. Chiatovich

MR. W. H. WHITMORE, Goldfield, Nevada.

Dear Mr. Whitmore--I have resided in Nevada for upwards of forty years, and during the last twenty years have known Mr. L. E. Chiatovich, and have known the ''Rattlesnake'' and ''Courbet'' properties, now owned by the Bonnie Clare Bullfrog Mining and Milling Company, for many years, and during the last year have resided most of the time at the mine, and it affords me pleasure, after forty years experience in mining, mostly in Nevada, to say that I endorse Mr. L. E. Chiatovich's statement above, and the conservatism of Mr. F. C. Lauzon's report.

A. C. May

Was twelve years Revenue Collector of Nevada.

Dated at Goldfield, Nevada, this 5th day of August, 1905.

Executive Mansion of the State of Nevada.
CARSON CITY, Nevada, August 14, 1905.

To Whom it May Concern--It affords me pleasure to state that the reputation of the ''Rattlesnake'' and ''Courbet'' mining properties now owned by the Bonnie Clare Bullfrog Mining and Milling Company, is well and favorably known in the State of Nevada. In fact these properties have long been regarded as being among the richest gold-bearing mines in our State.

I especially wish to speak of the high standing both in social, business and financial circles of Messrs. A. C. May and Louis E. Chiatovich, their word for many years has been looked upon by all Nevadians to be as good as a gold bond, while as to the mining engineer, Mr. F. C. Lauzon, I have heard favorable comments as to his ability, his long years of experience in mining affairs, his honesty and conservatism.

Very respectfully,

Lem Allen

Lieutenant and Acting Governor of Nevada.

Mrs. E. C. Bichowsky and family are home from Santa Monica for the summer.

LAY CORNER FOR EBELL.

LONG BEACH WOMEN'S DAY OF CELEBRATION.

Ceremonies Over the Commencement of the Rearing of a Clubhouse are Conducted by Members of the Fair Sex—Numerous Unique Marine Effects for the Building.

LONG BEACH, Sept. 16.—The corner stone of the new Ebell club house at the corner of Daisy and Ocean avenues was laid at noon today with appropriate ceremonies. Miss Alice Wilson, secretary of the Y. W. C. A. offered an invocation, which was followed by a selection, "The Water Lily" by the Madrigal quartette consisting of Mmes. Cadmus, Virgin, Young and Miss Cadmus. The address on "Corner-Stones, Clubhouses and Women" was in Mrs. Emma Greenleaf's best vein. She said that new ideas seldom come into the world as the product of a single mind.

"Most great things," she said, "result from a long course of circumstances leading finally to the development of the idea. The Ebell of Long Beach grew out of a series of meetings held nine years ago at the home of Mrs. Adelaide Tichenor."

Following Mrs. Greenleaf, the Madrigal club sang a piece eulogistic of Ebell, an original composition by Mrs. F. E. Young, one of the members of the Ebell.

In laying the corner-stone Mrs. Adelaide Tichenor, the president, said that today's result is the fruition of hopes of years of sacrifices made by Ebell members and she believed the completion of the clubhouse will witness the advent of greater good and greater and higher education.

In the box in the stone are copies of Long Beach and Los Angeles papers, a list of officers and members of the Ebell Club and Clubhouse Association, the first and last year books, an Ebell badge and cards of contractor Noble and Architect Benton. After the ceremonies the ladies enjoyed a basket luncheon on the beach.

The clubhouse at present is only in the skeleton stage but when completed will be a novel and beautiful edifice. It is at the foot of the bluff, facing on Daisy avenue, but with an entrance from the bluff on Ocean avenue. The outer walls are built like docks, of piles for foundation with heavy plank boarding inside the piles and with balustrades of rope netting. The main trusses inside are of piling with chains instead of iron rods for tensile members, with rope netting in the spandrels of the trusses. Some of the fixtures will be anchors suspended by chains and others will be of abalone shells and beaten copper. On the main floor, will be the assembly rooms, parlors, stage, reception room, dining-room and kitchen. In the story below will be domitories, furnace and storage rooms. The building is 50x90 feet.

DOCK COMPANY ORGANIZES.

The stockholders of the Los Angeles Dock and Terminal Co., the organization formed for constructing in her harbors in Long Beach yesterday elected general officers, a board of directors and an executive committee: President, Dana Burks; chairman of board, Henry P. Barbour; vice-president, C. J. Curtis of Redlands and David Evans of Salt Lake City; secretary, W. M. Campbell of Redlands; treasurer, C. C. Ames, First National Bank of Redlands; directors, Messrs. Ames, Curtis and Campbell of Redlands, David Evans, Salt Lake City, H. P. Barbour, Dana Burks and C. H. Windham of Long Beach; executive committee, H. P. Barbour, Dana Burks, C. H. Windham.

The capital stock of the company is $1,500,000 and of this amount $525,000 was paid into the treasury by the stockholders yesterday.

The engineers engaged on the preliminary work of the canals are still engaged on the details.

LONG BEACH BREEZES.

Charles Boyd and John Darling, sons of well known citizens were arrested by Deputy Marshall Neece this morning for fast speeding of their motorcycles on the wharfs. They were fined $5 each.

Detectives brought Miss Ruby Casselman, the Los Angeles Sunday-school teacher to Long Beach this morning to trace some of the money which she claims to have deposited in some bank, but had forgotten the name and location. The banks would give out no information regarding the matter.

CATALINA ISLAND.

SUNFISH—SHARK—TUNA.

AVALON, Sept. 16.—Mexican Joe captured a sunfish yesterday which weighed 320 pounds.

Capt. Timmons after a savage fight brought in a big "ground" shark this morning weighing 420 pounds.

Eight tuna was yesterday's record. So far none have exceeded fifty pounds.

G. F. Steele with Harry Doss, boatman, captured a tuna this morning which he is having mounted.

Dr. Ward B. Rowland of Pasadena, county veterinarian, who recently was in a critical condition from blood poisoning is now convalescent and is recovering the sight of his eye, which was all but lost. He has been at Middle ranch for two weeks, and in that time has gained twenty-one pounds.

Robert Jordan was a good thing for the nickel-divers this morning. Assembling them at the bath-house wharf he had great fun with them for half an hour throwing out handful after handful of nickels for their diving.

The island travel at this season of the year is a surprise to the oldest inhabitant. Each day for the past week from 300 to 400 persons have arrived.

The Hermosa made her last trip for the season today, and henceforth for the winter there will be but one daily steamer, the Cabrillo continuing in commission. Under the new schedule, however, there will be an early boat Monday morning, and a late boat Saturday night.

MONROVIA.

OVERFLOW OF SCHOOLS.

MONROVIA, Sept. 16.—Every day of the past week, pupils have enrolled at the public schools. The buildings already are crowded before the families of many regular attendants have returned from summer trips. Every room in the Orange-avenue building is full and the new High School is filled with pupils even to the library. It will be necessary to put the primary grade on a half day schedule within a few weeks, is the opinion of Prof. Nathan Smith, the supervisng principal.

The increase in the enrollment over last year is, in the High School, 11 per cent; in the primary and grammar grades, 8 per cent. The High School now has 100 enrollment, the lower grades 323.

MONROVIA SLOPE ITEMS.

The district convention of the Legion of Honor was held here today and a large number of people assembled from surrounding towns for an all-day programme at Odd Fellows' Hall, which included a spread at noon. Covina, El Monte, Azusa, and Moneta were represented. A competitive drill in team work was given, and the evening closed with a dance.

The Courtesy Committee of the Saturday Afternoon Club gave a reception this afternoon to which the ladies who have recently come to the city were invited. The club season will open October 7, under a new set of officers with Mrs. L. N. Wheeler, president.

Revival services will be opened here on the 20th inst. under the preaching of Rev. E. J. Bulgin, assisted by his singer, Mr. Otto Gates.

CLAREMONT.

LARGEST COLLEGE ATTENDANCE.

CLAREMONT, Sept. 16.—Pomona College will open for the fall term on Tuesday, with the largest attendance in the history of the institution. There will be a freshman class of more than one hundred, and thirty-three in the senior class. President George A. Gates will return from Seattle in time to take part in the formal opening exercises.

Coach Noble announces the first football practice for Monday afternoon at which time a lot of new candidates for honors will be seen for the first time.

The public school will open on Tuesday with the same corps of teachers as last year.

The annual community social, which always precedes the opening of the fall term of Pomona College, was held Friday evening, and attended by 300 people, most of whom have just returned from their vacations.

Stephen Gale, who lives among the foothills north of Claremont, has started a new industry for this locality, that of raising Angora goats. He has already a number of these valuable animals, and is raising them for commercial purposes.

SANTA MONICA.

FIRE THIEF IS JAILED.

SANTA MONICA, Sept. 16.—As an aftermath of the recent fire that destroyed the Bunday hay barn and several head of horses George D. Baker was arrested for petty larceny and sentenced by City Recorder Guidinger to a term of fifty days in the County Jail.

While the fire was in progress it was thought the Hull furniture store was doomed and the building was hurriedly emptied of its contents. Later two framed pictures were missed. These were traced to Baker and were located in his tent. The fellow's arrest followed quickly and he entered a plea of guilty when arraigned. Baker came here from Pasadena and was recently arrested charged with having enticed a fourteen-year-old girl from her mother, but this charge was dismissed.

L. Langdon is under arrest and held for trial on a complaint alleging his attempt to defraud an inn-keeper. Mrs. A. Stephens is the complaining witness.

The steam shovel has arrived and will begin work Monday in making the excavations for the approach to the beach. The electric track has been laid and the excavated earth will be utilized in making the permanent fill for the Ocean avenue bridge near Front street.

Mrs. A. F. Lathrop entertained the Chess Club Thursday evening, when plans were discussed for a tournament series of games with the organization recently formed at the Country Clubhouse. Mr. and Mrs. Seymour will entertain the local club at its next meeting, September 28.

Mr. and Mrs. A. X. Wilmot are guests of friends at Pomona for a few days.

Mrs. Herman W. Hellman of Los Angeles is at the Arcadia.

Mr. and Mrs. G. C. Lemcke have gone to Seattle. From there they will go to New York and Brockton, Mass. With Mr. and Mrs. J. W. Evans and Mr. and Mrs. R. A. Phillips they expect to sail October 4 for Europe. Mr. and Mrs. Lemcke will visit for some time at Dresden, Germany.

Mr. and Mrs. Patrick Robertson are passing a few days at Lamanda.

Miss Ellen M. Barker has gone East and will spend some time as the guest of relatives in Chicago.

Mrs. Robert Long, wife of the vice-consul at Paral, Mexico, is here for a visit with relatives.

H. T. Maloy has returned from Kings county, where he has been for several weeks.

H. Notthoff has returned to his home in this city after a visit of a month in the East.

The ship Tarpenbeck arrived at Port Los Angeles today from Hamburg and the big Collis from San Francisco.

SOLDIERS' HOME.

VETERAN RETREAT NOTES.

SOLDIERS' HOME, Sept. 16.—The funeral of Thomas Forrest was conducted under the auspices of the local branch of the Union Veteran Legion, and the burial services were made more impressive by the attendance of Bishop Hamilton, who was an old-time friend of Forrest and his family in Schenectady, N. Y.

Miss Moncks, for a number of years a nurse in the hospital here, is granted leave of absence for ninety days. She goes direct from here to a visit with friends at the Portland fair.

Rev. Dr. Bowers, State geologist, will preach in the Protestant chapel at the morning service on Sunday.

RECENT DEATHS.

David D. C. McMillin, late Co. L, Eleventh Illinois Cavalry, a native of Pennsylvania, admitted from Tulare in 1904, died September 10; aged 65.

Joseph C. Moore, late Gilligan's Battalion, Missouri Mounted Volunteers (Mexican War) a native of Indiana, admitted from Hydesville, in 1904, died September 16; aged 70.

VENICE.

TIDE FLOWS INTO CANALS.

VENICE, Sept. 16.—At high tide tonight the floodgates of the Venice canal system were opened, and the water from the sea raced through the canals and began to fill the great swimming pool. The completion of this improvement has been delayed far longer than had been intended, but now that the canals are to be kept filled with salt water freshened with every tide, boating will be the pleasure that was contemplated in the establishment of the resort. Work is steadily going ahead in the cutting of the long canal that is to connect the Venice canals with the lagoons running from Playa del Rey. When it is finished the boats will have a clear inland course from Venice to Del Rey.

On October 2 the Venice postoffice will take another forward step, as on and after that date it will be a money-order office.

The County Press Association, forty-three strong, came by special car today, and spent several hours at this beach.

In addition to Emperor William's donation of $2000 for relief of the Italian earthquake sufferers, the city of Berlin has appropriated $25,000 for the same purpose.

OCEAN PARK.

SAND TOWN BLASTS.

OCEAN PARK, Sept. 16.—Thomas M. Whitten and family are here for the winter from Las Vegas, N. M. They come to make the beach their winter home, and will build a handsome residence.

P. J. Newlin is the new agent at the Hill-street station for the Los Angeles-Pacific electric line. The former agent, W. N. Jamison, has been called to Lincoln, Neb., by the illness of his mother.

Dorsey Patton has returned from Murrietta, where he spent several weeks in an effort to rid his system of rheumatic blood.

Mr. and Mrs. Force Parker are in San Francisco for a few days.

The little four-year-old daughter of Mrs. F. L. Dugan of Los Angeles is critically ill at their seaside home on Joy street. The child was taken with spasms a few days ago while on the car en route to the beach. The ailment is cerebro spinal meninigitis. An operation was performed today.

It is understood that the Duke of Connaught has asked Field Marshal Lord Roberts to accompany him to South Africa in November, hence the latter's postponement of his trip to America.

"Pay Less and Dress Better."

Triumphal Opening

New York Cloak and Suit House

The entrance of the New York Cloak and Suit House into the trade circles of Los Angeles was an event of triumphal magnificence. The sumptuous equipment of the store itself, the artistic decorations and the taste and elegance of the costumes and other features of the display evoked expressions of delight and admiration from all the visitors who thronged the floors every minute of the first three opening days.

With the most grateful feelings to all who honored the store by their presence, and to the public in general for its hearty appreciation, the management announces its sturdy aim to continue to give to the ladies of Los Angeles and Southern California, a store where they may trade in absolute safety, secure in the confidence that the styles and the qualities will always be as represented, and the prices in keeping with our motto, "Pay Less and Dress Better."

Trading was limited on the Los Angeles Stock Exchange yesterday and confined almost entirely to Associated Oil. Bidding was active and widely distributed, but yesterday was not a buying day, chiefly because the securities could not be brought out.

Transactions in the Associated were 13,000, but the market was inclined to weakness and the shares were sold at 60 1-8 to 60 1-4, closing at 60. Reed Crude went off almost 2 points.

Johnnie Consolidated gained a point. Bank stocks were in keen request, which forced prices up; Commercial National closing at 1.03 3-4 without offerings, and Home Savings at 74, but National Bank of California receded to 1.75.

The bonds elicited comparatively little inquiry, and few changes were made. Associated Oil closing 1-4 under that of the day before.

Edison Electric, both preferred and common, appreciated under a strong market and most of the telephone securities gained under active bidding. United States Long Distance Telephone lost 1-4 under a bear movement; while 5 shares of Home Telephone were sold at 68 1-2, the stationary quotation.

RELEASE THE FUND. Touching the present municipal bond issue, it should not be forgotten that next year the voters will pas upon the decision whether these bonds can be utilized in our State or not. The United States has the best credit in the world, and, although it is partly to be attributed to our great prosperity, it is also largely due to the fact that the bonds issued by it are made so by being available for circulation or for deposit of public funds. Why a great State like California should discredit its own issues of bonds by saying that they are valueless as security for public funds, which are thus forced to lie idle in the treasury vaults, is something it is hard to understand. The withdrawal of the public funds from circulation at the time of the year when they are most needed, is a serious detriment to the community at large and is a relic almost of barbarism. About sixty per cent. of the taxes are paid in November, which is the time of the year when the merchants most need accommodations. To take out of the city's vaults some two and a half million dollars of gold coin and shut it up in a place where it is a great expense and where there is an amount of risk involved, which the city and county ought not to undergo, is a relic of former days, which should be wiped out at the next election.

NEW YORK MARKETS.

SHARES AND MONEY.

[BY THE ASSOCIATED PRESS—P.M.]

NEW YORK, Sept. 16.—There was a burst of animation with the closing dealings in stocks today, making the last prices the highest of the week and at considerable gains over last week's closing. Today's market was very dull until after the appearance of the bank statement, and was similar to its predecessors of the week in being largely professional in its character. The undertone was strong throughout, as confidence was strong that the banks would manage to conserve their showing of a surplus reserve by the shifting of loans to trust companies and other institutions, as was done last week. The appearance of the bank statement justified this confidence, and was followed by the final outburst of demand which made the closing strong. The loan reduction, while very heavy, was only about two-thirds as large as the unparalleled contraction effort of last week. Cash reserves was up to the common expectations. Stock market common shifted to the prospect of further gold imports next week as a relief from the continued drain upon the bank reserves by the sub-treasury absorptions, and the movement of funds to the interior. Reports from London of a demand for gold upon that center from other sources were studied with interest as bearing upon the chances of securing for New York the large shipments of gold now moving towards London from South Africa and Australia. Of special interest was the report that Paris was competing to secure some part of these expected arrivals. If London becomes hard pressed to maintain her gold supply, it is expected that the demand from New York will be shifted from that center to Paris. The special strength of Canadian Pacific in the market was due to the report of an offer for the purchase of the company's land holdings. Chesapeake and Ohio reflected the strong showing of its annual report. Some special demand also continued for the Wabash issues. Total sales of bonds, par value, $1,230,000.

GENERAL EASTERN MARKETS.

GRAIN AND PRODUCE

[BY THE ASSOCIATED PRESS—P.M.]

CHICAGO, Sept. 16.—In wheat at the start, no signs of weakness were in evidence. On the contrary, sentiment was quite bullish, opening quotations for December being up ⅛ to ¼c, at 84¼ @85⅝. General rains northwest and southwest formed the chief basis of strength, although there were a number of minor influences. The most important perhaps was the continued strength of cash wheat. During the first hour of trading here, shorts were fairly active bidders. A leading bull was also reported as buying quite freely. Under this demand December advanced to 84⅞. Later, an impression developed that the bullish leader who had been an active buyer earlier in the day, had turned seller on the bulge. This started general selling, which resulted in considerable reaction in prices, December declining 84¼. The market was weak the remainder of the session, quotations at the close being practically at the lowest point of the day. Final quotations of December were at 84⅛@84¼. The corn market was firm. December opened a shade to ⅛ to ¼c higher, at 44⅞@44⅝, sold up to 45¼, and closed at 45. The oats market was subjected to considerable profit-taking, resulting in slight declines. December opened ⅛ lower to a shade higher, at 28⅝@28⅞@29; sold off to 28½, and closed at 28⅝. A 5-cent advance in the price of live hogs had a stimulating effect on the provision market. In addition, shipments of meat and lard were large. Trading was fairly active, and the market was firm the entire session. At the close, January pork was up 2½; lard was up 2½, and ribs were unchanged.

The leading futures closed as follows:

Santa Ana Tin Stock
—IS—
No Gamble

The Board of Directors of the Santa Ana Tin Mining Co. has authorized the sale of a Block of Treasury Stock for the purpose of securing funds to build a Refinery. The Metallurgy has been solved; as evidence we have in our office 8 pounds of Platinum, Osmium and Iridium, all worth as much gold. There are so many metals in our ore it is absolutely necesary to have a complete Refinery to separate all of them.

This Contract will be given with each block of stock:

The Santa Ana Tin Mining Co. will redeem certificate No........, issued to ...., at the expiration of 12 months at par value, with interest at 6 per cent thereon, if said ....is dissatisfied with his holding.

FIRST ANNOUNCEMENT OF THE ANTIOAK LEATHER COMPA
6 PER CENT. PREFERRED STOCK
Amount Authorized $300,000 Now Allotted for

"Antioak" is a great new discovery in the art of tanning leather. It has been tested for two years past and $30,000 worth of the product has been even one complaint being received. Its permanent value as the leather has been fully established.

The results already achieved have warranted the erection at Angeles) of a large plant covering nearly 40,000 feet of floor space the best machinery obtainable; the whole representing an expenditure cash. The company has no floating debt.

To provide a larger working capital and to extend the business $100,000 of the preferred stock is offered at

80 CENTS PER SHARE (par value

An investment which will realize at least 7½ per cent. to assets and property (becoming in this respect virtually a preferred as to dividends up to 6 per cent per annum. It also common stock in any further profits of any year. Conservative and liberal allowance against the company for expenses show equal to more than dividends above provided for.

Durability, strength and adaptability to many and varied proved virtues of Antioak Leather, while the time required against four months for oak leather) lessens immensely the advantages, combined with the easy availability of the raw market for the finished product, make Antioak stock a splendid

THE CITY IN BRIEF.

BREVITIES.

Times' "Liner" Advertisers—Important change in rate for Sunday classified advertisements. Commencing Sunday, October 1, 1905, and thereafter, the rate for Sunday "Liners" will be 1¼ cents per word for each insertion; minimum charge, 25 cents, as at present. This slight advance is amply justified by the present Sunday circulation of The Times, which averages over 60,000 copies. (When the 1-cent per-word rate was established in 1893, The Times Sunday circulation was only 14,000 copies.) The "Liner" rate for the daily—1 cent per word—will stand as at present.

Mrs. L. T. Wood, milliner, has removed to the Geo. P. Taylor building, 525 South Broadway, and will have her opening display of autumn and winter millinery Monday and Tuesday. This will be a millinery exhibition well worth seeing and every woman in Los Angeles is cordially invited to inspect the handsome new creations, from the fashionable milliners of the world, as well as the smart products of Mrs. Woods' own workrooms. Modest prices prevail.

Elise Havill takes pleasure in requesting the presence of her many friends and patrons and also those interested in high class millinery display of the latest imported novelties in trimmings. Commencing Friday and Saturday, September 22 and 23, 1905. No announcements. Suburban Millinery Co., 2305 S. Union avenue, 2304 S. Hoover street, Union Square, Los Angeles. Both Traction and University cars.

The Vogue Millinery, 309 South Broadway, announces that their buyer and trimmer having just returned from New York with the very latest ideas in millinery, they are ready to display the finest line of trimmed hats in the city. Our tailored hats, ranging from $5 to $10, are a special attraction, and are unequalled even in the large eastern cities.

HOTEL COLUMBINE, 916-918 West Sixth street. This modern family hotel will be opened on September 20. It has never been occupied before, and is newly furnished throughout. It has steam heat, electric lights, hot and cold water; private baths if desired. Its dining-room is a gem, and well up to date in every respect.

The Girls' Collegiate School reopens Thursday, September 28. New building—gymnasium hall—is now ready, and an invitation is extended to all interested, to call between the hours of 9 and 12, Sundays excepted. Interviews with principals at this time, or by special appointment. Tel. Sunset 717; Home 24256.

Sight is priceless! Better save your eyes by wearing a pair of our eyeglasses. Best A1 crystal reading lenses in 10 year gold filled frames for $1.50; others ask $3.00 to $5.00. Your eyes tested and fitted by graduate State registered optician. Satisfaction guaranteed. Clark's, 351 S. Spring.

It pays to remember, that the only Milliner making exclusively order work and retrimming into perfection, is Mrs. Kruseman 1302 Pico corner Rich. All work guaranteed. Highest references. Prices reasonable. Latest Parisian reports, descriptions, etc., regularly received.

The millinery opening at the Boston Dry Goods Store on Thursday, Friday and Saturday will be an event worthy the consideration of every woman who cares to see the richest millinery ever brought over the Rockies. Neither Paris nor New York stores show anything finer.

The fall opening of the Unique Cloak and Suit House, 245 South Broadway occurs tomorrow. The finest line of women's apparel in the southwest will be on exhibition—high-class novelties from Paris and New York. Don't fail to attend this grand fashion show.

Don't forget the annual fall opening of the Unique Cloak and Suit House tomorrow. You are invited to inspect the swell garments from Paris and New York—the highest class of women's apparel shown in the southwest, no exception—245 South Broadway.

Housekeepers attention. We are prepared to do the best work in the city; have latest improved machinery for cleaning fine rugs and carpets; also make over hair and floss mattresses. City Steam Carpet Cleanings Works, 607 S. Flower street. Both 'phones, M. 427. John Bloesser.

Hardwood floors—laid and finished completely $1.25 per square yd., replace your worn out carpets with our polished floors. We also renovate old floors and make them like new. Smith Floor Co., 425 West Seventh st. Tel. Main 2668, Home 6635.

Christ Church, corner Twelfth and Flower, Rev. Baker P. Lee, rector, Morning service, 11 o'clock; subject of sermon, "The Souls Battle of Tours." Evening service, 7:45 o'clock; subject of sermon, "The Average Man." You are cordially invited.

Alteration and Enlargement
Sale of

PIANOS

For a short time only we are offering a large assortment of instruments —new, slightly used, shop worn and manufacturers' samples, at a saving to the purchaser of from $50 to $200. During the past week the amount of business done has thrown us way behind in our deliveries. Pianos bought the first days of the sale are only just now being taken to their purchasers' homes. As the alterations in our store go forward conditions will be more favorable for the removal of instruments and from now on we can promise more speedy service.

No matter whether you want to spend $175 or $500 this sale offers you the best opportunity you have ever had to get a first-class instrument at a price absurdly below regular. We want to impress it upon your mind that we will extend our installment plan to all those who purchase during this sale. Liberal terms are given to all who so desire.

Another fact is worth remembering about this sale: Every piano we shall dispose of is taken from our regular stock. All the instruments are well-known makes, guaranteed by the manufacturers and backed by the Birkel Company. We are not trying to sell instruments of inferior quality or any "made for sale purposes" goods—glance at the prices and the names of the pianos we are selling and you can judge for yourself of the remarkable values we are offering.

A lot of slightly used Steinway, Weber, Chickering, Kranich & Bach, and [illegible] square pianos as low as $60. Many special bargains in Cecilian Piano Players, Pianolas, Krell Auto Grands, etc.

In our piano department we are doing an especially brisk business. Among notable purchasers of the past few days are

[illegible] High School, Hollywood, Kranich & Bach Grand.

These instruments were purchased not because of any special price [illegible], but because, in both cases, the pianos were artistically perfect, having been put through the most exhaustive competitive tests.

We especially urge all clubs, schools, churches and other public institutions requiring musical instruments to instruct their musical communities to visit our store during this sale—a like opportunity for obtaining splendid piano values is not likely to present itself again in the very near future.

THE GOVERNOR IN HIS COURT.

Oddest of Tribunals Sitting at Soldiers' Home.

Gen. LaGrange Fills the Role of a Daniel.

Pension Day Brings Big Grist to His Session.

The official spanking of the naughty old "boys who will be boys" on Pension Day has begun at the Soldiers' Home.

The oddest little court, a court of which you probably never heard, the "Governor's Court," is getting busy.

The first rueful, dolorous, consignment of Remorse was brought before it yesterday.

The clock in the big headquarters building just ticked 9 when Gov LaGrange rasped back his revolving chair, jammed on his familiar big white hat and started out across the park, passing old veterans lounging about the benches, basking in the holy light of conscious piety—but remembering other court days.

The Governor's Court is held in the little front room of the guard house, where Gen. Grant in his simple old fatigue blouse, open at the front, looks down from one wall, and Maj. McKinley from the other.

At the door stood a little old man wearing the scarlet shoulder sash of the officer-of-the-day, as spruce as a West Pointer. Inside the courtroom the captains of the companies stood "attention" until the Governor took his seat at the little raised dais.

He looked discouraged as the old officer who acts as chief of police called out the first name.

"Well, bring him in," he said with a sigh.

The door into another room opened and a young soldier trembling on the verge of "jim jams," stepped through. His face was white and twitching and his eyes were hot and blood shot.

BORN IN TRANSPORT WAGON.

There was that peculiar something in the "cut of his jib" marking him at a glance for a professional soldier—a regular army man. It developed afterward that he was born in an army transport wagon; has never lived outside of a post.

The Governor looked at him quickly and said "Good Morning."

General LaGrange is a big comfortable looking man with a fine eye. He has that almost feminine lightning instinct for understanding men that has distinguished all great leaders.

The sullen, defensive look went out of the regular's face. He saluted and hung his head.

A regular army man almost invariably pleads guilty.

"I'm very sorry to see you here again," said the Governor very gently.

"Well, I fell by the wayside again, Governor," said the regular gloomily.

"I thought you were working in the hospital?"

"I was sir, but—"

"Why did you quit?"

"Well, sir," said the regular, his face twitching and jerking. "Well, sir, I felt it coming and—"

"Felt what coming?"

"Jag," said the regular briefly. "I knew I was going to get drunk and I didn't want to get drunk while I was on hospital duty, sir, so I just quit."

The Governor looked down at him for a while. The regular squirmed and twitched in the silence. At last the Governor said slowly, "Haven't you got a wife?"

"Yes, sir," said the man, without much interest.

"Where is she?"

"Rosebud Agency."

"What is she doing there?"

"Teaching school."

"You are not supporting her?" asked the Governor, cuttingly.

"She's getting $60 and I'm getting $6; she's better off without me," retorted the regular resentfully.

"She always will be better off without you if you act this way," said the Governor.

He gave the man until Monday to find some light work to keep himself out of mischief. Sentence suspense meanwhile.

The next man was a fat, round-faced old veteran; he looked like a bleached seal. He was pouting like a child. The Chief of Police said something to the Governor which they two understood.

BETWEEN COMRADES.

"You are the man that owes a comrade money; why don't you pay him?"

"I can't do it," whimpered the fat man.

"I used up my pension; I had a couple of old violins in soak. I got them out."

"Did you tell the other man that?"

"Yes," growled the fat man, "and Governor, he said if I didn't pay he would take it out of my hide."

The governor looked grave and ordered the other man into his presence.

He came in sheepishly. He was a lean, scraggly individual with pointed ears and a toothless, snaggy grin. He stood before the Court grinning shamefacedly, scratching his side whiskers.

"Did you tell him that you would take it out of his hide?" asked the Governor sternly.

The toothless man scratched one shin with his other foot and suddenly expanded into an amazing grin. "I was just 'ablowin'" he said with a snicker.

DANIEL COME TO JUDGMENT.

"If you get that dollar and a quarter back, will you drop this quarrel," asked the Governor suddenly.

The men looked at each other and nodded at the Governor.

Gen. LaGrange hitched around in his chair and dug a shiny dollar piece and a quarter out of his jeans. "Take that and you (to the fat man) you can pay me when you get your next pension. That's all."

Another man with one eye under a patch crept in; he had but one eye and an injured look. A man in the hospital owed him $10, and he wanted it back.

The Governor showed a new and sudden interest, demanding to know all about the loan, the interest it drew and the inducements made for the unsecured loan.

"Where is this man who owes this money," he asked.

"In the hospital," answered the man.

The Governor turned and shot one of his shrewd intuitive questions straight into the bullseye. "Is this man sick or is he pretending to be?" he demanded.

One of the younger captains jumped to his feet and answered with sudden vehemence. "He's pretending sir; that man has gone to the hospital to get rid of paying his debts; he owes over $100 and he don't dare go out of the sick wards for fear of meeting some of his creditors."

The Governor stared at his spectacle case—a new law was moulding for the Soldiers' Home.

"What I am going to order is this," he said at last, "I shall post notices to stop this borrowing of money.

"It leads to lying to creditors and lying is the meanest crime a soldier can commit. Further, a set of harpies has grown up to live off the usurious rates of interest they charge their comrades."

The next candidate for justice was a queer little man who wanted permission to sleep outside of the home to take care of his invalid wife in Sawtelle; but to have his meals at the home.

HERE WAS HUMOR.

He handed up a written application that was plentifully decorated with flourishes and resplendent language.

"This is beautiful," said the Governor with amusement. "You didn't write it yourself; did you?"

"No, sir," said the man candidly, "I can't write me own name."

"Well, I don't know about this sleeping outside," said the Governor.

"One day when Gov. Smith was governor of the home a man came up with an application like this. The man said his wife was terribly lonesome for him.

"Gov. Smith was a great joker; so he said to the man that he had seen the wife himself and she told him her husband was a nuisance around the house and she would be obliged to the Governor if he would keep him away

"The man looked at the Governor for a minute in silent admiration; then he said, 'Governor I guess there must be two of us. I haven't got any wife and never did have.'"

However this man was given a pass for two weeks and was promised the desired permission to take effect October 1.

SHE WAS THE STAR.

The last man of the bunch was a woman. She was a fat old "befor' de wah" darkey. She slouched in with a face full of anxiety, courtesying and bobbing.

"Howdy, Govern'r!" she said, and before anybody could get his breath, launched into a long story about a soldier who did some carpenter work and cheated her.

When the Governor could manage to get in a word edgewise he said he couldn't do anything for her; told her to consult a lawyer.

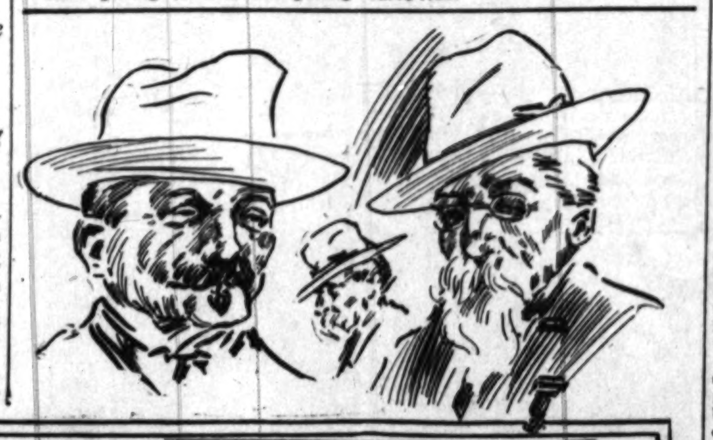
"No seh," she said protesting in sudden alarm, "Ah don' wan' no lawyeh. If he wants fo' to cheat ol Mary, he's just gotta do it then. I jus thought Ah'd come and tell you Mister Gov'ner," and Mary waddled hurriedly out of the room by a forbidden door.

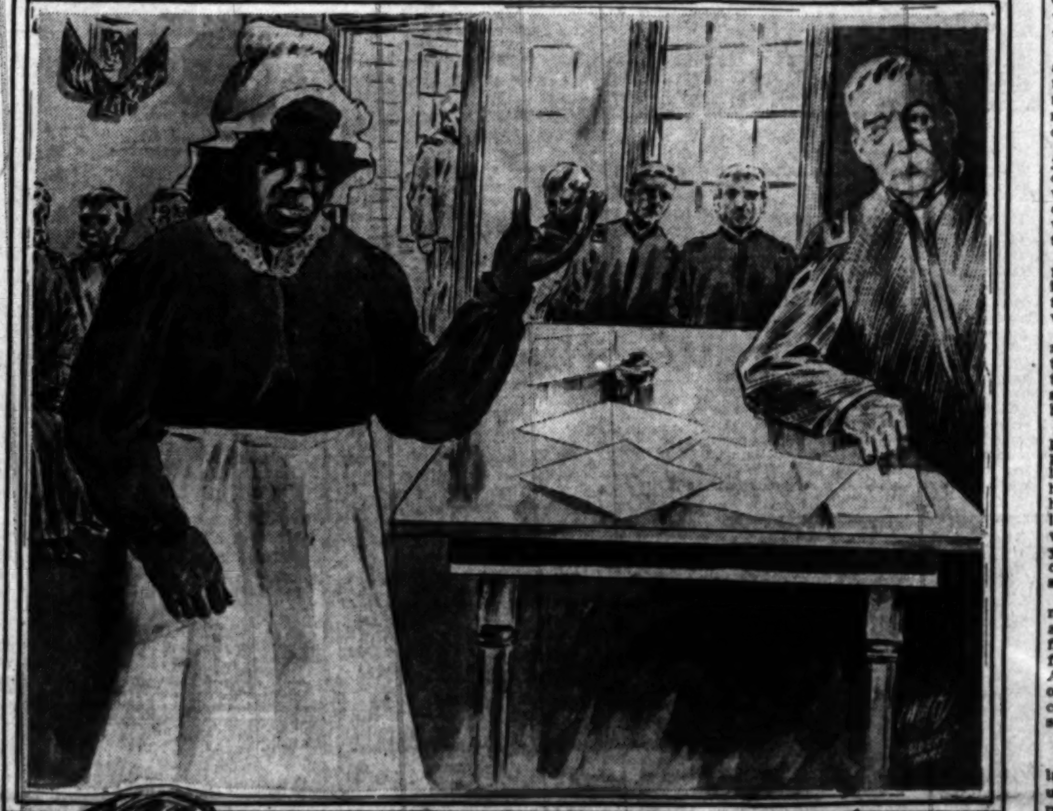
When the last case was disposed of, the Governor left his desk. At the door, he suddenly turned and raised his hand to the military salute. Inside the room, a dozen old captains stood at "attention" with their gloved hands motionless in salute.

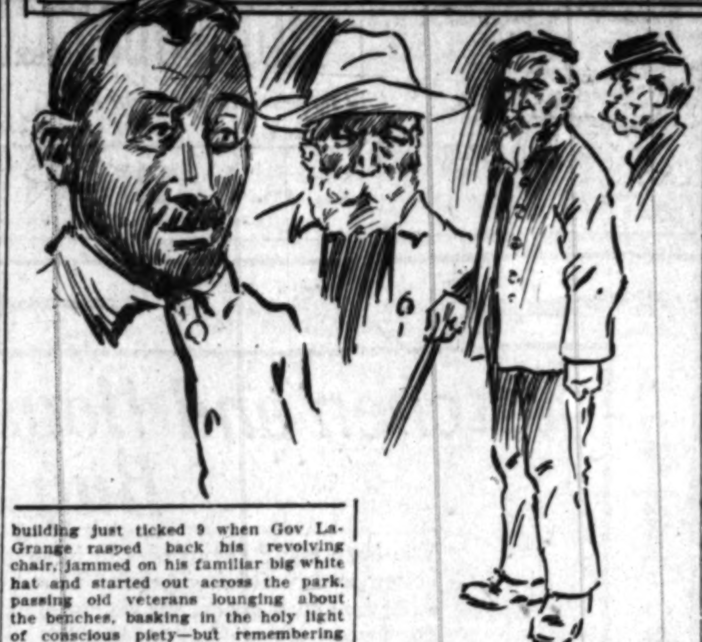
"Gentlemen," said the Governor, "Good morning!"

The court was adjourned.

And the old chief of police and his men went out resignedly and gathered in the grist for the next day.







"Governor's Court" in session at the Soldiers' Home. Here Gov. La Grange disciplines the naughty old boys who have gone astray on pension day. Artist Ewing chose the moment when an old colored woman was brought before the Court. She said a veteran had cheated her; she wanted the Governor to make him pay. Heads in the border of the picture show some of the types who appeared before the Court yesterday.

BOY-HATERS ARE OFFSET.

Club Women Taking up the Cause of Young America.

"Lady's" Revenge While Mamma Had Party.

Features for Coming Session of the Parliament.

"I will appeal the cause of the small boys to the Woman's Parliament," said Mrs. J. D. Gibbs, yesterday, "and I will bring up the boy-suppressing ordinances for discussion before that body, formed for deliberation and dealing fairly and squarely with any problem vitally concerning women."

Mrs. Gibbs hit the nail on the head in selecting a burning issue that will supply more spice to the cubic inch of breath expended at the coming session of the parliament than all the weighty world problems that ever afflict women's clubs.

The small boy is a vital issue, and his affairs at present are giving the mothers, and those who are not mothers, and the policeman at the corner more trouble than all the rest of the city's affairs put together.

Yesterday an eight-year-old was enjoying the dear delight of a roller coaster upon his very own sidewalk where his mother had told him he could coast—and when a boy does what his very own mother tells him he thinks there is no higher court of appeal.

But a boy-hater spied him. The policeman on the beat was summoned in hot haste, and, all reluctant, he went to the house of the eight-year-old and warned him off of his own sidewalk.

The big man in blue scorned to arrest the ambitious young coaster, for though he represented the majesty of the law the boy was lurking in him somewhere and he simply couldn't go back on his kind.

The roller coaster is threatening the peace of many families and many policemen. A southern family has just left a prominent Westlake neighborhood where they had rented a furnished house for the coming season. Their lightning-like surrender of the lease was due to the fact that their dimpled youngsters went out to roll their coasters and carts upon the inviting sidewalk in front of their house.

The ordinance says these things must not be "propelled" there. A man across the street was disturbed; he fiercely threatened arrest, and the affrighted family left the city of the Angels for a more friendly community of humans where accommodations could be had for freckled-faced youngsters.

HER REVENGE.

From Angeleno Heights came a wail last week. An anti-boy lady thought up the very refinement of cruelty for a more fortunate neighbor who owned a rising young American.

The young American rolled a coaster and the vengeful lady sent an officer to arrest him just when his mother was giving a party. Who knows. Perhaps she was not invited to the party.

Dr. Lamb of the Park Commission stood on the corner yesterday and preached quite a little sermon in defense of the boys who want to have something in place of the snow coasting their fathers had back East.

"Why, just think," he said, "only yesterday a little shaver said to me: 'Dr. Lamb, I know where two boy haters live; one is in that house,' and he pointed out a particular childless household; 'and one lives in that house,' and his stubby little finger singled out another. "I wonder the children do not rise up and pass laws against grown-ups."

THEIR CHANCE.

Help is appearing on the horizon for the small boy. Not only will the mothers take it up at the parliament, but grown-up boys are becoming interested. Col. E. R. Fox wrote yesterday to The Times:

"Seeing your article on the woes of the small boy, growing out of ordinances passed at the instance of people who were never small boys themselves, and the uncalled-for restrictions of their liberties, reminds me that I was once a small boy myself, and a pretty considerable one at that. I am not sure that I have entirely gotten over it yet; at any rate, I sympathize with him sufficiently to give him some privileges with which the law cannot interfere.

"I own a bunch of lots on McGarry street, from the Stanton-street school north, some 250 or 300 feet, by 150. This will make a pretty good playground, and they can use it and any interference may be referred to me for adjustment. This is in the factory district near Sixteenth street."

When the discussion comes up in the Woman's Parliament on October 10 or 11, it is more than probable that Mrs. Gibbs, the president, may have to recognize some timid ladies who never before had the courage to stand the sound of their own voices in public.

PARLIAMENT PROGRAMME.

The parliament has more live topics for this year's discussion than ever came up at any former session. The opening address will be an eye-opener for many of the women, as Mrs. Emma A. Summers, the Oil Queen and the busiest and most successful business woman in this part of the country, is going to take time to tell them "What it Means to be a Practical Business Woman." Mrs. Summers is an Ella Rawls Reader of the West, and like that financial wonder of the world she came from the old South.

The permanent art gallery, now identical with the building of the Southwest Museum, will be presented to the parliament by Mrs. W. S. Taylor of the Ruskin Art Club, who has been greatly interested in the preliminary organization, and is a warm advocate of the project.

City and county consolidation will be the subject of debate by two prominent men of the city, and "Shall Educational Institutions be Controlled by Politics?" will take in the library issue.

The sessions of the parliament will be open to the public, and will be held at the First Congregational Church October 10 and 11, the biennial election of officers being held the second day.

On Monday evening, Oct. 9, a brilliant reception and musical will be given in honor of the speakers, and the delegates at the Woman's Club House. Mrs. William J. Scholl will have charge of the music, and Mrs. W. D. Turner of the Pasadena Shakespeare Club will give a reading.

MRS. EMMA SUMMERS,
the oil queen, who will make the opening address of the Woman's Parliament.

MRS. W. S. TAYLOR, who will present the cause of the permanent art gallery at the Woman's Parliament.

STEAMER TALK GETS TO POINT.

BIG MEXICAN FREIGHTER HERE TO LOOK AT BUSINESS.

Frank N. Tandy Will Start a Little Line of His Own Soon, Running South from San Pedro—Mercantile Observers Urge Establishment of Steamer System.

Steamship trade between Southern California and the Western Coast of Mexico is two points nearer realization than it has been before. Louis A. Martinez, principal owner of ten steamers plying back and forth in the Mexican Coast trade, is in town looking around; for the second point, one practical Angeleno has prepared to start his own line, albeit on a very small scale, and will send his first boatload down about October 1.

Martinez, whose business influence and command of the English language are in inverse proportions, met a number of prominent local business men at the Chamber of Commerce yesterday forenoon, and expressed himself happily surprised with the unusual commercial prosperity of this section of the State.

Martinez does not commit himself as to future moves, but says that opportunities were never so great, and that the demand is one that shouts with urgent voice for men and capital.

As a case in point—a local individual recently moved his business to Sinaloa, but on pricing the railroad schedules found that it would cost him more than three times the San Francisco rate to send his household goods. San Francisco of course ships to Sinaloa by the water route, at a cost of a third the rate charged from Los Angeles by land.

Frank N. Tandy, a marine broker who for a year or more has been endeavoring to promote a large line running south from San Pedro harbor, has ceased his agitation, and has gone into practical business. He has secured a small schooner, of 150 tons burden, with auxiliary steam power, and will take down a cargo of machinery on October 1. Mexican agents, he says, have already importuned him to bring back a carload of fertilizer. Tandy has stated to the local Chamber of Commerce that local shippers have requested him to take machinery orders far greater than his small craft can carry.

According to the statements of Martinez, and other observers who have come up along shore, thousands of dollars worth of trade which by all rights belongs to Los Angeles is now going to San Francisco—not because shippers desired to transport their stuff by the lower route, but because railroad tariffs make it practically impossible to send in any other way.

The statement is made that goods from Southern California go north and then come down again, all because of cheaper rates—a useless expenditure of 1000 miles of sea transportation.

Acting Secretary H. E. Gurley of the Chamber of Commerce said yesterday: "Just at the present time the traffic to and from the Mexican Coast is greater than ever, and facilities for transportation—or rather their need—are exciting the attention of Mexican capitalists.

"Thousands of tons of machinery are to go south, much of it to be shipped from Los Angeles. Under the present methods San Francisco is getting the cream of the trade; in return, Mexico has cargo after cargo of fruits or other products which come up, and again San Francisco steamer lines get the benefit."

Mr. Gurley, as well as W. V. Lamphar, George W. Parsons and others, believes that the establishment of a San Pedro line, plying to Guaymas and the other ports, is only a matter of a short time.

OPERATION ON FOOT.

Frank B. Gridley of the Southern Pacific freight department, is at the Sisters' Hospital, where he has lately undergone an operation on his foot that is hoped will restore it to full use. He is reported as getting along exceedingly well after his painful operation.

ELEVENTH SPOKE IN ELECTRIC WHEEL, SANTA ANA PREPARES TO CELEBRATE.

ORANGE COUNTY—"the littlest in the bunch" of her sister counties—is about to swing into the circle of trolley traveled territory.

The Pacific Electric line to Santa Ana that will be completed on or about October 1, will mark the eleventh spoke in the great wheel of steel that radiates from the hub—that's Los Angeles—and reaches out to a circumference which includes the cream of Southern California. Starting with the trolley line running to Whittier as the first spoke, next comes that to Alhambra, then the line to Monrovia as the third spoke, to Pasadena the fourth, to Hollywood the fifth, to Santa Monica the sixth, to Playa del Rey the seventh, to Redondo the eighth, to San Pedro the ninth, to Long Beach the tenth and the eleventh and last to Santa Ana. Where will the twelfth spoke in this great wheel of progress point? From each of these main spokes branch out offshoots leading to intermediate points, making this one of the most trolley-traveled regions in the whole country.

Santa Ana motor car Her present street car system

The people of Santa Ana and Orange county are planning a big public demonstration when the last links shall have been laid and the line is opened. There is to be a barbecue and other festivities appropriate to the occasion when those big electric cars roll into Santa Ana, the county seat, whose streets have hitherto been traversed by the rumbling, groaning motor car that puffs and chugs its way up and down her main thoroughfare and over to Orange on the narrow gauge line with its thirty-two-pound rail. Compared with the modern cars, this little bob-tailed motor looks quaint and curious enough. This line has done duty for almost twenty years, the original being a horse-car line built in 1886, and running between Santa Ana and its depots to Tustin and Orange, approximating a distance of eight miles. About ten years ago the city of Santa Ana began paving her streets, and as the street car company was not able to pay its proportion of the expense entailed, the tracks were taken up except from the corner of Main and First streets to Orange, covering a distance of about three miles and a half. At that time Mr. E. I. Tolle conceived the idea of installing a small engine and boiler in the car, with sufficient power to run it. The experiment was made, and eventually a close corporation of Santa Ana citizens was formed, the line was bought out, and the present motor installed. The stockholders numbered five, and were Messrs. F. P. Nickey, D. H. Thomas, W. B. Hervey, M. A. Menges and E. I. Tolle. They secured a franchise in Santa Ana and an option for five years. These same gentlemen were the first people who really made a move toward the new interurban railway by securing franchises through Orange and Los Angeles counties, and later put forward the scheme to either float the bonds or build the road. The outcome of this was the purchase of the whole business by the Pacific Electric Railway.

HUNTINGTON'S QUEEREST.

Thus it comes to pass that Mr. Huntington is the owner of the quaintest and queerest little motor car on the map. The motorneer, clad in blue overalls and jumper, runs the engine, collects the fares and pulls the cord that emits from the valve the piercing shrieks warning pedestrians of the approach of what was, years ago, advertised as the "smokeless and noiseless" motor. This, of course, must have been a paradox, which Richard le Gallienne defines as "truth standing on its head to attract attention," for the noise of that little motor is like unto that of a thrashing machine, and the smoke that issues from its funnel would eclipse that of a Hudson River steamer. Indeed, the Santa Ana people tell with great gusto the tale of the old German who one day interrupted a street-corner conclave between two leading citizens with the inquiry:

"I say, shentlemen, would you please tole me ven dot steamer goes to Orange up?"

Nevertheless, this puffing, panting little motor car averages about sixty-five miles of travel a day, and covers the three and a half miles from the depots in Santa Ana to Orange in about half an hour. Comparing this, however, with the speed of only three-quarters of an hour which the Pacific Electric plans to make between Los Angeles and Santa Ana, the difference impresses one. Probably the dummy's days are short, and the quaint and picturesque little motor car now in operation will soon be relegated to the past and put out of service to make way for the extension of the Pacific Electric line to Orange, which will undoubtedly follow its completion to Santa Ana. Until then it forms a link with the past that is interesting and impressive.

WHAT IT MEANS.

F. P. Nickey, president of the Santa Ana Chamber of Commerce, and one of the five stockholders of the motor line for ten years, talked with a Times representative yesterday with great enthusiasm about the new electric line and what it will mean to Orange county. "When we first put the project afloat," he said, "people here thought we were crazy. They said it would kill the town by bringing our stores into active competition with those of Los Angeles. They insisted that it would detract trade and prove an injury instead of a boon, but now they are getting wise and realize that it means the doubling of our population, and hence cannot hurt us very much. I arrived in Santa Ana on Christmas Day in 1886, in the midst of the boom, and there were about as many people here then as now, but of a far different type—a mere floating population. Now everything is on a solid, substantial basis, and for ten years we have been moving forward with lasting improvements. I have lived here eighteen years, and I believe the coming of this electric line will build up Orange county and settle up this wonderful valley, which is only partially developed, as nothing else could do. It means progress and a step forward that is simply beyond estimation."

THE GREATEST THING THAT EVER HAPPENED.

Another long-time resident, G. A. Edgar, who has seen the town grow and helped to make it grow, being the oldest merchant in Santa Ana, said: "I moved into this store twenty-two years ago, before the building was fairly finished, and I've been here ever since. I found a small community—no street cars, no telephones, and a population of 6000—which has since doubled. I think this electric line is the greatest thing that ever happened to Santa Ana, and I am not afraid of its detracting my trade to Los Angeles competitors. I say, all hail! and we'll give it a rousing welcome when the first car rolls into town." Mr. Edgar is one of the directors of the Chamber of Commerce.

Santa Ana has just spent $100,000 improving her water system, and now the town is thoroughly piped for the consumption of a million and a half gallons daily, the supply coming from artesian wells, from which it is piped into the million-gallon reservoir located about ten blocks from the center of the city. The new system gives ample fire protection. By means of an automatic valve, a direct pressure can be thrown on a fire in any business part of the city through a twenty-inch pipe, securing a flow sufficient to check the biggest kind of a conflagration.

Ed. Tedford, City Clerk of Santa Ana for almost eighteen years, is enthusiastic over the prospects of the coming of the interurban line. "It will be the biggest thing we ever had," he said. "The town will double in five years. I have lived here thirty-six years and I saw the first load of lumber set down on the site of Santa Ana. In fact I got on horseback and foraged around in the tall mustard to find that pile of lumber which had been hauled by team from San Bernardino, then the nearest place we could get it from. In those days we used to ship our corn and potatoes and other produce on the old steamer Vacaro, that came up from San Diego every ten days and ran up Newport Bay four or five miles to get her cargo.

A HUMMER.

"I tell you this little Orange county—the baby in the bunch of all the counties of Southern California—is a hummer. Do you know we could build a high-walled fence around Orange county and never see the outside world again and all we would lack in the way of provision would be tea and coffee? Fact! We can even raise our own tobacco; we can go to the ocean and bathe in our own surf; we can go to our mountains and hunt our own game and catch our own trout; we can go down to Newport Bay and shoot our own ducks, and there is not a month in the year but we are harvesting crops in this county. Now that we have our water and sewer system settled we are going to turn our attention to our streets and put a nice, clean face on them. For two or three years we shall look after them until they will stand in the front rank."

The electric line to Santa Ana does not duplicate either railroad line, but traverses an entirely new district lying between the Southern Pacific and the sea, thereby opening up a country that has hitherto been without direct communication with the outside world. Garden Grove, that thriving hamlet, will have her first taste of the joys of rapid transportation facilities, and the rich farming and dairying district, the sugar-beet territory about Benedict, adjacent to the Alamitos factory, the small poultry ranches round about Clearwater and Waterville will be cheered by the clanging of the car bells and the trundling of the trolley wheels threading their way "cross country." Leaving the Huntington depot at Main and Sixth streets, the road follows the Long Beach line to Watts station and from there branches off in a bee-line for Santa Ana—a distance of about twenty-six miles without a curve in it—the longest straight line of any electric road in Southern California. It passes through Artesia and Clearwater, crosses the line into Orange county and goes on through Benedict, where it is intersected by the spur of the Southern Pacific which runs from Anaheim to the Alamitos beet-sugar factory, thence on through Garden Grove to its terminus at Santa Ana. It gives a shorter and more direct line than either the Santa Fé or Southern Pacific railways.

WANT MORE.

Like the proverbial small boy at the feast, the Santa Ana, and particularly the Tustin people, now want "more." For Tustin, the acknowledged "gem of the valley," is not yet "in it," being three miles and a half farther down the line and having no railway or trolley connection with the outside world except the branch of the Southern Pacific that runs down from Anaheim. What the Tustin citizens are hungry for now is to have the projected line from Santa Ana to Newport so laid out as to take them in. They feel left out in the cold and are clamoring to get inside the charmed family circle and warm their toes at the genial fire of progress and development. What they want is that the Pacific Electric line from Newport shall pass up the bay and through the San Joaquin ranch to Tustin and thence to Santa Ana, making the final connecting link in the great belt line with Los Angeles at one end and TUSTIN—spell it with capitals—at the other. But "there are others." Some of the Santa Ana citizens think the only direct route to Newport is via what is known as the South Side Addition and extending through the McFadden ranch and over the alkali lands to the head of Newport Bay. This would leave Tustin entirely out of the proposition and the 400 citizens of this thrifty and thriving suburb are pulling strong for a line that leads through their own pepper-lined streets and past their handsome homes and over their splendid roads.

The report that Mr. Huntington spent two days at Newport has given rise to various rumors that are floating around in the air of Orange county. The site of the power-house at Newport would indicate, some say, that Mr. Huntington's intentions may be to cross the bay and follow its north side into the San Joaquin ranch and thence through Tustin—and this is just what the Tustin people are praying for. This route would certainly give a very attractive finish to the lower end of the belt line. Leaving Los Angeles, the trolley traveler could go to Long Beach, thence skirt the coast, with its charming scenery, through all the resorts which line the beach to Newport, a distance of thirty-five miles, thence up picturesque Newport Bay, dotted with its islands, and terminating in a beautiful lagoon a mile and a half in diameter, approached between bluffs which form a natural cañon waterway leading to it, and on through Tustin, "the gem of the valley," to Santa Ana, and thence over the "bee-line" route to Los Angeles again.

But Tustin is not the only one who is clamoring to get in. Orange lifts up her voice and asks that the line be extended from Santa Ana, through Orange, and on to Olive and across to Whittier, connecting there with the line already operating between the Quaker town and Los Angeles and forming another link in the great network of trolley lines that gridirons this southern section by the sunset sea.

TIMES' "LINER" ADVERTISERS—IMPORTANT.

Note Change in Rate for Sunday Classified Advertisements.

Commencing Sunday, October 1, 1905, and thereafter, the rate for Sunday "Liners" will be 1¼ cents per word for each insertion, minimum charge 25 cents, as at present. This slight advance is amply justified by the present Sunday circulation of The Times, which averages over 60,000 copies. (When the 1-cent-per-word rate was established in 1893, The Sunday Times circulation was only 14,000 copies.) The "Liner" rate for the daily—1 cent per word—will stand as at present.

Try It!

The cost is trifling, yet often big transactions are accomplished at small cost. Classified ads. in The Times are frequently the forerunners of large deals, and scores of small business trades are of daily occurrence as a result of them. They cost only a cent a word.

GETTING TOGETHER CITY AND COUNTY.

Proposed Economic Whole Presents a Glowing Picture of Prosperity. County Officials Suggest Ways to Concentrate Sentiment.

THE city and county of Los Angeles! The Greater Los Angeles that is to be a consolidation of the progressive and constantly growing municipalities that dot the county, and the rich and productive expanses of territory that lie spread twixt the one and the other, is the subject of much cogitation nowadays among the thinking part of the community. And the subject is being most thoughtfully considered by the legal representatives of the people on the bench, at the bar, and those holding official position in the service of the county.

And the idea is so splendid; is so full of brilliant promise of what is to be that only in a very general and abstract way has the matter been thought over. With all the water that the thirsty but prolific soil may need, what may not the future hold for the residents of the county? The picture presents a kaleidoscopic vision of prosperity, but the public mind is able for the time being to grasp only in a hazy way the multitudinous questions that will have to be answered before a consolidated city and county becomes an accomplished fact.

With a view to clarifying the atmosphere and reducing the proposition to a very practical basis upon which it must ultimately rest, a number of men prominent in official position, were yesterday asked regarding their views on the practicability of the proposed consolidation, whether it should embrace the entire county, and other points on this subject of absorbing general interest. One of the objects sought is to bring out a very thorough discussion and expression of opinion.

WHAT OFFICIALS SAY.

NOT ALL COUNTY—FREDERICKS.

J. D. Fredericks, District Attorney: A consolidation of the city and county is bound to be effected some day, and this question of bringing such a generous water supply from the Owens River Valley is merely hastening the consummation of the plan. I do not think that it will be wise or, indeed, feasible to include the whole of the county in the consolidation. There are some portions of the county that do not need water—they have water to burn; while to others it means salvation. Speaking generally, I believe that it will be sufficient to include all the municipalities contiguous to Los Angeles, with the intervening territory. The expansion would still continue and other outlying territories will come in as occasion demanded. I will say, however, that if I were living outside of Los Angeles where water is at a premium—as it is in most places—I would be sorry to be left out in the cold. I say this merely because the whole matter rests with the individuals themselves, for they will have to vote upon the measure. Each locality will have to thrash the matter out for itself, but there is one point of view that I think important. All the outlying communities, every one of them is dependent in a greater or lesser degree upon the city of Los Angeles, and it is up to them to get together and decide whether they cannot aid in maintaining the marvelous growth of the city. I know that more often it is said that the city is dependent upon the country surrounding it, but while that also is reasonably true every municipality and community is dependent upon this city, and by a consolidation of all the territory immediately adjacent to Los Angeles a city would be established that would progress along such lines as to make it a marvel. Not only would the water spell out immediate prosperity, but in many other ways benefits would accrue in the way of economical and effective administration.

To promote a systematic discussion of the question, with all the other questions subsidiary to it, I think that mass meetings were to be held in the towns and scattered communities. Such discussion would bring the whole matter down to a practical basis and the public mind be educated to the advantages of the mooted scheme.

JUDGE YORK'S OPINION.

Judge Waldo M. York, Department [illegible], Superior Court: Such magnificent water supply means much to the city and county. While I haven't thought the matter out in detail at all, and therefore do not consider myself competent to dogmatize, I do not know that it will be either wise or just to include the whole of the county in the consolidation. In such event there would be a curtailment of expense in the territory now covered by the city, and a largely increased expense falling upon the sparsely settled districts outside, who would be called upon to contribute to the cost of the city's government. It appears to me that the only territory that could be justly taken in would be the stretch of land extending from the mountains to the sea, at Santa Monica and the Coast, thence down to Long Beach and inland to Inglewood, Pasadena, South Pasadena, Sierra Madre, Monrovia, San Gabriel, Alhambra, and on toward Whittier, with the intervening territory.

In order to permit an exhaustive discussion of the merits of the consolidation plan I think that something along the line of a convention might be useful. Each community will have views upon the proposition and probably will hold meetings for discussion. Delegates might be selected to attend a convention to be held in this city, where the matter could be viewed fairly from every side, and the advantages and disadvantages accruing to the outside sections be laid bare.

OUR GREATER DESTINY.

Judge Walter Bordwell, Department [illegible], Superior Court: Really the question is so important and contains so many phases of interest that without a good deal of study one can only give an opinion on the abstract question as a whole. This bringing of water from Owens River greatly enlarges the destiny of the city and county. Hitherto one had to put a limit to ambition, but now the possibilities ahead are immeasurably increased. To consolidate under a city government other than the territories contiguous to the city of Los Angeles I do not think would be logically sound policy. From the San Fernando Valley, making the circuit of the towns along the foothill country to Whittier and the Orange county line, and so down to the sea and taking in the beach towns would, I think, make a combination that would work out admirably.

The development of all this outside territory is quite as important as the development of the territory embraced within the present city, but if the far outlying territory of the county should be included I think that dissatisfaction will ensue. At the same time this territory left out would have [illegible] as a new county, and with Pomona as the county seat there are without doubt a large number of people that would be glad to set up housekeeping.

One thing, however, is clear to me: that we must either have a consolidation of government or else administer this fine water supply under an independent water district system, for there is much more than Los Angeles can make use of. Such a water district would, of course, include just about the same territory that would be taken in if the consolidation scheme should carry.

I have recently heard some people express anxiety regarding the responsibility of outsiders for the liabilities and bonded indebtedness of Los Angeles. It may serve a good purpose to say that all bonded indebtedness would lie just where it lies now. Los Angeles, and other municipalities, might consolidate but the liability would continue as a burden on the territory incurring such indebtedness. This matter of an increased water supply is being discussed freely enough and I am inclined to think that the people are ripe for an exact outlining of what this whole scheme of consolidation means. One set of governing officials means a curtailment of expense, but the question of representation will have to be threshed out. It will scarcely do to wipe out names that now stand for something, and have them figure merely as city wards or something of that kind. But all these matters I am satisfied could be settled in a perfectly amicable and satisfactory manner if a convention was to meet here, with delegates from all the districts desiring to come in. It would be a convention, I fancy, with everyone ready to cast their ballots the one way, but the varying interests of the different communities could be explained and the advantages to be derived by coming into the city be debated pro and con.

CAUCUS SUGGESTS TRASK.

Judge D. K. Trask, Presiding Judge, Department Four, Superior Court: Whatever plan is adopted I don't think that the county ought to be divided. Such division increases the cost of government without corresponding benefits. There are, I believe, no cases in this State where the people have had an experience such as this where they would be willing to repeat it if they could retrace their footsteps. Personally I am not in favor of enlarging the boundaries of the present city in the manner being suggested. Such territory would be too large to be policed properly, and to have street, building and school facilities attended to in the proper manner. In area Los Angeles is one of the largest cities in the country right now, and history does not show that the large places have the most effective or happiest government.

As for this water supply that means so much to everyone here, it matters little so far as its distribution is concerned whether outlying municipalities come into the fold or not; the water can be distributed to them just the same. But there are a good many questions involved in this one big question of consolidation, and I think that it would be an excellent plan for every precinct in the territory covered—the entire county or otherwise—to hold a caucus and send two delegates to a convention to be held here in the city. One delegate would be sent favoring the consolidation plan and the other would be pledged against it. In that way the discussion in the convention would not be all one way.

JUDGE GIBBS FAVORS HEARTILY.

Judge G. A. Gibbs, Department Eight, Superior Court: I am heartily in favor of a consolidation of the city and county governments, but I must confess that I cannot imagine that including the entire county in the city government would work out advantageously or satisfactorily to anyone. The outlying territory, with Pomona as a center, could very well form a new county, but if the towns and territories adjacent to Los Angeles were included a compact Greater Los Angeles would be formed that could be administered properly and effectively.

I will say right here, however, that neither I myself nor, indeed, very many other citizens will feel ready or willing to surrender our own town names. Pasadena is a name that now means something all over the world, but I imagine that no municipality would necessarily have to surrender its name. I know in Boston the old names still obtain though the places represented are now included in the city.

I think it would be a good plan for every community concerned to hold a mass meeting on the same night, for the purpose of discussing the project. I say that they be held on the same night for the reason that then the discussion in every instance would be spontaneous, and not be influenced by arguments for or against that might filter through to a community by the reports of meetings held in other places, if the meetings were held haphazard at any time.

CAN SEE NO OBJECTION.

Calcin Hartwell, County Recorder: I cannot understand how any valid objection can be raised to a consolidation of the city and county governments, for the economy and convenience of such a plan must recommend itself to every taxpayer. But just what consolidation may mean can easily give rise to differences of opinion. I myself cannot see how the whole of the county can be taken into the city and under a city government. And yet after taking in all the desirable sections that may desire to come in it does not appear to me that there will be enough territory left to establish a new county. If some plan is devised for graduating the taxes then I would be heartily in favor of taking the whole county into the fold. Failing such a plan a large number of citizens would be asked to pay for something they were not getting. Of course the great advantage to most of the territory will be the water supply, and I think that the whole matter of consolidation should be thrashed out locally and public opinion could thus be crystallized. Then it might be well for local communities to send delegates to a convention to meet here, and in more exact manner the question in all its details could be debated.

LOOKS SURE TO DOW.

H. G. Dow, County Auditor: There is no doubt in my mind but that the consolidation plan will be adopted. If anyone is hanging back he would be converted if he only could know how many times property is sold for city or for county taxes because the owner got tangled up on this double set of bookkeeping. There will be a saving of time, of money, and of temper, and there will be a more just and equable development of the Greater Los Angeles.

I have thought of the consolidation as including the whole of the county, but it may be that difficulties will arise that will make that impossible. I can imagine that unless taxes were graduated the burdens of government would be unequally distributed, but the demand for water is so general that it appears to me as if all citizens must come together in a spirit of utmost friendliness and fairness to discuss the matter and in such event I am not afraid but that measures to which all can agree with mutual benefit can and will be arrived at. To make this possible it is essential that method be adopted and I imagine the quickest and most satisfactory way would be by means of a convention. If such a convention should be held it would be a most original one, for every delegate would, I think, be in place ready and anxious to be convinced that the destiny of the community he represented would be in casting its lot in with the city.

TIMES' "LINER" ADVERTISERS—IMPORTANT.

Note Change in Rate for Sunday Classified Advertisements.

Commencing Sunday, October 1, 1905, and thereafter, the rate for Sunday "Liners" will be 1½ cents per word for each insertion, minimum charge 25 cents, as at present. This slight advance is amply justified by the present Sunday circulation of The Times, which averages over 60,000 copies. (When the 1-cent-per-word rate was established in 1893, The Sunday Times circulation was only 14,000 copies.) The "Liner" rate for the daily—1 cent per word—will stand as at present.

See here, you Swedes and Norwegians, over there under the flicker of the Midnight Sun! You quit this blood talk. The world is sick of war and wants no more of it. If you can't settle your differences among yourselves, appoint an umpire. Dead men are no use to themselves or their neighbors. Study how to live and not how to die. It is no trick to die, but it is an accomplishment to live, and it is also "worth while."

DOINGS IN COPPER.

A strong consolidation of copper interests is now going on in the mining world. The most notable recent instance is the purchase of the extensive works of the Greene Consolidated Copper Company at Cananea, Mex., by the firm of Phelps, Dodge & Co. This is one of the largest copper properties in the world. Within the last five years it has divided more than $3,000,000 among its shareholders, and its monthly yield exceeds 5,000,000 pounds of copper, besides by-products of gold and silver aggregating some thousands of ounces.

The same firm owns a controlling interest in the Copper Queen at Bisbee, also a famous copper producer in Southeastern Arizona, and the immense smelters at Douglas, which have a daily output of 110 tons of copper. Other properties of this firm include the Old Dominion and United Gold Mines and smelter and other mines around Globe in Cenral Arizona, where they also have an extensive system of coke ovens on which over $1,000,000 has been spent.

But the interests of this firm are by no means confined to copper mining and development. In the early stages of their enterprises they found that a large per cent. of their profits was absorbed in transportation by teaming and railways. They gradually acquired an interest in the latter till they now control the entire system of the El Paso and Northeastern, the El Paso and Southwestern, and the El Paso and Rock Island railways, giving them an outlet from their various mining properties to a connection with several eastern trunk roads.

No doubt the purchase of the Cananea mines was hastened by attempted negotiations of the Amalgamated with Col. Greene. The Amalgamated now dominates the American market, and as America is the greatest copper producer in the world, it may be said to be the controlling factor in the world's copper market. The capital stock of the Amalgamated Copper Company is $155,000,000, on which it paid in 1904 dividends aggregating $3,077,720. The Rockefeller brothers are the largest stockholders in that company, and if they could have secured the Cananea mines, it is believed they could have dictated the price of copper to the world. As it is they can combine with Phelps, Dodge & Co. when they reach an understanding on a mutual basis, and say whether the price of that commodity shall be 15 or 17 cents per pound, or any other figure that may be agreed upon.

To a certain extent copper even more than oil becomes the basis of artificial illumination. It conducts the electric current which sets the Edison lamp aglow, and the electric light is rapidly taking the place of all other forms of lighting wherever the wires can be profitably strung. But copper is also essential to the transmission of electrical power, both for the factory and the municipal and interurban railway. As its use for these purposes is being enormously extended in every part of the globe, the mining and production of copper assumes proportions never dreamed of a quarter of a century ago.

Lawson's cards in eastern commercial journals seem to indicate that he is endeavoring to depress the copper market, but whether it is a kindly warning to the lambs not to invest and get shorn, or a desire to enable some of his friends to secure a controlling interest in valuable properties like the Cananea, is as yet an unsolved problem. The Wall Street Summary has published several leaders on the subject, but none of them are very enlightening. The writer is evidently at sea himself, or trying to occupy an attitude that will meet either emergency, and it is probably the safest thing to do. While the consumption of copper is enormous and increasing, the resources and facilities for production were never so great as at the present time.

SWEDEN AND NORWAY.

Notwithstanding the fact that the dispatches from Sweden and Norway show that relations between those countries are becoming more and more strained, and that each country is making preparations for a resort to force, the situation has not yet reached a stage which indicates the probability of war. Matters may even go much farther than they have gone at present writing before war will be inevitable as a solution of the difficulty. The conciliatory yet firm attitude which Norway has maintained from the first ought to be, and probably will be, sufficient to ward off actual bloodshed. Besides, there is apparently nothing in the controversy which may not properly be submitted to The Hague tribunal for arbitration, if the existing differences cannot be settled by the nations chiefly in interest.

From all that has appeared thus far in the controversy, Norway seems to have the better part of the argument. There has never been a real political union between the two countries. While they have had one king in common for nearly one hundred years, the independent, separate sovereignty of Norway has never been surrendered. The union with Sweden was entered into for strategic and defensive purposes only. For something like one thousand years, Norway has been an independent and practically autonomous kingdom, with its own laws, parliament and constitution. In the union with Sweden, this independence was not surrendered. The right of either party to the compact to withdraw at will was unchallengeable. Norway, by an almost unanimous vote, decided to withdraw, and did so, as is well remembered. The right of withdrawal has been fully recognized by the Swedish King, and all the just points of difference that remain to be decided relate to boundaries and the proper defense of the frontier.

There is no inclination on the part of Norway to recede from her action in withdrawing from the "Rigsakt," or act of union. On the contrary, at an election held August 13, at the request of the Swedish government, the vote in favor of dissolving the union was about 500,000 for to 180 against. The significance of this vote is emphasized when the fact is taken into account that about 25,000 Swedes are permanent residents of Norway, and that these, almost to a man, voted with the Norwegians.

It may be taken as a foregone conclusion that Sweden will not be able to coerce Norway into continuing a union that has become obnoxious. Should Sweden attempt such a thing, the Norwegians will defend what they justly regard as their rights to the last man and the last drop of blood. Norwegian independence will surely be maintained unless some powerful nation or nations of Europe should intervene. Such intervention is not probable. The jealousies of European politics are such that any disturbance of the "balance of power" serves to bring all the leading nations into any important controversy that may arise. Possibly there may be war between Norway and Sweden before the present disagreement shall have been adjusted; but such a war would doubtless be of short duration, and would end in the vindication of Norway.

PRINTING AND PROMOTION.

Leslie's Weekly recently contained an article on "Building Up a Commonwealth by Printer's Ink." On reading it appears to be a "poof" for the California Promotion Committee of San Francisco.

The author shows how California is the pioneer State in the organized work of building up a commonwealth by printer's ink. These methods have since been taken up in Hawaii, in Oregon, in Colorado and in New Orleans. Then he goes on to tell about the California Promotion Committee of San Francisco as the printer's ink distributor of the Golden State. The author tells us how, in California, "the 148 chambers of commerce and development associations all closely work together through the central organization, known as the California Promotion Committee."

"Not by a jugful"—at least, so far as the Los Angeles Chamber of Commerce is concerned, no reference to which is found in the article. The Los Angeles Chamber of Commerce has carefully and persistently refrained from having any connection whatever with the California Promotion Committee of San Francisco, which is devoted, ostensibly, to furthering the interests of the State at large, but really to aiding the big landowners of Northern California to dispose of their unprofitable tracts, and lately, as we have seen, to attempting the extraordinary task of getting the Federal government to give those landowners several million dollars of the people's money to reclaim their own lands, which were wrested from the people years ago.

It is safe to say that for every new settler brought to California by the California Promotion Committee, at least a thousand have been brought to Southern California by the Los Angeles Chamber of Commerce (not to speak of that other power, The Times.) During the fourteen years of its existence, the chamber has distributed more than a million pieces of attractive and reliable printed matter, besides making a number of exhibits at world's fairs that have excited the admiration and surprise of all visitors, culminating with the display now in place at Portland, Or.

The only oblique reference in this article to anything like the Los Angeles Chamber of Commerce is this. After describing sundry junketing trips taken by the Promotion Committee to other parts of the State, the writer says: "The results of all this campaigning are apparent. Obscure and unsettled communities, which wanted, most of all, good, strong men to develop their resources, have formed development associations and are publishing 'literature.'" Presumably, Los Angeles county is one of these "obscure and unsettled communities." Surely, it has published literature—and mighty good literature, too.

Meantime, the Los Angeles Chamber of Commerce is too busy to be tooting its own horn. It is sawing wood—and keeping out of politics and graft.

PATENT MEDICINE "BOOZE."

The Commissioner of Internal Revenue has just rendered a decision which, if adhered to and faithfully enforced, will put a stop to an abuse of large proportions which has been allowed to go on unchecked for years. The decision reverses a ruling made several years ago by the Internal Revenue Department relative to patent medicines containing distilled liquors. Under the new ruling it is required that manufacturers of these medicines must take out licenses as rectifiers and liquor dealers, and druggists who sell the medicines will be required to take out licenses as retail liquor dealers.

This decision will seriously affect a considerable number of so-called "proprietary medicines" which are composed almost exclusively of distilled spirits, the drugs which they contain being of little or no medicinal value. For many years these so-called "medicines" have been retailed in drug stores all over the land, and have been exempted from the penalties and restrictions with which the liquor traffic, when honestly avowed as such, is properly surrounded. In its ultimate results, this dealing in liquor under false pretenses has amounted to practically the same thing as the operation of "blind pigs," excepting that this illicit traffic has been permitted by the authorities, while the proprietors of real "blind pigs" have been subject to arrest and fine. The injustice of this system to liquor dealers who honestly pay licenses for doing business is apparent. It is plainly an evasion of the revenue laws, and the wonder is that the abuse has been permitted so long.

The instructions of the Commissioner of Internal Revenue to collectors are quite sweeping, though not unreasonably so. He requires them to impose the special tax on manufacturers of every compound composed of distilled spirits, "even though drugs have been declared to have been added thereto, when their presence is not discoverable by chemical analysis or it is found that the quantity of drugs in the preparation is so small as to have no appreciable effect on the liquor." The commissioner further declares that the same ruling shall apply to "every alcoholic compound labeled as a remedy for diseases, and containing in addition to distilled spirits only substances or ingredients which, however large their quantity, are not of a character to impart any medicinal qualities to the compound." The ruling will go into effect on December 1, 1905.

There are some remedies which possess acknowledged remedial value, and which also contain distilled liquors, but only in sufficient quantity to serve as a preservative. With the sale of these there will probably be no interference. The purpose of the government is clearly to prevent the sale of liquor as medicine without the payment of the prescribed tax. Such sale is as manifestly fraudulent as any other form of illicit traffic in liquor. The government needs and is entitled to the revenue of which it is thus defrauded.

"YELLOW ON A FIELD BUFF."

Out from the brutal and vulgar hurly-burly of graft and sordid commercialism that envelops New York like a clammy vapor, comes the cry of an artistic soul in its agony. Verily, it is as the voice of one crying in the wilderness, for it will fall upon dull ears in that wild hullabaloo town of Gotham, where the pursuit of the coin for the coin's sake alone dominates with pulicene restlessness every walk of life from Wall street to the dirty reeking, stench-dealing alleys of the East Side.

Yet such is the sympathetic force of a cry from an artistic soul that, once uttered, it gyrates in the circumambient atmosphere infinitely as well as indefinitely and is sure to find an answer ultimately, if not sooner, somewhere in the vast void, as the trembling whisper of a Marconi telegram from shore is caught up by a wandering ship at sea or on a pole erected for wireless operations on perhaps another far-distant headland jutting out from the mainland. For instance, that soul wail of which we speak now reaches the ears of us who sit by the sunset ocean, under blue skies, amid the glory of deathless bloom and the splendor of highways flamehedged with flowers.

The cry in question comes from no less an esteemed source than our distinguished namesake the New York Times. It is a cry of protest. It is a denouncement of the methods by which money is made, but not of the way or ways by which Pierpont Morgan, John D. Rockefeller, the big life insurance touts and grafters, Tammany Hall, the sweat shop vampires or the counterfeiters make it, as one would naturally suppose. It is, instead, a protest against the way Uncle Sam himself—who manufactures coin and currency in his print shop at Washington—makes it. In short it is a swipe (if a cry may properly be called a swipe) at the Government's Bureau of Printing and Engraving. It is the appearance of the new $20 gold certificates that has caused the soul's anguish of our contemporary, and which causes it to weep bitter tears, as follows, to wit:

"The new certificate centers the portrait of Washington which it bears, and that is an advantage. But on the other hand, all of the text which can be readily read is 'United States of America' and 'Twenty Dollars,' with a staring and offensive interpolation of a bright yellow '20' at the top and 'in Gold Coin' at the bottom, with another '20' at the left side in staring yellow on a field of buff, while the back is printed in a yellowish brown ink much less attractive than the orange of the older issue. Why should not the authorities take counsel of somebody who knows about these things, which is to say of artists, and follow their advice, subject to the practical requirements? Some years ago this was done, with results of fairly satisfactory performance and still more promise, Mr. Blashfield, Mr. Shirlaw, and Mr. Low being among the artists employed. But the inertia of the Bureau of Engraving, in which there is no evidence that an artist has ever been employed, seems to have been too much for the spirit of progress. At any rate, we have a right to require that persons who are not artists should not undertake to do what pretend to be works of art."

Dear brother of the tripod, what difference does it make? Why allow a thing like this to concern you or us, who are of the world apart—artists, newspaper men, soul-throbbers, as we are. In the first place our eyes and our artistic sensibilities are so little likely to be offended by $20 gold certificates. We never see them. If the government makes a botch of the currency, either paper or metallic, up to the amount of a $2 bill, then let us kick, as we have a right to do, for then are we legitimately within our pursuement.

The other side of the world won't care. These new $20 gold certificates look all right to Russell Sage. The real estate agents of Los Angeles will gobble them up hungrily without regard to the painfulness of that staring slop of "yellow on a field buff." Walking delegates will pocket them and bartenders will turn them, beer-soaked, into their villainous coffers. But, as for us, wot t'ell? We never see them, and what need we care? [P. S.—Perhaps this editorial is from the pen of one of the "slaves" of The Times?]

"AS YE SOW."

A dispatch from Chicago notes as an unusual occurrence the fact that a "ministerial matinée" was held at McVicker's Theater, in that city a few days ago, upon invitation of William A. Brady and Joseph R. Grismer. The ministers of all denominations were invited to witness a performance of "As Ye Sow," a play written by Rev. John Snyder, and said to be the first play ever written by a minister and presented on the American stage. "There were over one thousand ministers at the matinée," says the dispatch, "which was given exclusively for them, the theater being closed to the paying public."

This was indeed a unique entertainment—or, rather, the audience was unique, in that it was composed entirely of ministers. The latter, as is well known, seldom visit the theater, and therefore, as a matter of course, they know comparatively little about it. Yet it is not at all an uncommon thing for them to inveigh against the theater as an institution which is altogether wrong and pernicious. Many ministers, indeed, stay away from the theater all their lives because they are under the mistaken impression that it is wholly bad. Members of churches, many of them, often do the same thing. Having been told that the theater is wholly evil, pernicious and debasing, they accept the statement without question and govern themselves accordingly, when a little conscientious investigation would teach them the folly and injustice of such a conclusion.

The truth of the matter is that the theater is neither wholly bad nor wholly good. It is a human institution, with many human imperfections. It is both good and bad. It is neither so good nor so bad as it might be. It is good or bad in proportion as the public make it so. If all good people should stay away from the theater, it would speedily degenerate into an institution vastly worse than it is today, for the aim of purveyors of amusements would be to cater to the wants of their patrons. Conversely, if all bad people should stay away from the theater it would become better, if it could survive the shock, for its remaining patrons would demand a higher standard of entertainment. It is to be feared, however, that if only high-class entertainments were given on the stage, the patronage would be so light that most of the theaters would be compelled to close for want of support.

Ministers say that their mission is not to reform the theater. In one sense this is true. In another sense it is not, for their religion, if rightfully interpreted, should lead them to a desire to make better all things that they find to be evil. It is not the best way to accomplish the reform of a sinner to pass him by disdainfully "on the other side."

The church and the theater, as a matter of fact, are two of the most powerful influences that affect the welfare of mankind. They ought to travel hand in hand for the uplifting of the human race, instead of pulling in opposite directions, as they so often do. A little more toleration on both sides, a little more of the milk of human kindness, a little more of genuine aspiration after the best that is obtainable, would serve to bring these great institutions nearer together in the harmony and oneness of effort which should characterize them.

There are many things in common between the church and the theater. It would be better for both if there were more incidents like the performance of "As Ye Sow" in Chicago. The clergy and the stage would then come to understand each other better, and many unreasonable prejudices would be broken down.

FOXY OLD JOHN BULL.

Now at last we have a clew as to the real cause of the exacerbation of feeling displayed by the Germans for the British. Heligoland is disappearing! Only fifteen years ago the little island lying off the mouth of the Elbe was made the basis of a deal between England and Germany. It had been in the possession of the former power since 1807, when Nelson appropriated it from the Danes. But it had never become a real place of strategic importance owing to the absence of harbor accommodation. However, after Germany grew to be a world power, it was a constant aggravation to the sensitive pride of the Teutons to have an island so close to their shores inhabited by their own people, and yet flaunting the flag of England. Not a steamer could pass in and out of Hamburg without catching sight of that exasperating bit of red bunting, the Union Jack. The annual holiday seekers on the island, a favorite bathing resort, were mostly Germans, and the sight of British scarlet-coated sentries pacing the cliffs was apt to rob the morning dip of half its pleasure. So it was a real concession to German national sentiment when, in the early days of the reign of the masterful young Kaiser Wilhelm II, Heligoland was transferred to the Fatherland.

On the German side the transaction was acclaimed as a master stroke of diplomacy. The British hauled down their blamed old flag, carted, or rather barged, away their rusty old cannon, and the Germans sailed in with their newest big guns and their tallest Prussian grenadiers. Throughout England there was a sharp spasm of regret—a tearful disposition to invoke the shade of the heroic Nelson with a big spyglass clapped by the remaining hand to the eye that had not been put out of business by an enemy's bullet. However, the transaction was completed without any undignified display of emotion.

But let no mistake be made. John Bull is not in the habit of giving something for nothing. He got in exchange for Heligoland the important East African harbor of Zanzibar.

Zanzibar, really an island close to the mainland of Africa, had for so long been under the commercial influence of England and of India on the other side of the Arabian Sea, that no pains had been taken up to that time to bring its Sultan formally under the suzerainty of the British crown. But in the meantime, German liners had begun to make the place a port of call, and German merchants to open establishments alongside the warehouses of the Anglo-Indian traders. So John Bull had gradually been wakened up to a realization of the disagreeable fact that he could no longer have things all his own way in this patch of African territory, nominally an independent Mahommedan sultanate. Friction resulted; Germany and England were on the point of a quarrel over this one of their many bones of contention. John Bull solved the difficulty by proposing to swap Heligoland for a surrender of all German political rights in Zanzibar, and to this Germany assented even though the island-harbor lay right off the coast of her East African dominions. It was only the unknowing in England who grumbled over the exchange. But political and commercially-minded John Bull winked the other eye, and complacently awaited developments.

Since the deal was completed, Zanzibar under the British flag has gone ahead wonderfully—has become a busier and more important mart of commerce than ever—has proved itself, in fact, to be like a bit of real estate on Los Angeles Broadway, constantly increasing in value. But as for Heligoland—well, the sea is simply devouring it, acre by acre.

No sooner were the Germans in possession than the erosive action of the North Sea billows came to be noticed, and German engineers have been busy all the time in filling up crevices in the rocks, building breakwaters to check the pounding of the waves, and generally trying to save the island from demolition. But all their efforts, alas! have proved in vain. Not merely are the sandy cliffs collapsing, but the very rock floor on which they stand is breaking away, rendering any engineering work of underpinning useless. When the German flag was hoisted fifteen years ago, the island had a circumference of three and three-quarter miles. This has now shrunk to a little less than three miles. And the tumbling to pieces is still going on! There soon won't be land enough for a lighthouse; indeed the day is looming ahead when merely a lightship flying the German flag will be warning the ships of all nations—British craft the most numerous—from venturing too near to the treacherous shoal of a vanished Heligoland, and only a buoy at sea will be the mark for imperial yacht races.

No wonder that the Germans are counting themselves the victims of a "gold brick" deal. Foxy old John Bull!

IF THEY WERE ——.

Justin Huntly McCarthy's famous romantic drama "If I Were King" which has been presented at the Burbank recently, and received with such favor, brings to light a poem entitled "If I Were Queen" from the pen of a Los Angeles woman, Charlotte Bright Ritch, written in reply to the poem "If I Were King" which Francois Villon, the chief spirit in the drama, is made to quote with such feeling.

The poem "If I Were King" expresses the desire of a man to please the one loved with impossible things, were he in power, while Mrs. Ritch in "If I Were Queen" expresses a woman's great, unapproachable love in the sacrifices she is willing to make for the one loved, without counting the cost.

Both poems are quoted below:

"IF I WERE KING."

By Justin Huntly McCarthy.

If I were king—ah, love, if I were king!
What tributary nations would I bring
To stoop before your scepter and to swear
Allegiance to your lips and eyes and hair.
Beneath your feet what treasures I would fling:
The stars should be your pearls upon a string,
The world a ruby for your finger-ring,
And you should have the sun and moon to wear
If I were king.

IF I WERE QUEEN.

If I were queen, ah, love, if I were queen,
And you a minstrel, dear, with just a song
To bring with all your hearts best love,
And lay it at my feet—
I would fling down the jewels rare
That glistened in my golden hair,
To go with you where love should dare
(In some sylvan dell, where wild birds dwell)
To erect a throne—just a sweet, sweet home,
Where you, my king, robed in love's completeness,
That garb which makes a true man royal,
Should rule alone—I your subject loyal.

I could not miss the glittering stones
That I cast aside for matchless treasure,
For in your eyes, dear, so true and tender,
Love's light would shame the diamond's splendor.
Yes, in your arms love, I would be blest,
A happier queen than all the rest,
All this for you I would gladly do,
And without a single heartache, too,
If I were queen, dear love, if I were queen.

BIRTH OF A WAR SONG.

Scenes Attending the First Public Presentation of "The Battle Cry of Freedom."

[Chicago Record-Herald:] Five thousand men were crowded into the old Courthouse Square in Chicago on a summer's afternoon in 1862. From a platform in the square a man was speaking, his discourse filled with the fire and eloquence of patriotism. He was urging the men before him to enlist for the war, and the excitement of the multitude was at fever heat. As he talked, a man in his prime, big, erect, handsome, pushed his way toward the platform. As he started up the steps, George F. Root handed him a piece of paper. Words and music were written on the paper, and the ink was not yet dry.

"Sing it!" cried Root, eagerly. "Sing it! It is just written."

"I will," responded the stalwart young man as he elbowed himself to the front. The speaker finished and the young man stepped into his place. He glanced at the simple words and music of the song, then flinging aside his hat and tossing back his luxuriant hair sang in powerful and resonant tones, "The Battle Cry of Freedom."

When he concluded the chorus he raised his hands and cried, "Now everybody sing the chorus," and led by him 5000 voices were raised in mighty melody:

"For we'll rally 'round the flag, boys,
We'll rally once again,
Shouting the battle cry of freedom."

That day a new patriotic song was born. That night the recruiting station was full to overflowing. George F. Root, author, and Jules Lumbard, singer, were national characters.

In the Coliseum at Chicago, more than a quarter of a century later a vast throng was gathered. It was the occasion of the Root memorial services. The songs which had come from the pen of the man—songs which had inspired the souls of marching thousands—had been sung, all the songs save one, and the people wondered why the "Battle Cry of Freedom" had been omitted from the programme. Then a man of giant stature stepped forward. He was erect, sturdy and walked with the elastic tread of a soldier, but the great head of shaggy hair was silvery. Suddenly he began to sing, and a voice which contained all the power and resonance of 1862 gave forth the old song.

"For, we'll rally 'round the flag, boys," began the chorus, but the great voice of the old singer was drowned in the answering shout as men, women and children sprang to their feet and joined him. Over and over again the chorus repeated, and then the building shook with applause as the old man stood and bowed before the tumult of an ovation which would have made glad the heart of a king. It was Jules Lumbard singing the song of a friend in memory of him who had written it.

And then a hush fell upon the assemblage, for the white-haired singer began "Just Before the Battle, Mother," and tears came into the eyes of many who recalled the days of '62, when Lumbard had sung the same song. They went back in memory of the times when the old man was young, when he and his brother, Frank, led the singing in the old wigwam when Lincoln was nominated for the Presidency; they recalled the voice that inspired young men, to don the blue, the voice that translated the arguments of patriotic orators into music; they remembered the man in the midst of vast throngs of other men stirring them with his melody and they could not forget that day when this same singer stood at the bier of the emancipator and sang his requiem.

Of such there are many, on both seaboards, scattered well between, and in other lands. An accurate and unbiased verdict letting down at this day the fine record of Commander Young—soon otherwise to enter the rank of captain—would, perhaps, be more keenly felt by his friends because of the fact that he holds more emblems of distinction for personal achievement in the face of danger than does any other officer in the United States Navy. Happily, Commander Young will be able to prove, among other important things, that more than once he had warned Washington of the unsafe condition of the Bennington's boilers. Here's wishing him a fair trial and complete exoneration!

A Hint to Men Who Talk Too Much.

At a dinner given one night last week by the University Club there were two speakers who might properly be called distinguished, one for his integrity as an observer, the other for his ubiquity as a talker—Capt. A. C. Grant and Dr. John R. Haynes. The presence of the latter, with the usual wad of manuscript in his hand, was eloquently adumbrant of the topic soon to be discussed. Need it be named? Oh, very well: "Municipal Ownership of Public Utilities."

Dr. Haynes has a bottomless barrel filled to the top with discursive essays on the desirability (from his and Howton's viewpoint) of municipal ownership, the initiative, referendum and recall, and similar and sundry pernicious forms of local government. Nor is there any record that urging ever was needed to induce him to bring forth and read them. "Like Weir Mitchell and Sir Conan Doyle, I find my recreation in literature," Dr. Haynes is said to have gravely remarked upon a time.

It isn't often anyone bothers himself to take a fall out of the scribbling sawbones, but once in a while it does happen. It did at the University dinner, through Capt. Grant, whose comparatively brief residence in these parts had not intimately acquainted him with the Haynes proclivity to spout upon all occasions. It was as well. In the course of a terse, straightaway talk, the captain, drawing dry powder from the inexhaustible store of his personal experiences with Socialism in Australia, shot broadsides of facts into the wordy fabric of the Haynes defenses which brought them tumbling about their designer's ears, to the quiet delight of every clear-brained clubman present.

Capt. Grant is an authority who speaks seldom in public. Perhaps there is a hint in that for some who, like Howton and Haynes, merely pose as authorities. Hein?

AT THE SCHOOL BOARD SESSION.

MANY PROBLEMS ARISE BEFORE FATHERS OF EDUCATION.

New District Boundaries Placed, and Another District Formed—Appealing Petition of Suburbanites Falls Into Empty Exchequer—Minor Matters of Mention.

As the time draws near for the opening of the city's many schools, the maze of problems which presents itself to the members of the Board of Education, always a study of making both ends meet, becomes a perplexity of snarls and tangles.

An extended session took place yesterday. The chief grievance was that of a committee from the vicinity of Figueroa, Vernon and Grand, who are sorely in need of a new schoolhouse. Some of them have to send small children more than a mile to their teachers, and theirs is surely a righteous plea. They want a schoolhouse so much that they are willing to loan money to the board to build it—but the board in turn has no power to borrow, and so they must await their opportunity. The matter was referred to the Building Committee, after a three-quarters-hour discussion, and if possible they will do something.

A number of changes have been made in school districts. The northern boundary of Boyd street district will be changed to First street, and the southern boundary to Sixth street, advanced pupils living west of San Pedro street will attend the Olive street school, and those living east will attend the Hewitt street school.

The northern boundary of the Ninth street district will be changed to Sixth street, between Los Angeles street and Central avenue. The western boundary of this, and the eastern boundary of the Grand avenue district will meet at Los Angeles street.

The southern boundary of the Amelia street district will extend to First street, between Main and Alameda streets, the western boundary running to Main street between First and Arcadia streets.

The eastern boundary of the Olive street school will go to Main street, between Sixth and Fourth streets.

The western boundary of the Second district will run to the Los Angeles River, between Fourth and Seventh streets.

The southern boundary of the Utah street district will go to Fourth street, between Pecan street and the Los Angeles River.

A new district is to be formed—the Fourteenth street district.

The High School and Polytechnic High School will be open for enrollment next Friday.

The resignations of Florence O'Neill, W. A. Ellis, Grace Carpenter, Louise J. Slatterlee and Minnie L. Kellogg have been accepted. A number of assignments and transfers were made yesterday.

Considerable discussion on the pros and cons of the lunch question occupied nearly half an hour, Davis arguing conservatism in the first establishment of the counter at the High School—a conservatism deemed by some of his confreres a little too comprehensive.

Synopsis of the New Fall Silks

SO numerous are the silks which will be considered correct for the coming season that a full description of them all would surely fill a book of which the index would be quite lengthy, and in only certain senses could they be mentioned under one heading—that is, ALL are beautiful and ALL are original—$1 to $7.50.

Each individual silk has by fashion's proclamation been ordained for some special article of apparel or for some special occasion.

For Waists—Plaids in picturesque profusion in the well-known Scotch clan designs; also in the more elaborate Roman and French ideas—Roman and Persian stripes—Warp Printed Taffetas in Oriental designs and colors—Striped Ombre Taffetas, with small jacquard figures, and broche effects in mottled colors.

For Evening Wear—Printed Crepes in old world Pompadour and Dresden effects.

For Linings—Rich, high quality Brocades, in soft colorings.

For Fall Costumes—A collection of new figured Silks in artistic colors and color combinations.

For Afternoon or Reception Wear—A new and original selection of Warp Printed Taffetas.

Plain Colored Silks will be popular, and these have a tendency towards the soft, clinging fabrics, such as Chiffon Taffeta, Satin Messaline, Peau de Cygne, Crepe de Chines, Peau Messaline, Crepe Radium, all possessing a soft, bright metallic luster. Black Silks will spring into popularity again for fall wear.

Our collection of Silks forms a veritable art gallery, coming as they do in every color imaginable, including the season's predicted leaders—mulberry, prune, plum, wine, garnet, old blue, cadet, reseda, bronze, myrtle, gray, navy and a few shades of brown.

THE PUBLIC SERVICE.

SUMMARY OF THE DAY.

The city's growth has so far outstripped that of the Engineer's Department as to occasion a blockade in street improvement and sewer building; all former records are broken.

The troubles of Engine Company No. 7 were yesterday aired before the fire board.

James Elgin, a colored Lothario in the fire department, was yesterday fined a month's pay.

The estate of the late Miss Sallie McG. Isom, who was the occupant of a professor's chair in a southern university, is before the Probate Court, but is somewhat entangled through an old boom purchase of real estate.

A mother suing her infant child is a new situation in the courts. In this case, however, Mrs. J. Brockman is seeking to benefit her child in whose behalf she holds certain property in trust.

The hearing of Ruby Casselman was postponed till October 5.

WHERE DID RUBY STORE THE MONEY?

Miss Ruby Casselman did not break down yesterday morning when brought into court.

There were no tears in her pretty eyes, she did not even appear to need sympathy.

No dramatic scene followed her appearance and there was more excitement before than after she entered and the bailiff rapped for attention.

Justice Rose's courtroom was packed with women and a few young men all eager to catch a glimpse of the young girl accused of so many shrewd forgeries.

The preliminary examination, set for yesterday was postponed until October 5 and the girl spent several hours with two detectives who visited places in the city in an attempt to find money they believe is secreted. No money was found.

Friends of Miss Casselman who knew her as a Sunday-school teacher, are deeply interested in her case.

The statement was made by would-be friends yesterday that the young woman is so unsophisticated that she is in danger of being railroaded through the courts.

Women sympathized with the innocent-looking girl and the corridors buzzed with sentimental rot and nonsense.

But Attorney S. P. Mulford yesterday said he had taken charge of the case of Miss Casselman.

"I will do all in my power for the young woman," said the attorney, "and she will have a fair trial. There are certain things, however, that will not be brought out until her case comes up. In the meantime she will be looked after and will have the necessary counsel."

Mr. Mulford is not only interested in the girl as an attorney but also as a member of the First Methodist Church Sunday-school of which the attorney is an officer. Mr. Mulford became well acquainted with Miss Casselman in her capacity as teacher and is not disposed to give up until the guilt of the girl has been established beyond the possibility of a reasonable doubt.

Many tales were being circulated yesterday concerning the young woman and every attempt was being made to surround her case with mystery.

Some profess to believe that Miss Casselmal forgeu the checks in order to obtain money to buy a trousseau as it is known she was keeping steady company with a young man.

From Joseph B. Alexander, proprietor of The Normandie, a rooming-house at No. 455 South Broadway, it was learned that Miss Casselman came often to visit a young jeweler named E. C. Knopfe, whose office is in the building.

The landlord stated that Knopfe often spoke of his love for Miss Casselman.

Several days ago Knopfe told the landlord that Miss Casselman would come to the office during the afternoons to help at the work of stone polishing. Miss Casselman during the past few weeks is said to have appeared regularly at the noon hour and spent the afternoons in Knopfe's office.

The landlord declares that Knopfe and Miss Casselman were engaged to be married and says that his tenant told him the wedding would soon take place.

The lover of Miss Casselman is described as an exemplary young man, against whom nothing can be urged.

The young jeweler is said to have known nothing whatever concerning the forgeries until the account of his sweetheart's arrest was printed in the papers.

In conversation yesterday the lover said that Miss Casselman had acted queerly for the past few weeks and when asked to explain her actions would say she was not well.

Young Knopfe met Miss Casselman while both were attending the First Methodist Sunday-school. He became greatly enamored of the girl and it seemed to be a decided love match. Both were welcomed to the social functions of the church and the young gem-cutter was the recognized "company" of Miss Casselman.

Miss Casselman is reported to have speculated in beach property and is said to have purchased two lots in Huntington Beach near the Methodist camp-meeting headquarters from the Huntington Beach Land Company.

Though the clerks at the office remember the name there is no record on the books of Miss Casselman having made purchases.

AT THE CITY HALL.

PHENOMENAL IS CITY'S GROWTH.

DEPARTMENTS ARE SWAMPED BY NEW BUSINESS.

Some Applications Have Hung Fire for Almost Two Years—City Engineer Says City Has Outstripped His Office and That the Worst is Yet to Come.

Complaints of property-owners about delays in Council action on petitions for street improvements and for sewers have multiplied at the City Hall until the condition has almost reached an acute stage. Petitions presented over a year ago for work, against which there is no protest, are still hanging fire. And owners of property fronting on the affected streets are growing, to put it mildly, exceedingly restive.

Councilmen insist that they are powerless to act for the reason that the contracts cannot be let until lines, grades and other preliminary details are completed by the Street Superintendent and City Engineer.

City Engineer Stafford freely admits that the delays are occasioned in his office, but he says the city has so far outstripped his department that he is now two years behind the game, and that the prospects are not very roseate for ever catching up.

The City Engineer is one official who has taken no vacation this year. There are four men in his office who also have foregone the privilege. Not only this, but they have worked Saturday afternoons all summer, when other City Hall employés have enjoyed a half holiday. And the City Engineer's office is the only one in the municipal building which is open on Sundays. Mr. Stafford's deputies have worked seven days a week, seeking to clean up some of the back work.

"Profiles are now in this office for over eighty miles of lateral sewers," said Mr. Stafford yesterday morning. "Applications are also on file for at least thirty additional miles of internal sewer. That means over one hundred miles of sewer to be built during the coming municipal year. The city's record year up to the present time is thirty miles of sewer built in one year.

"All this is Vrooman Act work and must be supervised by this office. Conditions in the street improvement department are even worse. If the Council were to pass no more ordinances of intention for two years, at least four of my men would have to work overtime to complete the work now ordered.

"The area of paved streets alone will be about doubled during the coming year. Ordinances of intention for six miles of new paving have already been passed. Petitions are now in circulation for twelve miles more. We are working on ordinances for about three additional miles. The present paved area of the city is but twenty-five miles.

"The Council has offered to increase my force, but that would not afford immediate relief. We are far enough behind now and have no desire to make it any worse. There is some work in this office now that was ordered over a year ago, and a great deal of work ordered over eight months ago. At least four men on my force have worked Saturday afternoons and Sundays all summer striving to catch up. But they appear to be running farther behind all the time.

"Conditions here remind me of the story I once heard of an old rancher down in Santa Ana county.

"One morning after a fine late spring rain a neighbor went over to call on the old man and found him out in the corn patch looking earnestly at a stalk of corn.

"'What's the matter, Uncle Billy?' cheerfully asked the visitor, 'you look worried!'

"'I am. I sent Tom up there a bit ago to see how the corn is earing, and the darned stalk is growing up faster than he can climb down.'

"That is about the condition in which the phenomenal growth of the city has placed us.

"New men would be no relief for the reason that it would require too much time for the present force to break them in. A man is little good in here until he has worked at least six months. The major portion of the work ordered is of a kind that I can entrust only to four of my men. Extra help would be a hindrance rather than a help.

"My greatest regret right now is that the municipal board of public works does not appoint an engineer as soon as it takes office."

In addition to street and sewer work the city engineer's office is almost constantly importuned by west-of-Hill-street property-owners for plans and estimated for two new tunnels.

Realizing the congested conditions in the engineer's office, the Council has been making an effort to stave off new work until the office force can regain its bearings. But property owners have protested so indignantly that the legislators have given up and are passing the work along to the already overburdened engineer's department.

In the report of the Board of Public Works, which will go to the Council Monday, there are recommendations for improvement of over forty streets. This single report carries with it as much new work as five years ago was started in six months.

Each year since 1901 the applications for new street and sewer work have almost doubled those of the year previous; and judging from present indications the end is not yet.

The engineer's department is hampered as much by lack of office room as by any other one thing. The space allotted to this department is only about one-fourth that which it acually requires.

When the new municipal building is erected the engineers' department will probably draw a whole floor. It now occupies one-fifth of the second floor.

DISCIPLINE LACKING.

NAUGHTY FIRE FIGHTERS.

The troubles of Engine Company No. 7 received an airing yesterday morning before the Board of Fire Commissioners. Capt. Jenkins preferred charges of disobedience and neglect of duty against Engineer Heaney.

Heaney was represented by an attorney and a half-dozen witnesses. Acting Chief O'Donnell and firemen from No. 7, supported the allegations of Capt. Jenkins that Heaney is at times disobedient and inclined to be surly to his superior officers.

Charges against Heaney were the result of an early morning fire alarm ten days ago to which Heaney's engine responded with one of the grates open and dragging. A lost pin caused this mishap. Heaney laid the blame on a relief engineer who had handled the engine the night before. But Capt. Jenkins called his attention to one of the rules of the department which requires every engineer to inspect an engine before taking charge of it, and making him responsible for its condition after he does take charge.

Acting Chief O'Donnell reported that Heaney last spring showed a marked disinclination to obey orders which he, O'Donnell, gave.

Testifying in his own defense Heaney told the commissioners that four months ago Capt. Jenkins made the boast that there were three men in his crew whom he was going to get. Two were hosemen, Julius and Burton, and the third was Heaney. One of the hosemen has since resigned, the second has been transferred to another house and, Heaney claimed, that the charges preferred were an effort to "get" him.

Heaney testified that Capt. Jenkins is insolent, dictatorial and is always having trouble with his men.

After the trial had dragged its weary length for the greater portion of the forenoon, the commission choked off further testimony and took the charges under advisement. Heaney's suspension was continued for one week.

Commissioner Robinson made the only comment on the case. "The time has come," said Robinson, "when we must have discipline in the fire department. I shall insist upon it even though we have to dismiss half the present force."

BOXING CLUB WINS.

PAVILION NOT FIRE TRAP.

The special committee appointed a week ago to inspect the new boxing pavilion over on East Main street yesterday reported that the structure is built in accordance with the regulations of the municipal building ordinance, but that a number of alterations should be made for the better protection of the sporting public.

While the building is one that would not be permitted anywhere in the center of the city, it complies with the provisions of the ordinance for structures outside the fire limits, and the site of the pavilion is just outside the border of the fire district.

In its report to the Fire Board the special committee says that the owners of the pavilion agreed to make any alterations which the committee might deem necessary for the protectioln of the athletically inclined public. Taking advantage of this agreement the committee made the following suggestions:

(1.) That the posts now partially obstructing some of the exits be removed.

(2.) That all the steps leading to, or from exits, be removed, and that plank runways be substituted therefor.

(3.) That the steps at present located over the exits be removed, and new stairways, at least four feet in width, be placed on each side thereof.

(4.) That a suitable stairway be constructed at each corner of said building leading from the top seats thereof to the exits on the ground floor.

(5.) That any seats obstructing the passage ways to the exits be removed, leaving thereat at least four feet in the clear.

This report was made at the request of the "Committee of One Hundred" representing a number of local churches. The committee asserted that it had reason to believe that the pavilion is a fire trap. The investigation was made by Fire Commissioners Wren and Robinson, Building Inspector Packus, Acting Fire Chief O'Donnell and Manager Morrow of the Board of Fire Underwriters.

Fire Board Miscellany.

Charles Elgin the colored Lothario, who drives chemical engine No. 1, yesterday drew a fine of one month's pay and a "severe reprimand" for permitting his social engagements to interfere with his duties as a fireman.

Engineer Jean of Company No. 5 was yesterday fined $50 for squirting water into the firebox of his engine. On motion of Commissioner Robinson the board adopted a rule that the next engineer convicted of this offense shall be discharged.

Property owners living in the vicinity of Jefferson and San Pedro streets yesterday protested to the Fire Commission that the Sunset Telephone Company is operating a gas engine in its building on San Pedro street near Jefferson street without a permit. The company made an application yesterday for permission to operate its engine at that location. Petition and protest were continued for one week.

AT THE COURTHOUSE.

BOOM VENTURE WAS A HOODOO.

LADY PROFESSOR IN UNIVERSITY CAUGHT IN LAND DEAL.

Miss McG. Isom's Purchase Turned Out to be Oily, but Exploiters Got in on the Sly and She Only Saved the Wreck—Now She is Dead and Her Heirs are at Sea.

The trials and tribulations that beset a lady professor in one of the southern universities is being exploited in the Probate Court just now, and the loose strings of the protracted litigation that afflicted Miss Sallie McG. Isom of Oxford, Miss., are being gathered up.

Miss Isom was a woman of wide culture and of the most kindly nature, though a pronounced spinster. She was one of the faculty at the State University of Mississippi, and in the old boom days made a visit to California during her vacation term. At that time she was about 30 years of age, and was swept off her mental feet by the fortunes being made in Los Angeles.

When she saw lots sail up in the financial sky thousands of dollars over night she became just a bit curious to know how it felt to be a landowner—a speculator. Of course, such a thing was against her creed—it was gambling, but she was far from home and no one would ever know. She bought two lots—one in the Hayes tract and the other in the Victor Heights tract, and then, getting frightened, she went back East and settled down to the routine of university life.

In March, 1898, Dr. Book, the oil operator, wrote to Miss Isom offering to rent her property on College street for three years, with the right to rent for an additional five years. He stated that he would pay $75 a year for the purpose, as he explained, of putting up a tenement building. The maiden professor had before this learned that the bottom had fallen out of the real estate market in Los Angeles, but nevertheless she had held on to her lots and demanded of Book that he pay $100 a year. He consented and a lease was sent East for her to sign and she did so. For two years she received the rent and then, as she afterwards explained in court, discovered that a hocuspocus game had been played upon her. She heard that oil had been struck by Book on her land and that oil was gurgling up and making her tenants rich, while she was getting only a measly $100 a year.

So highly was Miss Isom thought of at her home that she was granted a leave of absence to come to Los Angeles and recover the fortune that it was supposed she was being euchered out of. As soon as she arrived she began suit against Dr. Book and the Rex Oil Company, alleging that the lease had been obtained from her by misrepresentation; that instead of the land being wanted for a tenement building it was leased for sinking wells' and that 20,000 barrels had been taken out and sold for $1.15 per barrel, to her damage in the sum of $69,000.

Miss Isom was in a state of enthusiastic delight. On the grounds of fraud she was assured that the courts would cancel the lease and compel the defendants to refund the money made out of her property. It seemed as if that $69,000 was already tickling the palms of her hands.

But Book and the Rex Oil Company claimed that it was a matter of common knowledge that an oil well existed in this city, and that it embraced Miss Isom's lots. If she did not know of that fact—well, they didn't know that she didn't know, and that's all there was to it.

When the case went to trial Judge Shaw (now on the Supreme Bench) found that Book had begun drilling before he wrote to Miss Isom, but that no oil had been obtained before she learned of what was going on; that the letters had been sent for the purpose of deluding her, and only on Feb. 3, 1900, did she learn where she stood. It was also found that pumping of the wells began on Dec. 22, 1899, and that only 2000 barrels had been taken out which had been sold for $1 per barrel. Judgment was thereupon rendered in favor of Miss Isom for $2000.

That was a sad blow. Some $67,000 had gone up in smoke, and she was just so much poorer than she thought that she would be. The court had found, too, that Book had been acting as general manager of the Rex Oil Company, and that the oil drilling plant, etc. had been sold and assigned over to the Rex Crude Oil Company.

Before judgment had been rendered in the first suit, a second action was begun against the Rex Crude Oil people to recover $20,700, being triple damages for waste, etc. This case was heard before the late Judge W. F. Fitzgerald, and Miss Isom again recovered damages in the sum of $4070, and restitution of the property. This case was appealed and is yet in the Supreme Court.

Miss Isom returned to her home at Oxford, Miss., somewhat saddened by her dip in business life. The litigation had been so prolonged that she had overstayed the time that had been granted her, but her University generously extended her leave without limit in order to make a finish fight of it. While in Los Angeles she made a number of friends, who were regretful when they learned on April 29 the somewhat retiring woman with the masculine mind had died.

Now, in the settlement of her estate, things are rather mixed. The wells on the College street property are not worth much. Wells about there are just pumping enough to keep the lessors from shutting down. As real estate the lots are worth still less while the derricks are up, and just how to fix their value is somewhat of a puzzle. Then the $2000 judgment against Book is still outstanding, and the $4070 due by the Rex Crude has not yet been finally adjudicated. The heirs of the deceased are Mrs. Mary F. Petrie and Mrs. Emma Gale Branham, and Thomas Dudley Isom, sisters and brother of the old lady professor.

SUES AN INFANT.

WOULD BREAK TRUST DEED.

Mrs. Julia Brockman has brought suit against Lucile M. Brockman, who in law is an infant and her own child, but the purpose of the action is really to benefit the plaintiff. To do this, however, red tape has to be unwound in order to satisfy the requirements of the law.

In March, 1901, Carl and Mary Brockman, father and mother-in-law of the plaintiff and the grandparents of Lucile, made over a deed of trust to the plaintiff covering a small tract of five acres just outside the city limits. The proceeds of this land were to be used by Mrs. Brockman for her daughter until the child should be 18 years old and then she was to receive the property in her own name.

But the mother finds that the acreage is a white elephant on her hands. It is unimproved and she cannot afford to improve it. There is no water to be had and so it cannot be used as farm land, and the proposition to incorporate Vernon threatens further loss as the taxes then will be greater. Under these circumstances Mrs. Brockman has received an offer to buy the five acres for $6500 from one W. F. Thorne, and this action in court is to get authority to break the trust deed so far as selling this particular bit of property is concerned.

COURTHOUSE NOTES.

BREVITIES MISCELLANEOUS.

LOST HIS HAND. S. F. Bottomfield, as guardian of his son Carl, who is 15 years of age, has begun suit against the Acme Door and Glass Company to recover $10,000 as damages for the loss of his left hand. The boy was an employé of the defendant and was engaged in pushing boards through a planer when his hand was caught in the machine. Owing, as it is claimed, to a fault in the machine it could not be at once stopped, and the planer snipped off his fingers and next parts of the hand up to the wrist. The accident occurred on June 18.

MINING COPPER. The Consolidated Copper Company of Lower California has incorporated with a capital stock of $1,000,000, of which $5 has been subscribed. The directors are: W. E. Simpson, E. T. Wright and C. A. Ford, all of Los Angeles; W. C. Murlock, San Gabriel; and J. Steade, San Diego.

REAL ESTATE. The George R. E. Milligan Company has incorporated with a capital stock of $20,000, of which $12,000 has been subscribed. The directors are G. R. E. Milligan, M. E. Rice and M. B. Noon, all of Los Angeles.

SHORT HONEYMOON. Ellen E. Willerford has begun suit against her husband, James H. Willerford, for separate maintenance. The parties were married last May and the wife avers that on September 1 her husband deserted her and ceased to support her. She asks the court to compel her husband to contribute a reasonable amount for her maintenance.

LONG BEACH HOTEL. The Long Beach Hotel and Land Company has incorporated with a capital stock of $500,000, of which $10,200 has been subscribed. The directors are: J. B. Heartwell, C. J. Walker, A. M. Goodhue, J. V. Bartow, F. McCutchen, J. M. Pearsell, H. M. E. Schroeter and W. L. Porterfield, Long Beach; and L. E. Gregory of Los Angeles.

EXPLOIT LAND. The Rockcastle Land Company has incorporated with a capital stock of $30,000, of which $1000 has been subscribed. The directors are: J. G. Johnston, S. M. Haskins, W. G. Nevin, J. W. Carhart and W. R. Leeds, all of this city.

Note Change in Rate for Sunday Classified Advertisements.

Commencing Sunday, October 1, 1905, and thereafter, the rate for Sunday "Liners" will be 1¼ cents per word for each insertion, minimum charge 25 cents, as at present. This slight advance is amply justified by the present Sunday circulation of The Times, which averages over 60,000 copies. (When the 1-cent-per-word rate was established in 1893, The Sunday Times circulation was only 14,000 copies.) The "Liner" rate for the daily—1 cent per word—will stand as at present.

SOUNDS QUITE BIG.

After considerable delay George Mitchell of Los Angeles has announced that his furnace is blowing at full blast in his mines in Guerrero. The matte that it is turning out assays 65 per cent. copper, he says. At this rate it would have a capacity of more than 1000 pounds of copper a month. Mitchell says that the capacity of his plant will be more than doubled within the next two years.

Mexico now occupies fifth place in the production of copper in the world, and if the output at Cananea and La Dicha, as well as at the Bufa copper mines in Sonora, increases as now expected, by next year Mexico may rank third among the copper nations of the world. A dividend was declared at La Bufa mines a few days since, amounting to $60,000, the fifth dividend in two years. This property is controlled by the four Richardson brothers of Los Angeles, Cal. Last year the production was 1,200,000 pounds of fine copper.

Public attention has been recently called to the astonishing yield in vanilla, in the State of Vera Cruz, especially in the district of Tuxpan. It is considered the finest vanilla in the world, and in flavor and perfume tenfold richer than the California product. At Papantla, in the heart of the Mexican jungle, the vanilla has also been discovered in remarkable quantities. From each planting, which is gathered in November, the result is ten to fifty beans to the plant. And the average price paid on the ground is 20 cents per bean.

En la Escuela de Jurisprudencia prosiguen las discusiones sobre los cambios propuestos en las Leyes tocantes a los terrenos de carbon y de petroleo. La discusion es prolongada, pero aun no resulta ningun arreglo. Es un problema dificil la separacion de aquellos dos Minerales de su terreno propio. La dificultad se aumenta si el Gobierno Federal pretende una Ley retractiva, maxime que la Constitucion Federal en su articulo 14 inhibe una Ley retractiva. Los dueños actuales de los terrenos perderian sus derechos sobre los dos minerales, pues el carbon y el petroleo no se sujetan al denuncio como otros minerales. Sin embargo algun arreglo tendra que efectuarse. Es de interés especial, pues el descubrimiento del aceite crudo implica combustible barato y puede ser que petroleo para lamparas, empresa en la cual dineros Californianos se han invertido. Hay una faja ancha petrolifera en México alcanzando desde el Rio Grande hasta el Itsmo de Tehuantepec. Ha sido poco explotada, de manera que la promesa de resultados es bien problematica. Hay tres Compañias grandes ocupadas en tales operaciones: La Compañia Mexicana Petrolifera del Ebano, la Compañia Petrolifera de Pensilbania en dos Bocas cerca de la Laguna de Tamiahua y un Sindicato Inglés cerca de Tuxpam en el Estado de Veracruz. El productor Mayor es la Compañia del Ebano, pero los otros dos han alcanzado grandes cantidades de aceite y tienen capitales respetables. La primera es una Compañia de Los Angeles, California. Ha firmado contrato con el Ferrocarril Central Mexicano, efectivo el dia 15 de Enero proximo. Ahora cuesta de $900 a $1000 convertir una locomotora de vapor a una maquina para aceite como combustible. El Ferrocarril Central esta cambiando varias maquinas en sus Talleres en Aguascalientes y hay tres ya trabajando en la division de San Luis Potosi. Se ahorra como 20 por ciento en combustible contra el carbon. Como el Ferrocarril Central no tiene tuneles podra usar el combustible de aceite, pero los caminos como el de Veracruz que tiene tuneles no pueden emplear el aceite ventajosamente. Se han instalado tanques para almacenar el combustible en varios puntos del Ferrocarril Mexicano Central y en el mismo punto de Ebano el Central ya establece cambia-vias y ramales para la transportacion del combustible nuevo. El aceite para quemar en lamparas aun no se demuestra en México. Explica esto el éxito de la Compañia Standard Oil, que hace cinco años tuvo negocios de $1,000,000, por mes, con un negocio actual cuando tiene cuarenta por ciento en aumento. La Compañia de los Angeles dice que tiene cierto por ciento de aceite iluminante en su producto, capaz de ser refinado. Durante los doce meses proximos pasados la venta del aceite en México ha aumentado 100 por ciento.

Se espera en cinco años un aumento de 1000 por ciento en el numero de touristas que vienen a México de los Estados Unidos. Hay un concepto falso que la temporada de lluvias en México es un tiempo fatal para visitarlo. De hecho ha habido mas transito que nunca y es un hecho comprobado que esa temporada es la mas sana y mas benigna del año, pues llueve solamente en las tardes. Dr. A. M. Scott, Médico del vapor "Esperanza" de la Linea Ward, empleado hace siete años, dice que jamas ha visto los buques tan llenos como en el año actual, y los Sres. Murdoch y Young, del Central y Nacional, soponen un aumento de 50 por ciento en el numero de touristas. La gente que ahora visita a México escapa de los rayos fatales del sol en las ciudades Americans como tambien los dias sofocantes en las riveras famosisimas del Atlantico. Los Californianos, acostumbrados a clima benigno y vegetacion perenne, consideran a México punto bastante deseado. Ahora se propone una excursion por J. C. McDonald, Agente General del Central en San Francisco. Ordinariamente la gente que visita a México viene despues de la Navidad, pero el Señor McDonald dice que un gran numero propone salir de San Francisco una semana antes de la Noche Buena para pasar el dia entre las posadas y las piñatas de esta Capital interesante, y algunos permaneceran en México hasta mediados de Enero.

Despues de muchas demoras el Sr. Mitchell, de Los Angeles anuncia que su fundicion ya funciona en las minas de Guerrero. El metal tratado ensaye 65 por ciento en cobre y con esta calificacion tiene una capacidad de mas de 1,000,000 de cobre al mes. Dice Mr. Mitchell que la capacidad de la planta se duplicara dentro de los dos años proximos. Ocupa México el quinto lugar en el Mundo en la produccion del cobre. Si la produccion de Cananea y de La Dicha como tambien de las minas de la Bufa en Sonora aumenta, como ya se espera, el año entrante México ocupara el tercer lugar entre los productores del cobre. Se declaro en La Bufa, hace pocos dias, un dividendo de 60,000 pesos, el quinto dividendo declarado en dos años. Es una propiedad minera cuyos dueños son los cuatro hermanos Richardson de Los Angeles, California. La produccion en el año pasado fué de 1,200,000 de cobre fino.

Se ha llamado la atencion del mundo al producto prodigioso de la Vainilla en el Estado de Veracruz, especialmente en el Distrito de Tuxpam. Se considera la mejor en el Mundo y con respecto a perfume y sabor de diez veces la calidad del producto Californiano. En Papantla, tambien se ha descubierto la Vainilla en cantidades extraordinarias, resultando diez a cincuenta vainas por cada planta.

BUENOS SON RESULTADOS.

QUATRO MESES DE LA REFORMA MONETARIA EN MEJICO.

Las Cadenas Ya Rotas—El Peso Nacional — Habiendo Crecido en Valor, Quedan en Casa Donde Ya Los Comprenden y Conocen—Los Angeles en Minas de Guerrero.

[CORRESPONDENCIA ESPECIAL DE THE TIMES.]

MEXICO, Septiembre 8 de 1905.—Han transcurrido cuatro meses desde el establecimiento en México de la Reforma Monetaria. Se han obtenido cinco resultados benéficos: (1.) La normalizacion de la cuotizacion del cambio en el extranjero a pesar de las fructuaciones en el precio de la plata. (2.) Disminuirse la exportacion de los pesos. (3.) La uniformidad del mercado monetario y el sostenimiento consecuente del tipo normal de descuesto. (4.) Introduccion de capitales del extranjero. (5.) Aumento en el consumo de mercancias extranjeras. Se expreso el temor que la Reforma resultaria en una contraccion del Mercado monetario, pero el temor no se realizo y no sucedio ninguna premura. El tipo de interés ha seguido invariable, capital extranjero ha influido a México y viene mas, y se da mayor importancia al movimiento bancario y al desarrollo de los elementos naturales del pais.

Aun antes de la fecha de la Reforma Monetaria se disminuyo la exportacion de los pesos mexicanos. Durante los primeros diez meres de 1904-1905, comparado con el mismo periodo del año fiscal anterior se disminuyo aquella exportacion en la suma de $16,000,000, o sea en diez meses una cantidad igual al promedio anual de la exportacion mexicana de metales durante los veinticinco años pasados. Los Bancos con concesion en esta capital abundan en recursos, teniendo el dia 31 de Agosto en efectivo $50,000,000 y en billetes $10,000,000. Verdaderamente la estabilidad del peso mexicano o su segregacion de su valor comparado con la plata en barra, se obtuvo en Noviembre de 1904, cuando el Gobierno anuncio su Plan Monetario, y asi la mejora fué mas facil de realizacion el dia primero de Mayo proximo pasado. Se justifica la inferencia que la disminucion en la exportacion de pesos se debe a la Reforma Monetaria. Las cadenas que sujetaban a México, como a la rueda de Ixion a los valores oscilantes de la plata, ya rotas explican por que la moneda de plata se radica ya en México. El peso nacional, habiendo crecido en valor de cuarenta y cuatro centavos a cincuenta centavos, quedan en casa donde ya los comprenden y los reconocen.

Ya México esta independiente no solo politicamente sino en la esfera financiera. La medida reformista libre la cuotizacion del peso mexicano de la valuacion extranjero sobre la plata, y desde Mayo esta independencia financiera quedo establecida como se prueba por las cifras siguientes:

Meses maximus.	Tipos de cambio	Cuotizacion maximas de plata en N.Y.
Mayo	202.250	0.56%
Junio	202.250	0.57%
Julio	202.102	0.58%
Agosto	202.224	0.61%

El cambio ha permanecido firme a pesar de las fructuaciones en el valor de la onza de plata. El valor de los pesos mexicanos en Nueva York fué:

Mayo	0.44½
Junio	0.45½
Julio	0.45½
Agosto	0.45½

No solo han quedado en casa los pesos mexicanos, por la primera vez en su historia bien compreudidos, y asi evitando una crisis economica, sino que las importaciones del Extranjero, pagaderos en oro han aumentado $6,000,000 durante los diez meses del año fiscal de 1904-1905 comparados con las entradas del mismo periodo en 1903-1904. El Gobierno podra acuñar el oro en vista de la alza reciente en el valor de la plata. Dice el articulo 12 de la Ley Monetaria: "La obligacion de emitir monedas de plata para su entrega en cambio de oro cesara cuando el valor de la plata contenida en dichas monedas exeda la cantidad de setenta y cinco centigramas de oro puro por peso en la Ciudad de México," y en otro articulo se previene que en vista de las condiciones mencionadas en el articulo 12, "la libre acuñacion del oro podra ser autorizada por decreto promulgado ad hoc por el Ejecutivo de la Union." Hace quince años produjo México $500,000 en oro y la produccion hace diez años era de $1,000,000, siendo en el año actual problemente $15,000,000, de manera que, en toda probabilidad, México acuñara moneda de oro proximamente. La circulacion del metal amarillo sera una señal visible de la salud financiera del pais y justificara la politica profética del Presidente Diaz y del Ministro Limantour, al ponerse México sobre base de oro.

OPENING FORECAST

In a few days, this Store will open its doors, thereby adding to the long list of good stores already here, the lightest, brightest, best arranged, best equipped and best stocked of them all. It's an event of supreme importance. It means a place where you can buy cheaper and with more satisfaction than heretofore. The Opening will be a purely commercial event—much there will be of a social nature—much to delight, interest and instruct—much to see, to admire and to wonder at, but the one impression we want this opening to make—the single conviction that we want to force home and clinch, is the fact that at the 5th Street Store, good merchandise is sold cheap and that superior surroundings, more store conveniences and courtesies, and better service are thrown in by way of good measure.

The merchandise offerings for the Opening Day will all amply demonstrate this fact and every business day hereafter will emphasize it. A personal contact with all the sensational merchandise events in later years in this city, qualifies us to positively state that nothing in Los Angeles retailing will approximate in value giving, this Opening Sale.

There will be "souvenirs," of course, novel and attractive, prized alike by men, women and children—music, and various other attractions; but best of all, opportunities at every hand from basement to top floor, to save a lot of money.

Watch the papers and windows for date of Opening and fuller particulars.

Now Comes the Greatest Curtain Sale of All---Values to $6.50 at.............................. $1.95 Pr.

NEARLY A THOUSAND STYLES TO PICK FROM

There is a certain manufacturer in New York who makes curtains for the best drawing-rooms and parlors in the country. His curtains stand apart from ordinary ones, on account of their exclusive and exquisite designs. This manufacturer has a beautifully-furnished salesroom where a sample pair of each style curtain is exhibited, and from these samples the buyers from different stores make their selections.

The curtains are samples, but not drummer's samples. They come in full pairs, full size, perfectly fresh and crisp, and, if anything, are just a little nicer than the curtains which a manufacturer turns out for his trade.

A Hale buyer at the end of the present season purchased this entire sample line, comprising nearly a thousand pairs of curtains, at an extraordinary low figure that we shall give you your choice of the entire lot at $1.95 per pair.

Remember, these curtains are of superior quality, including real Brussels net, Dentelle Arabian, beautiful Scotch nets, Point de Lux, Point nets, Battenberg lace, ruffled bobbinet, and others. The actual retail prices of these curtains are $3.50, $4.50, $5.00, $6.00 and $6.50.

Ten extra salesmen to give prompt attention.

See list of premiums above, to which all purchasers are entitled.

HORSEMEN ARE EXCITED.

Talking of Disclosures of Mrs. Madden.

Some Doubt About Real Age of Mare Applause.

Sporting Men Inclined to Forgive the Owner.

[BY DIRECT WIRE TO THE TIMES.]

NEW YORK, Sept. 16.—Gossip runs riot at Gravesend over the testimony given by Mrs. John E. Madden at Cincinnati on Tuesday in her suit for divorce, especially in regard to the allegation that Madden had raced the mare Applause as a two-year-old when in reality it was a three-year-old.

According to the rules of racing, a weanling's first year ends with December 31 without regard to the date of birth. Therefore, a colt or filly foaled on December 31 would become a year old or yearling the following day, and along these lines horsemen felt disposed to absolve Madden. As far as the mare Applause is concerned, the Jockey Club would find it difficult to prove that Mrs. Madden is correct in her allegation. It is several years since Mr. Madden bred Applause, so long in fact that few horsemen know what became of her. Applause was a fair sort of a race mare, but not a world beater and even if her registration violated the rules of racing little was gained thereby.

YALE SEASON HAS OPENED.

WHITELAW REID'S BOY JOINS FOOTBALL TEAM.

Forty Candidates for the Eleven in Sight at This Time—First Scrimmage Begins This Week—No Member of the Squad Will be Allowed the Graft of the Programme.

[BY DIRECT WIRE TO THE TIMES.]

NEW HAVEN (Ct.) Sept. 16.—Yale's football season opened Friday afternoon with about twenty-five candidates, the smallest squad in some years. A much larger number will be at work within a week. A dearth of heavy men was a discouraging feature of the day's inspection by Yale coach.

Odgen Mills Reid, son of Ambassador Whitelaw Reid, has joined the Yale football squad as a candidate for end rush. He is a law student in his second year. He is tall and weighs 170 pounds. Wiley, half back at Hill School last year, who will enter the freshman class, was the most notable new man to report Friday. Altogether nearly forty candidates are now here. Scrimmaging will not be tried for several days.

There will be no graft this year for any of the players in the publication of the official football programme. Edwin White, manager of the 'varsity eleven, has turned the privilege over to the bureau of self-help so that students who are working their way through college can do the work and obtain a profit over the stipulated sum that is always secured of the football associations treasury. Heretofore a manager or member of the football squad has been granted the privilege of publishing the programme.

MICHIGAN OR CHICAGO.

WESTERN FOOTBALL HONORS LIE BETWEEN THEM.

Preliminary Practice Has Not Shown Anything of Any Import. Minnesota and Wisconsin May be Factors, but Iowa and Northwestern Do Not Seem to Have a Chance.

[BY DIRECT WIRE TO THE TIMES.]

CHICAGO, Sept. 16.—[Exclusive Dispatch.] One week of football practice has passed and college students have little as yet on which to "dope" their respective teams, except the past records. The teams that held practice games today did just about as expected. They tried out as many men as possible, and never once made efforts to run up a big score on their opponents.

By the time another week has gone football enthusiasts will have something more tangible to base their opinions on, and it is even possible some surprises will occur in the early games. However, it appears today that football honors in the West are to be disputed by Michigan, Chicago, Wisconsin and Minnesota. To all appearances and according to reports, there is not a chance for another team to break into the championship class.

Outside of these four teams there are but two others that have claimed the title in the past five years. These two were Iowa and Northwestern, both of which stood on the top round of the ladder in 1901. Iowa was thought by most critics to have the better claim that year and only the tie game with Northwestern at the close of the season brought the latter up into the class.

This year neither of the two teams is thought to have a chance with the "Big Four," and the most observing critics who have looked into the early conditions say there will be but two schools in the final round-up Thanksgiving Day. These two will be Michigan and Chicago. Just how these wise ones are disposing of Dr. William's formidable players from Minnesota is not explained, further than that the Gophers have little chance to lay strenuous claim to the title because of their limited schedule.

Minnesota is so far from the other schools geographically that games cannot well be played with many of the schools of the big nine. The only one of the four foremost teams to meet the Williams eleven is Wisconsin, and for the past two years the Badgers have fallen before the big fellows from the north. This has made the deciding of the championship technically impossible, and Minnesota and Michigan have both claimed the title.

HAIGLER ARRIVES.
REGISTERS AT U. S. C.

Chester Haigler arrived at U. S. C. yesterday from Tempe, Ariz., and Coach Holmes nearly had heart failure. Haigler is bigger than he was painted, which was needless. He is over six feet tall and weighs 220 pounds. Holmes thinks he will be a great center.

With Haigler is Eugene Shutes, who was counted last year as the best end Arizona turned out. He is a wiry chap of about 155 pounds weight, and said to be very fast.

TURNED DOWN.
ATHLETES REFUSED PERMIT.

[BY DIRECT WIRE TO THE TIMES.]

NEW YORK, Sept. 16.—[Exclusive Dispatch.] The national registration committee of the Amateur Athletic Union of the United States, yesterday on a telegraph vote instructed the chairman of the national registration committee, James E. Sullivan, not to issue a permit to Messrs. John Joyce, F. R. Castleman, and George Bonhag, which would permit them to leave this country and compete in the Canadian championships held in Montreal today.

LONG MOTOR TRIP.
NEW YORK TO COAST.

[BY DIRECT WIRE TO THE TIMES.]

NEW YORK, Sept. 16.—[Exclusive Dispatch.] W. C. Chadeyne of Buffalo left New York on a horse-power motor cycle Monday morning to ride to San Francisco. He hopes to make the run of about 3500 miles in thirty days. The motor cycle record from San Francisco to New York is forty-eight days.

VANDERBILT WINS.
YACHT LEADS ALWAYS.

[BY DIRECT WIRE TO THE TIMES.]

NEW YORK, Sept. 16.—[Exclusive Dispatch.] In the second match between Commodore W. K. Vanderbilt, Jr.'s turbine yacht Tarantula and Mr. Howard Gould's steam yacht Niagara IV, sailed Friday over a course of thirty-nine nautical miles on Long Island Sound, the Tarantula led all the way and won by 2 minutes, 59 seconds.

SWIMMING RACE.
CONTEST ON TODAY.

[BY DIRECT WIRE TO THE TIMES.]

NEW YORK, Sept. 16.—The annual endurance swim of the United States Volunteer Life Saving Corps which was postponed on Sept. 5, because of unfavorable weather, will take place on September 17. The swimmers will start from Pier No. 4 of the Booth Steamship Company on the Brooklyn shore at 11 a. m., and swim to Stauch's pier at Coney Island. The swimmers will be accompanied by a row boat.

RACER DISQUALIFIED.
FOULED SEVERAL RIDERS.

[BY DIRECT WIRE TO THE TIMES.]

NEW YORK, Sept. 16.—[Exclusive Dispatch.] Matthew Donney of Boston won a remarkable victory in the final heat of the five-mile championship race for amateurs at the Madison Square Garden Monday night. He was frequently fouled by Edward Rupprecht of the New York Athletic Club in the last half mile and while racing at top speed Donney took his right hand off the handle bars and pushed Sherwood away from him and sprinted into the lead eventually winning by a dozen lengths in the remarkably fast time of 11m. 30 4-5 secs. Rupprecht finished third, but was promptly disqualified by the judges.

MORE RECORDS.
FLANAGAN DOES WELL.

[BY DIRECT WIRE TO THE TIMES.]

NEWPORT (R. I.) Sept. 16.—[Exclusive Dispatch.] World's records were broken by John F. Flanagan of New York at the athletic meeting Monday afternoon of the police athletic association. In connection with the observance of Perry Day. Flanagan said before the meeting opened that he never felt so fit and that he expected to surpass his own former performance in throwing the fifty-six pound weight and the sixteen pound hammer, which were world's records, but he had no idea that he would do so well as he did. Flanagan threw the sixteen-pound hammer 175 feet, the previous distance being 172 feet, 11 inches, which he made at Long Island City on July 31, 1904. In the fifty-six pound weight event Flanagan tossed the iron sphere forty-two feet, the previous best mark being 40 feet 2 inches, made at Long Island City on July 17, 1904.

FOOTBALL AT PENN.
GOOD MEN IN SIGHT.

[BY DIRECT WIRE TO THE TIMES.]

PHILADELPHIA (Pa.) Sept. 16.—[Exclusive Dispatch.] The first regular practice of the University of Pennsylvania squad was held at Franklin Field Friday. The Quakers start the season with prospects of a fast aggressive eleven, similar to that of last year, but it is expected that the development will be more gradual and better sustained than last fall. Two line positions left vacant by Piekarsky and Buthewitz are the hardest points to fill, there being plenty of material for the back field places in Folwell, Stevenson, Greene, Shibley, Captains Reynolds, Longwell and others.

FOR ECONOMY TEST.
NEW YORK DATES.

The week of October 23-28, following the Vanderbilt race, has been selected as the time for holding the national economy test of the New York Motor Club. The club has definitely decided to go ahead with the contest, no less than ten informal entries being in hand. The contest committee and the secretary of the club are now at work on the details, which, together with the entry blanks, will be given out in a few days.

Alden L. McMurtry, the inventor of the McMurtry Timing System, has offered a gold medal of honor to be awarded to the car which has the least ignition trouble during the contest.

HE WILL NOT RACE.
CHRISTIE WITHDRAWS.

Walter Christie will not compete in the Vanderbilt Cup race, and it is possible that the Christie double-engined car, which is one of the thirteen American entrants, will not start. Family reasons contributed to this step, the danger of accident being the feature objected to. If a driver for the Christie car can be found it will be started, otherwise it will be scratched.

Manager McCredie, of Portland, batting to the outfield yesterday.

REO FINISHES WITHOUT LOSS.

Hanshue Makes Perfect Run up and Down Coast.

Rambler Wins Economy Cup, Using Less Oil.

Automobiles Make Trip Much Cheaper Than Train.

Point score: Reo, 1000; Rambler, 963.
Gasoline: Reo, $4.07¾; Rambler, $4.12.
Cylinder oil: Reo, $0.25⅞; Rambler, $0.12½.
Economy: Rambler, $4.29¼; Reo, $4.42¾.
Railroad fare, one way: $2.35.
Reo, one way, per passenger: $0.55¾.

The latest thing in Santa Barbara endurance runs came to a successful conclusion yesterday afternoon, when Harris Hanshue brought Leon Shettler's Reo in right side up with care, after a perfect round trip, during which not a minute was lost for adjustments, or for taking on fuel, except at points previously designated as controls.

Driving of the most careful kind is necessary to the performance of such a feat, however good the car, and Hanshue was warmly congratulated for his performance, on stepping out of the machine. P. A. Renton and the Rambler, starting on the return from Santa Barbara half an hour later than Hanshue, rolled into town at 2:30, winner in the economy cup by eighteen cents, through saving in cylinder oil, though it is to be doubted if he showed the best of judgment in screwing his oilers down to the last drop, some of the Rambler's time loss being occasioned by the motor overheating on a grade. A total of seventeen demerits was accumulated by Cowan's car on the return trip, part of the aggregate being due to replenishing the circulation water.

Hanshue took one minute more to make the round trip than did the Rambler, both drivers adhering very closely to their agreement to do no scorching. Hanshue drove up in 6:58:00 and returned in 6:13:00, which is, indeed, a remarkable estimate of pace.

As a demonstration of the success and economy of the automobile in cross-country touring, the run of Messrs. Cowan and Shettler was an unqualified success.

The Reo had no mishaps of any sort, not even a puncture, and the Rambler's troubles were readily repaired in a very few minutes, while the most expensive car, so far as there was any choice between them, hauled its human freight at a rate of one-half cent per mile per passenger.

The Southern Pacific charges a fare of $2.35 for the one-way trip to Santa Barbara, 110 miles. The Reo ran up and back for a total cost of $4.44 for four passengers, or $0.555 each for the one way trip. As a comparison of the cost of steam and automobile travel under favorable conditions, the figures are keenly interesting.

The Reo used $4.07 3-4 worth of gasoline; the Rambler $4.12. In cylinder oil, the Rambler led with a consumption of $0.12½; the Reo driver thought it poor policy to burn up his engine and lubricated to the total of $0.25 7-8.

The gentlemen who rode with Hanshue, Messrs. C. Harrison, W. K. Cowan and Geo. Easton, had a most enjoyable outing of the trip, and the Rambler crew returned well satisfied on the whole, though both parties complained of the rough roads, which Shettler declares are getting worse every minute.

The return trip was practically a duplicate of the outward bound voyage, the Reo leading in endurance and the Rambler in economy, when the points were totaled at Santa Barbara. Going up, Renton, in coasting down a hill at thirty miles an hour, jarred loose a wire from his spark plug, costing him several minutes of time. Twenty points were deducted. Coming back, Renton's motor, heated through running out of water and happily stopped right near a small water hole, which enabled Renton to get under way with a loss of seventeen minutes. This made a total of thirty-seven points off 1000, or 963 for the Rambler as against 1000 for the Reo.

W. K. Cowan was very enthusiastic over the success of the run last night and said:

"I consider it one of the fairest tests that was ever held, and while we broke even, Mr. Shettler taking the endurance cup and myself the economy trophy, I am highly satisfied in every way with the outcome. It must be remembered the machines ran over very bad roads and that three mountain passes were crossed on the route. On level going either Mr. Shettler's car or mine could make a much better showing, but we feel well satisfied and have no excuses to offer whatever."

FOX HUNTERS BUSY.
EVENTS FOR NOVEMBER.

[BY DIRECT WIRE TO THE TIMES.]

BARDSTOWN, (Ky.) Sept. 16.—[Exclusive Dispatch.] The National Foxhunters' Association is bestirring itself as it has never done before in an effort to make the coming field trials here the most successful event in the history of the organization. All foxhunters of note in the country are invited to enter their hounds in the trials which will begin on November 13, and continue for three days thereafter. The derby for dogs eighteen months and under, will be run on November 14 and 15, and the all-age stake will be decided on the following day. Entries for the derby must not be made later than November 13, and for the all-age stake November 15.

GANS AMBITIOUS.
WANTS TO FIGHT BAT.

[BY DIRECT WIRE TO THE TIMES.]

NEW YORK, Sept. 16.—[Exclusive Dispatch.] "Joe" Gans offers to make a match with "Battling" Nelson for a side bet and a purse. "Kid" Sullivan is out with a challenge to box "Young Corbett" a limited number of rounds before the Eureka Athletic Club of Baltimore for a purse and side bet. "Larry" Temple and "Sam" Longford have signed articles of agreement for a twenty-round bout to take place before the Douglas Athletic Club of Chelsea, Mass., on September 26.

BRITT BETS WILL STAND.

New Yorkers Will Not Agree to Graney's Act.

Change of Referee Did Not Effect Result.

Gans Has Lightweight Title by Suffrance.

[BY DIRECT WIRE TO THE TIMES.]

NEW YORK, Sept. 16.—[Exclusive Dispatch.] Many inquiries have been received at the newspaper offices regarding the question as to whether bets made on the Nelson-Britt bout should be paid or declared off, in accordance with Referee Graney's decision just before the bout. The replies have declared that unless there was a special stipulation regarding the referee who was to arbitrate the contest made at the time the wagers were arranged, the backers of Britt should pay.

The battle was absolutely fair from start to finish and the knock-out conclusive. The personality of the referee had no bearing on the result, and Jeffries could not have rendered a decision different from that made by Graney. Under the circumstances, bets made on Britt to win should be paid, unless they were made with the understanding that Jeffries or a referee other than Graney was to officiate at the bout. The question of whether the winner takes the title of lightweight champion is less easy decided. Technically, Joe Gans is still the title holder. He won the lightweight championship by defeating Frank Erne at Fort Erie and was conceded the champion until he met Britt. In the contest with the latter he won on a foul by Britt in the fifth round after the Californian had him clearly beaten and almost out.

It is generally conceded that Britt and Nelson are the best of the lightweights today and that Gans is still the title holder simply because Britt lost his head when victory by a knock-out was within his grasp. The lightweight fighting figures of the present are generally accepted at 133 pounds, either ringside weight or a few hours before the bout and amateur and professional contests both here and abroad are usually based on this weight.

GANS STILL A LIGHTWEIGHT.

HOLDS HIS ADVANTAGE OVER HEAVIER MAN.

Had All the Best of "Twin" Sullivan for Ten Rounds and Then Loses His Edge, Owing to Mike's Great Condition—Contest Proved That Black Man Can Fight a Lightweight.

[BY DIRECT WIRE TO THE TIMES.]

BALTIMORE, (Md.) Sept. 16.—[Exclusive Dispatch.] Joe Gans, lightweight champion of the world, could only draw with Mike (Twin) Sullivan of Boston in fifteen rounds of the fastest fighting seen here in years. The bout took place before the Eureka Athletic Club and the big crowd which turned out for the show cheered wildly when Referee O'Hara announced his decision. Sullivan was the surprise of a century. Gans had the better of the first ten rounds and every one looked for an easy victory for the champion on points. Sullivan's fighting was superb. He came back in the next five rounds, and by fierce, strong fighting, evened Gans's lead and earned a draw. When the first round closed it did not look as if the fight would go five. In the opening period Gans dropped the Boston boy groggy with right and left hooks in the jaw that had the force of a Jeffries wallop behind them. Again it was Sullivan's superb condition that saved him. He came back strong in the next round and clinched and stalled without receiving a damaging punch.

In the eighth he came to life with a jump and a sharp right hook opened a gash over Gans's eye. It was Gans's fight until after the tenth, when Sullivan bored in time after time, and forced Gans to cover to protect himself. While the fight was not satisfactory from a Gans standpoint, it proved to his backers that he could fight at the lightweight limit and be strong. He weighed in at a little more than 132 pounds. Sullivan weighed 138 pounds.

SEA FISHING.
SPORT IS POOR.

Sea fishing slowed down somewhat during the past week, and few catches of any consequence were reported.

A few croakers of small size were biting at San Pedro Bay, but the catches were not sensational.

Outside, the trolling was good and bad in spots. At Catalina some big catches were reported.

Huntington Beach yielded several good baskets of surf fish, and a number of local anglers will try that resort today in hope of connecting with the festive and succulent corbina.

Big "Jack" smelts are beginning to take the hook with autumnal voracity now, and those who fancy them can make very respectable catches at Ocean Park and other western beach points.

The pompano seem to have given fishermen the go by, no sport having been reported with them in a long time.

Outside a few fortunate anglers have succeeded in locating bass, the fishing at the breakwater being uniformly good.

Halibut are beginning to lay hold better as the nights become cooler, and at Redondo some fine ones have been taken.

Casting off the beach for yellowfins promises well today on the proper tides. Some fair sized fish were taken by lucky anglers last week north of Manhattan.

The mackerel have been running a little, but there has been but little certainty of making a catch on them, so most of the cane rod wielders have turned their attention to other branches of angling.

GETS GOOD PITCHER.
OCCIDENTAL HAS COLEMAN.

Occidental landed a good pitcher when Coleman of Santa Ana enrolled at Highland Park.

The lad has been pitching for Santa Ana High School several seasons and has a high percentage of games won to his credit.

In addition to being a good twirler, he is quite a hitter as well. Coach Ed Merrill hopes to make some kind of a bid for baseball honors next spring, but with the lineup that is in sight for St. Vincent's College it is hard to see anybody else at present.

Sysonby, the season's racing sensation, likely to equal the record for big money winnings on the turf.

GRAY PITCHES IN RARE FORM.

TALL ARIZONAN SHUTS OUT M'CREDIE'S MERRY MEN.

Allows a Total of Five Stingy Swats, and Holds the Portland Players Safe Throughout — Tim Flood Comes Across With a Hot Catch Back of Second Base.

Los Angeles, 4; Portland, 0.

Pitching in truly magnificent form, his long left arm swinging like a flail as it thrashed the Portland straw all over the Chutes Park loft, "Dolly" Gray took McCredie's all-star bunch of stick artists down the line yesterday to the tune of a merry shut-out, and when the final nose count of safe bingles came to be made it was a job that didn't make the scorer work overtime.

Five measly swats was all that the visitors could string together off the tall Arizonan's delivery, and they failed to bunch enough of them to aggregate a single run. The plate was never in serious danger of storm by a Portland base runner, and the much-knocked southpaw had his opponents at his mercy throughout.

Using his wide curve ball with excellent effect, Gray mowed 'em down as fast as they came, some by the strike-out route, but most through pop flies and inability to hit the ball hard. "Dolly" was never more effective, and his future is assured so long as he continues serving out the assortment of yesterday.

Essick officiated for Portland, and had two bad innings, being thumped all over the lot in the first before he got down to business, and losing control in the sixth. Each aberration cost two runs, and the Looloos were not particularly dangerous at any other times.

Tim Flood, always a reliable and frequently a sensational player, contributed the fielding sensation of the afternoon, when, after a quick run back into center field, he threw up his gloved mitt, and dragged down in it a line drive which Schafly had tapped squarely on the nose, and tagged for Hitville. It was a beautiful play, and the stand went wild for a whole minute.

The Looloos began in business-like style, for Bernard opened the game with a clout to center. Flood did the square thing, and put Bernie down to second. Smith forced the center fielder, and went to third on Dillon's single to right. Cravath then stepped into the breach with a ripping two-bagger to the left-field fence, and both runs came in; for good measure Ross singled over second, but that wonder-worker, Atz, by some strange freak stopped the ball and pinched Cravath between the bases. Gavy naturally supposed the ball was good for home, and didn't have time to stop and make sure.

In the sixth, Bernard determined to start something, and took a walk. Flood got on through a bunt, and Smith sacrificed. Dillon walked, and Cravath again came through with a timely hit, this one to left, scoring the runs.

Nothing further was doing. Portland got a start in the fifth, when Sweeney and Essick singled, and Atz filled the bases through a fielder's poor choice, but Gray got busy with his pitching, his support came to his rescue, and the rally failed to carry.

FOR TIGHT NUTS.
CHAUFFEUR'S DODGE.

When a nut resists every effort of the wrench a good dodge is to try warming up the nut by pouring a little kerosene or gasolene over it and lighting it. The idea is that the nut expands sufficiently to ease it on the bolt. It is better if, previous to warming the nut, some kerosene is poured over it and left on for some hours in the hope that some of it may work down the thread, although this will not do when in a hurry. Steady application of the spanner (if necessary a bit of iron tubing can be slipped over the handle to increase the leverage) should suffice to move the most refractory nut.

CARE OF THE CAR.
A COMMON MISTAKE.

"One of the greatest mistakes that the newcomer in automobiling makes is to neglect his car," said an automobilist of many years' experience. "A motor car needs care just the same as any other piece of machinery, and even though it runs well for a week or so, it should be carefully gone over ever so often, and proper adjustments made. A big locomotive, after a few hours' run over smooth rails, is carefully examined and oiled, while an automobilist thinks nothing of pounding over rough roads for six or eight hours, paying no attention to his car at the finish.

"There are many little things about a car that should be kept adjusted in order to get the best results. Pounding and rattling are distasteful to anyone, and especially to an automobile owner. A little care in taking up wear on the various working parts, in keeping all the parts oiled and as free as possible from dirt and grit, will add many years to the life of the car and furnish much easier and more pleasant riding. It is a marvel how some automobiles keep running when it is considered how little care they receive."

ANOTHER CLUB.
IN NEWPORT SECTION.

Dr. C. G. Stivers and C. L. Chamberlain have obtained an option on 436 acres of duck marsh adjoining the Santa Ana Gun Club near Newport Bay at $110 an acre, and are organizing a gun club to shoot over it this winter, and thereafter.

The ranch has two artesian wells flowing sufficiently to flood 200 acres of the low land, some of the ranch being good arable land and under lease for agricultural purposes.

The membership will be limited to twenty-five.

Mrs. Charles L. Dering, winner of middle western women's golf championship.

CONVICT HIGHWAYS.
GOOD ROADS SCHEME.

With the increasing demand and necessity for better roads and the apparent disinclination of State Legislatures to appropriate money for the purpose, some forcible arguments are being brought to the front in favor of employing convicts to make and repair State highways.

The topic is one that has come up for discussion time and again, but nothing definite has ever been done toward generally adopting the plan. In some States it is being carried on, but not to any large extent, and now New York State is being urged to solve the problem of how to get good roads by utilizing convict labor.

THEY WILL NOT RACE.
FRENCH WITHDRAW.

Cable dispatches received in New York state that the sport committee of the Automobile Club of France has received notice that the Richard-Brasier Bennett Cup drivers will not compete in the Vanderbilt race. Heath (Panhard,) who won the race last year and was fifth in the French trials, and Le Bion (Hotchkiss,) who was sixth, will be substituted. Drury (De Dietrich,) Sils (Renault) and Wagner (Darracq) will be the other members of the team.

ALL AROUND ATHLETE.
ONE FOR OCCIDENTAL.

Ed Merrill has landed an all-around athlete from Bellevue College, Kansas, named Cleveland, heralded as a good man in track. He has won medals for all-around work, and is a fair football player, but will not go in for this part of the game.

Perfect Auto Motors.

A lover of statistics has figured out that in the recent six-day race held at Long Branch, the motor of the winning car revolved about a million times a day, or six million times during the week, and during that time was stopped less than twenty minutes. Conservatively figured, the motor turned over 700 times a minute, which means 4200 times an hour, or about one million times in the twenty-four hours. From this it can be readily understood to what a degree of perfection motor manufacturers have brought their product.

STAR GOLFER IS THIS LADY.

WINNER OF WOMEN'S CUP IS A FINISHED PLAYER.

The Career of Mrs. Charles L. Dering on the Links—Wins Matches by Her Classy and Consistent Play, Rather Than by Excess of Brilliant Strokes—May Play on Coast.

Mrs. Charles L. Dering, the Chicago Midlothian Country Club golfer who a week ago yesterday won the womens' western golf championship in a driving rainstorm over the Homewood links in the Windy City is one of the most consistent stick swingers in that center of the Scotch game.

She is thirty-seven years of age, and enjoys magnificent health and a very robust physique, thanks to her love of outdoor sports, playing a strong game of such consistency that many of the men players find their troubles in beating her.

Mrs. Dering's opponent in the final match was Mrs. Franc Anderson, and she defeated her four up and two to play after a journey around a mud-sodden course that resembled a duck marsh rather than a golf links. The weather necessitated a change in the usual route of play, but the hazards were increased rather than diminished by the alteration.

The new champion reached the semi-finals in 1902 and 1904 and therefore has the best record of any western player excepting Mrs. Bernard Horne, better known to golfers by her maiden name of Bessie Anthony.

Mrs. Dering is said to be especially effective with her mashie and mid-iron shots, which practically won the match for her.

Married seventeen years, Mrs. Dering has been a familiar figure in Chicago golf for over a decade, and was one of those fortunate players who seem naturally adapted to the game which they essay, much as Miss May Sutton seems born great in a tennis sense.

The Derings will probably make a coast trip this winter, and Mrs. Dering in that event may be seen on the local links.

ITALIANS OUT FOR THAT CUP.

LANCIA FAVORITE IN THE BIG VANDERBILT RACE.

Drivers of the F.I.A.T. Cars Practicing Faithfully While the Yankees are Loafing — Another Economy Test is in the Air—New Scheme for Track Racing Afoot.

If the Americans don't look a "leedle oudt" that crack quintet of Italian F. I. A. T. drivers will carry off the Vanderbilt Cup right under their noses.

With months ahead of them in which to become familiar with every foot of the Long Island course, over which this American classic of road racing is to be held, the native auto pilots have contentedly sat upon their haunches and watched the foreigners sprinting around the turns, over the rough and the smooth, the steep and the level places, basking in the misleading light of an ill-founded assumption that they can win the event without working for it. Such is the fallacy of the prize-fighter who goes into battle without proper preparation—and generally gets his head beaten off.

Lancia, the fat Italian who gave Thery such a rattling, rousing run for first money in the Gordon Bennett race, will be favorite in the Vanderbilt competition. This is now an assured fact. It must hurt some of the American cracks, but up to latest reports from New York it had not succeeded in putting the fear of the gasoline god into their hearts enough to make them get out and hustle around the quarter-century course a few times.

Some of the American contestants have been rambling over the route in a desultory way, but the concerted effort of the foreigners is altogether lacking. Too bad if a bunch of dusky-skinned southrons from the sunny slopes of the Mediterranean can cross the Atlantic and give our Yankees lessons in hustling!

The Italians, Lancia, Cedrino, Sartori, Nazzari and Chevrolet, are already on the field, and they will enter the elimination trials with a quart of blood in each eye. As the Irish mechanic puts it: "Thim bloody Dagoes sleep a lot, but when they wa-ake up, they are hell indade."

It would be a shame to put American manufacturers to the expense of crossing the seas to compete for the Vanderbilt Cup another year when by a little ordinary caution it might be kept in this country, and the amount of money spent in racing for it held in the United States, to say nothing of the sporting aspect of the matter.

Another economy test of national importance is in prospect. The New York Motor Club, under the management of A. B. Tucker, is contemplating one. The Long Island tests of 200 miles won by Dr. Parker's Franklin were very successful, and automobile men have been demanding something of the same sort on more extensive lines—say, a series of short tours over typical American roads. New York as a central point affords opportunity for many of these.

When at Ormond a year ago last January Willie K. Vanderbilt drove a mile straightaway in 0:39, the automobile world stood aghast, and cries of fake came from Europe, where the Americans were charged with allowing the beach rarefied air to get into the records of their matches.

Today, one car after another of no greater power than Vanderbilt's, is equaling or bettering that performance, and over courses admittedly not as fast. A. L. Campbell drove S. B. Stevens' Darracq in 0:38 at Cape May Beach last summer.

Already the makers and importers are preparing for the winter races at Ormond, and considerable advance speculation is rife relative to the time in which the mile will be done. Two miles a minute is predicted by some, but the conservative element does not look for anything much below 0:35.

Hollander & Tangeman have prepared to have the entire Italian F.I.A.T. team compete at Ormond.

There is considerable talk in New York of a national highway to extend across the continent from New York to San Francisco, and over which an automobile might travel at railroad speed.

As yet the matter is entirely visionary; no plans have been made, or is it suggested how the money is to be raised, other than by Federal aid, but those who stand well up in the autoing game say there is more than a chance that such a highway will eventually be built.

RICH PRIZES IN SIGHT.

[BY DIRECT WIRE TO THE TIMES.]

BERLIN, Sept. 16.—[Exclusive Dispatch.] Negotiations are proceeding between Prince Solms, the president of the Austrian Automobile Club, and Baron Brandenstein of the German Automobile Club, for an international road race between Vienna and Berlin to be contested next year on the occasion of the Herkomer race, which will be most probably held in Prussia. Rich prizes will be offered in order to attract entries to the races. It is stated that a powerful company is in the course of formation for the construction of automobile cabs to supplement the few vehicles of this description now plying in the streets of Berlin. Altogether there are 1270 automobile vehicles of varied kinds belonging to Berlin and its environs and it is noteworthy that the percentage of accidents that these vehicles had to record last year amounted to 2.5 (32) whereas among the 8029 droschkes the percentage was 4.9 (39.)

Both teams have strengthened up to a great extent and a good game is expected, as it is to be for money and for blood. Line-ups are as follows:

Auto Reliability Scheme.

A rather novel plan to prove the reliability of automobiles will be put into effect in a short time by an American maker. He is arranging to run a car for a month or more between two big cities, following a time schedule just the same as the railroad train. No attempt will be made to make railroad speed, but efforts will be directed toward arriving and leaving each town in accordance with the time schedule.

GROUSE AND SOCIETY ON SCOTCH MOORS.

Rich Americans Take the Lead in Bagging the Fifteen-Dollar Birds. Cousin of the President Content to Eat Cheaper Ones.

BY WILLIAM E. SIMPSON.

[STAFF CORRESPONDENCE OF THE TIMES.]

TO DO the thing up in style costs an outlay of $20,000,000 a season for fashionable grouse hunting on the Scotch moors, and rich Americans put up the money. "Silent Smith's" grouse cost about $20 each, and the Bradley Martins will pay, perhaps, $17 for each bird bagged. The average is about $15. Not sport, but social prominence, seems the chief object sought, and slaughter of birds furnishes a pretext for the latter. The affair has developed into a great annual festival of fashion.

LONDON, Sept. 7.—Americans are this year setting the pace by reason of which the grouse season—that great annual festival of fashion and sport for which Parliament adjourns and leaves the British Empire to run itself—will undoubtedly pass into history as the most successful ever known. By that [illegible] the most costly. Here grouse shooting, much more than horse racing, has become the exclusive pastime of the wealthy. And because the Americans have more money than other folk and are more lavish in spending it, they have taken the lead in the social carnival of which the killing of grouse merely furnishes the excuse. It matters nothing to them that the birds slain by them and their guests cost them from $10 to $15 apiece and can be bought in the market for a mere fraction of these sums. It is for the social cachet—the distinction of being in the swim—that they ungrudgingly pay the difference and consider that they get full value for their money. The shooting season began on August titled sister of Silent Smith, will do the honors for his Scotch seat

"Alvie" Scotch seat taken by Mrs. H. W. Poor
Castle where Henry W. Phipps will entertain re some of the money-shooting American grouse hunters are making hits.

and lasts three months. During that period it is estimated that, directly or indirectly, on account of its sport, $20,000,000 will be expended in Scotland. Of this, $3,000,000 goes for the rental of moors and shooting rights, and the larger share of the balance for entertainments, social dissipations and high living generally. But the expenditure which might be fairly charged to the shooting account—providing gillies, beaters, gamekeepers, dogs, guns, conveyances for shooters, luncheons, etc., is a heavy one. Add to the rental and running of the moors is added the cost of the social campaign for which the slaughter of grouse furnishes the pretext, each bird killed represents, at a moderate estimate, an expenditure of $9.

AMERICANS PAY MOST.

Of course, the Americans will achieve the distinction of paying most for their birds. In the aggregate, the number of Americans who have leased moors is not large; yet they pay over [illegible] in rentals and will probably spend at least five times that much in sustaining their reputations for generous hospitality and lavish expenditure. Taking into account all their expenditures during the season, it is estimated that each bird bagged on the moors they lease will really cost them [illegible]. If only the rental and actual expenses of running the "moor" for shooting are taken into consideration, the birds would represent an expenditure of $3.25 to $5.50 each. I believe that J. R. Roosevelt gets his birds at a lower price. If Carnegie leased his moors his birds would cost him considerably more based upon the same basis of calculation. Of the renters, "Silent Smith" pays the most, while Col. Payne, the Bradley Martins, Mrs. Poor and E. D. Jordan of Boston are not far behind.

Mr. Roosevelt, who is a cousin of the President, has leased Armadale, in the County of Sutherland, at $5000 for the season, more with a view to a full enjoyment of the sport than to a social campaign. The lodge is an unpretentious one and not particularly suitable for the entertainment of large parties. There are 40,000 acres in the shooting, which should yield abundance of grouse, at least ten stags and various quantities of ptarmigan, woodcock, snipe, hares, etc. The total expense, including rent and extra servants for this place will be not far from $16,000, so Mr. Roosevelt's grouse will cost him an extremely low price as grouse go.

Richard A. McCurdy, president of the Mutual Life Insurance Company of New York, has taken Braeroy, in Inverness-shire, and will entertain some of his intimate friends there during September and October. Some rather large parties may be conveniently taken care of at the lodge, as it has been nearly doubled in size since last year. There are 20,000 acres of good moors, which extend over the whole upper valley of the Roy and the upper series of the famous parallel roads of Glenroy. The rent for this property is $8000. Based upon the number of birds killed upon this moor last year, and excluding the cost of Mr. McCurdy's entertainments and other extraordinary expenses, each bird bagged will cost him $4.75.

MRS. POOR'S COSTLY GROUSE.

Mrs. H. W. Poor of New York, who recently has been staying at the Hyde Park Hotel, has taken Alvie, in the shire of Inverness. This is an exceptionally desirable moor, and as there are ample facilities for a large number of guests, Mrs. Poor will, I hear, make the most, socially, of her Scottish outing. There are some 8000 acres of land, which offer what sportsmen call "a well-mixed bag." There are grouse, snipe, duck, plover, roe deer, stags and black game, besides salmon and trout fishing. The house contains fifteen bedrooms, three reception rooms, a billiard room, nine servants' bedrooms and all modern conveniences.

In addition, there are the usual kennels, stables, gardens, etc. The quality of the sport and the superior residential facilities make this an expensive place, and the cost of each grouse, exclusive of the purely social side, will easily be $5. With the social mixture added, $15 per bird is rather under than over a correct estimate.

Col. Oliver H. Payne will make Novar, in Ross-shire, the scene of that lavish hospitality for which he is famous, and can so well afford. Novar is an excellent sporting and residential estate, with a large and handsome mansion and extensive shootings, yielding all kinds of Highland game. Assuming that Col. Payne's grouse bag equals that which the property yielded last year, his grouse will cost him over $17 apiece, as his social events are of the most elaborate kind.

Besides the shootings which go with the 21,800 acres belonging to the Beaufort Castle estate of Lord Lovatt, Henry W. Phipps has acquired the grouse moors and deer forests known as Boblainy, Convinth and Fanblair, while J. S. Phipps has taken Glendoe. In all the Messrs. Phipps have leased 63,000 acres, which, however, showed a low yield of grouse last year, in fact, only about 2000 birds. But this was more than made up for by the number of other game captured, which included over 100 deer, 15,000 pheasants, 2000 partridges, 1000 hares, 10,000 rabbits, besides liberal quantities of blackgame, woodcock and teal. The rents paid for these properties aggregate fully $30,000 and the cost of entertaining, etc., is estimated at twice that amount. The Phipps's grouse will be valued at about $12 each without adding the cost of shooting gillies in the closed season, one of whom was mistaken for a poacher by the young Mr. Phipps in July.

With Inveraray Castle, which he has leased from the Duke of Argyll, E. D. Jordan of Boston, has this year about 16,000 acres of grouse moor, which should yield something like 900 birds at a cost of $3.75 each, taking into consideration only the rent of the property. C. W. Ogden of New York, has again taken Achdalieu in Argyllshire. Last year there were 1226 birds killed there at a cost of $3.10—calculated on the same basis as Mr. Ogden's bag. There are 25,000 acres of well timbered land, mostly forest, in this shooting, and deer are plentiful, sixty-two stags having been killed last year.

"SILENT SMITH'S" CAMPAIGN

Andrew Carnegie has let Inveran, one of his Scotch grouse moors, to Lewis D. Hall, who should be able to bag fully 1000 birds at a cost of about $5 each. That does not include social expenditures. Mr. Carnegie's grouse are expensive because of many improvements, which he has made on his properties. Old sport-loving Scotsmen are disposed to criticize Mr. Carnegie for the extent of the changes which he is making. In consequence of the increased expenditure upon his estates it is estimated that Mr. Carnegie's birds will be among the highest-priced in Scotland.

The Bradley Martins have again leased the grouse moors and deer forests of Balmacaan, Lochletter, Abriachan and Loch Ness. From this domain of 42,000 acres there should be some 1200 grouse bagged at a cost of $4.50 each, besides large numbers of deer, hinds and other game. The social outlay will raise the value of the birds about $17 a piece.

James Henry Smith has under his control as tenant this year more acres of grouse land than any other American. These moors include Phones, Dunachton, Dalnavert, Inchreach, and Kincraig. They extend over some 80,000 acres and so plentifully are they stocked with grouse that his cost is only about $2.25 each when only the rent is considered. "Silent Smith's" social campaign this year, though will come high. Lady Cooper presides over that department and each bird would be able to pay the $5 annual tax upon armorial bearings and still have a net valuation of $15, should Mr. Smith care to adorn every grouse with a separate lordly crest.

The King honors only one of the great social Highland fixtures with his patronage this year. Altogether there are three of these affairs, one at Inverness—the largest; another at Aboyne, and the most exclusive at Braemar Castle, which Consuelo, Dowager Duchess of Manchester has leased this year from Princess Alexis Dolgorouki. It is here that the King will witness the usual Highland sports and award the prizes. The Braemar Castle estate adjoins Balmoral, the favorite Scottish retreat of the late Queen Victoria. While the shooting is not considered "sporty" there are plenty of moors near by, which offer the greatest attraction for the royal gunners. The best shot in the royal family is the Prince of Wales, who ranks among the five best sporting shots of Great Britain. It isn't necessary to favor the Prince in the grouse drives—a proceeding hinted at when the King is concerned.

BRINGS SOCIAL PRESTIGE.

With the exception of the three social grouse fixtures named above, the round of gaiety is largely confined to the members of each house party who intermingle with the quality folk of the neighborhood in the most democratic manner. Nowhere are American girls more liked than in Scotland. No noble owner of grouse moors will lease his property to an American tenant without being well satisfied of the social standing of the applicant, consequently his temporary possession confers on him such social prestige that the doors of Scotland's clannish aristocracy are fairly opened to him. There is little formality, but much good fellowship. At some houses there are not more than two hunting days in the week. At others, where the sporting instinct is strong, every day finds the men at the butts or following Gordon or Irish setters after the drive.

It is easy to enjoy all the delights of Highland Scotland—provided you have the money and are in the "Social Grouse Register." If satisfied with a small lodge of say ten bedrooms, ballroom, billiard room, fifteen servants and some thirty "gillies," or under gamekeepers, the season may be comfortably negotiated for $50,000. This would put one in the very best of society and should yield a good bag of grouse. If more grouse than society is desired the same number could be killed for $25,000. If, on the other hand, social prominence is the first consideration, the American who rents a grouse moor in Scotland, with a castle or two thrown in, should be prepared to spend not less than $100,000.

For those who wish to perfect themselves in the art of grouse shooting, before entering upon the social side of it, there is a shooting school occupying a hundred acres within the limits of greater London where all but the social ethics of grouseland may be learned. Many notable shots have been educated in West London, near Perivale. These include the Duke of Roxburgh, Lord Balfour of Burleigh and Lord Lovat. A novice may be taught at this school how to shoot with some regard to the safety of others, to become acquainted with the Scottish grouse butt, and an essential stock of idiomatic Scotch. Indeed it is quite necessary to know exactly what to do with perfect society composure, but without hesitation, when The Mac Ghoosh, your gamekeeper, tells you "a bird is cowering in e' hole in the heather oot there" or "dinna ca' a droughty ca'! hoot mon."

SLAUGHTER—NOT SPORT.

As a social factor the Scottish grouse counts for a great deal. As an element of sport for very little. There are two methods of slaughtering the birds—for that is what it amounts to. The most popular, because it demands the least exertion, is to remain seated upon a chair behind a species of blind, or "butt" as it is called, made of stones to resemble a Scotch fence, and to blaze at the birds as they are driven towards you by a small army of beaters. Provided with three or four guns with a couple of attendants to load them some prodigious bags are achieved in this fashion. Another method is to walk up and down an imaginary line over which the hirelings drive the birds. The old method used to be to go out with a gun and a dog and really hunt for the birds, but this is now almost obsolete as the fatigue it entails unfits the sportsman for the evening's frolics.

Lord Walsingham holds the individual record for a day's bag, having killed 842 between sunrise and sunset. The largest number slaughtered by a party in one day fell before the guns of Rimington-Wilson and his friends who bagged 2626—equal to one bird in every ten seconds for eight hours. Americans are given credit for devising other methods of killing grouse, but as no bags are recorded except those made in the conventional fashion I cannot tell how successful they have been. One ambitious sportsman hailing from the United States is said to have erected an electric light tower towards which grouse were driven at night. The intense light attracted the grouse in numbers so great—so runs the story—that the guns were discarded and the panic stricken fowl were murdered with sticks. Another American is credited with driving a cow in front of him to beat up the heather in preference to a dog as the natural friendliness of the grouse for the bovine species permits the sportsman to secure a close shot.

Speedy Cherokee Steer That Trots to a Sulky.

One of the attractions this year on the western State fair circuits is San Antone Pete, a Cherokee steer, who trots admirably in harness to sulky, and can do his half-mile in 2:10¼, with apparent ease, and with all the evidences of keen enjoyment displayed by a thoroughbred horse, fighting for his head and impatient of restraint. The animal is owned and driven by Al Dougherty of Logan, Kan., who claims Pete is the only steer ever trained for speed in harness.

Pete belongs to a bovine race now rapidly becoming extinct. A quarter of a century ago Cherokee cattle were famous in the Southwest. The Cherokees differ greatly from the Texas "long-horns," being well set up and famous for horns of remarkable grace and beauty. They closely resemble the Spanish bulls bred solely for fighting purposes, and it is believed by many authorities that the breed sprang from animals imported by Spaniards into Mexico. They were not fitted for the hard life of the range, however, and gave way gradually before the hardy "long-horns."

Pete was born near San Antonio, Tex., and is an animal of remarkable beauty. He travels in a special car, and is as well cared for as any race horse. He races almost every day against horses, whose owners think they can negotiate the mile while Pete covers the half. The start always is made under the wire, with steer and horse abreast, and the thoroughbred has yet to be found who can close up the gap. Numerous attempts have been made to secure Pete as an attraction in the East, but his owner has declined all offers for the present season, as he is booked to exhibit at Portland, Or., before the exposition closes.

LATEST SLAUGHTERER.

Bill to Be Introduced in All Legislatures to Prohibit Use of the Automatic Shotgun.

Announcement is made by the division of the protection of wild life of the New York Zoölogical Society that a bill will be introduced in all the Legislatures in the United States as they convene, to prohibit the use of the automatic shotgun in hunting birds; diligent efforts will be made by prominent men in each State to secure the passage of the bill.

This agitation is the result of the recent appearance on the market throughout the country of an automatic shotgun, said to be backed by the "gun trust."

Writing of the new arm in Shields's Magazine, W. T. Hornaday says:

"The logic of the automatic gun question is so simple that any child can see it. That weapon is on the market solely because it is the most murderous bird gun ever made. Its six cartridges can be discharged, in quick succession, by six pulls on the trigger, and without taking the weapon from the shoulder. It is a shoulder Gatling gun, for use against wild creatures. It owes its existence to the fact that as a machine for wholesale slaughter it is more rapid and more deadly than any other gun. How the market shooters and the pot hunters will rejoice in it!

"How any self-respecting corporation can make and offer for sale so distinctly unfair a weapon is more than some of us can see. Can any decent dealer sell such a gun and remain decent? Can any decent citizen use it without sinking to the level of those who fish with dynamite, and kill birds with cannon?

"The persistency with which people try to make an absolute finish of the wild creatures is fiendish. The double barreled, choke bore, breech loader is not sufficiently deadly, so it seems. Are birds so numerous that faster guns must be invented! It is shameful and degrading!

"The defenders of the automatic gun may talk all they please about limiting the bag, but that will deceive no one who knows anything about the enforcement of game laws. Any man who knows anything on that subject knows that unless a game warden is sent out each day, with each party or individual hunter, there is no such thing as limiting the bag on any game smaller than deer.

"Gentlemen of the press, gentlemen of the gun, the fight against the automatic machine for bird slaughter is now on! Where do you stand?"

Let Me Give You the Benefit of My Experience

To my knowledge there is only one way that a permanent cure of chronic diseases can be accomplished. This is by discarding all guessing methods. Nothing short of personal treatment, and for the Exact Cause can ever bring the desired results. In this I am not disappointed, for I see and know and you may also know what you can depend upon. I not only give immediate relief, but effect a permanent cure.

NOT BY MAIL

Those who take my treatment are cured because I do not guess; every treatment has its effect. Have you tried many treatments and have you treated by mail by guess and have you met with disappointment through unreliable methods? Could you expect anything else from guess work? Diseases are not cured by guessing, but by knowing the exact cause and how to remove it. When I treat your trouble I know just what to do and how to do it. My facilities are especially adapted to conditions requiring personal treatment and I feel safe in saying the cures are more frequent than by the treatment in common use.

Varicocele

I cure in four to six days. Many men have treated unsuccessfully for varicocele. My treatment is painless and the results are complete and forever.

Stricture

I cure in the right way, once and for all. I remove all urethral obstructions, inflammation and soreness, and restore the membrane to a healthy condition, usually in ten to fifteen days.

Contracted Diseases

Failure to quickly cure these conditions is due to harsh measures, which are the direct cause for chronic conditions. My treatment is the most cleanly and perfect known.

GOOD OUTLOOK FOR FOOTBALL.

Work Started Everywhere by Hustling Coaches.

Situation Sized up at the Various Colleges.

Season of Clean Sport the General Prediction.

The festive "plunk" of the practice punt, and a patter of many cleated shoes on a dozen campuses now tell the initiate that once more the football season is "on" in Southern California.

Within most cases two or three weeks intervening before the first "varsity" game, the colleges have already started vigorous scrimmage practice, the methods of coaches varying in the routine of preparatory stunts, some, such as Haggerty of St. Vincent's going in for hard work from the first, while others, such as Merrill and Wadsley at Occidental are building up the physical condition of their men by easier stages, sending them across country for long runs every night in the English fashion.

By the end of the week, all of the Southern California institutions of learning will be busily engaged in teaching the young football idea how to shoot. With a big enrollment of students everywhere, and a more athletic lot of incomers than ever was chronicled before, football prospects cannot be called anything less than exceptionally bright at the present writing. Everything points to the best year the gridiron game has ever seen in Southern California.

Although the usual senseless scraps over the eligibility of playing talent will doubtless continue to be born of the jealousy of the coaches for one another over the securing of an occasional good man, and petty pique may result in further estrangements of relations, these childish ebullitions at present do not threaten the sport very seriously, and will probably prove "hatchets buried" by mid-season.

With Hempel at Sherman; Holmes at U.S.C.; Wadsley and Merrill at Occidental; Noble at Pomona, and Haggerty at St. Vincent's, intercollegiate football seems fairly safe. From time to time each of these worthy gentlemen will doubtless make a proper ass of himself over some of the "other fellow's" athletes, yet in the main they are a square, level-headed lot, out to do the right thing by each other and the game, and only afraid that maybe the other fellow isn't as upright in his intentions.

A good athletic agreement now exists between most of the colleges, and thus far there has been no attempt to break it. So long as scholarship standards are insisted upon and athletics are not made of tantamount importance, there is no prospect of professionalism, and that bogey will in all probability command very little respect this fall from either press or public.

The enterprise of a coach in persuading some good athlete to enter his school is perfectly legitimate so long as it does not resort to unfair inducements to gain the end. Thus far no attempt of the sort has been uncovered, and it is refreshing to state that at the present writing, everything points to a season of clean, high-class gridiron sport with well-matched teams in the field, and plenty of games.

The securing of local parks by some of the coaches for exhibition purposes seems the most likely source of trouble in athletic circles just now. With two trump cards in their hands the fortunate magnates are in a position to dictate terms upon which they will, or will not, meet such opponents as they may elect, and this has been a fruitful cause of trouble in the past, having resulted in a lasting estrangement between two local colleges which had no real foundation in fact whatever.

There is no governing body in local athletics except the Pacific A.A.U., of which Al Lawton is representative, and the union does not mix much in intercollegiate affairs. These are settled in the North by agreements, and much the same procedure is followed in the East, where the big universities have an association of their own, both in the conference colleges of the Middle West and the Atlantic institutions.

All that is necessary, well versed men say, is that the various schools continue to act in good faith and live up to the doctrine of clean, amateur sport, remembering that persistent professionalism is its own punishment in any college.

HARD WORK AT ST. VINCENT'S.

"IMPORTED BACK FIELD" WILL DO GREAT THINGS.

Old Guard of Last Year to Hold Down the Line—Team Goes North Thursday, Meeting Big Game. Where the Strong Players Come From.

Frank Haggerty, the hustling boss of athletics at St. Vincent's College this year as last, has carried away all honors for being the first to get to work. While some of the schools have not yet started training, the husky collegians of St. Vincent's have been going through a hot course of sprouts each afternoon, and are now up to open field tackling and scrimmage plays, running their signals, and practicing new formations before some of the others have taken the kinks out of their legs.

Scrapping an end run
In battle array

Whether this scheme of early training is entirely well advised can be told about the middle of the season when most teams begin to get a little stale. Haggerty had his men too fine by playing time last fall, but he has a better lot, and more experienced timber this year, so does not feel the need of drilling them as incessantly as when he was burdened with a bunch of fellows who didn't know how to catch a punt.

Haggerty's "imported back field" this fall bids fair to show the natives something about the game of football. For quarter-back a Los Angeles lad who has been captaining the St. Matthews team up north—Roy Seeley—a first rate all around athlete, is available, having decided upon St. Vincent's College. He is a brainy lad, tricky in play, and resourceful to the limit. Weighing about 160 pounds stripped, he will be of some value in charging, and his speed should show to advantage in carrying the ball.

When Frank Acker returned from the rocky rivers of Colorado, he brought with him in place of Burch DeLappe a former team mate, Perry Cunningham, who is heralded as a splendid all-around football player. He is physically about a duplicate of Acker, not quite as stocky, but built from the ground up in the accepted style for a back. The pair of halves will probably strip 170 pounds. Cunningham is fast, and hits the line hard on occasion, but to judge by practice, his specialty seems an intuitive faculty of finding holes and going through the points of least resistance.

Between this pair will be Jim McElroy of Michigan, about whom the charge of professionalism smoked and flashed in the pan last week. This young man is of wiry physique; probably weighing about as much as the other lads, but taller, and he is said to be one of the most sensational line hurdlers and end runners ever turned out in the Badger State's independent football circles.

McElroy comes from Grand Haven, Mich., where he played and coached a team supported by a millionaire who owns about half the town. McElroy was the star player of the aggregation, and by virtue of his ability and experience was chosen to instruct the rest, but says he received no pay whatever for it.

The St. Vincent's line will be without its "whale" center, Samples, who is now in the northwest. "Rube" Stewart is slated for the position, and on each side of him will be players who made the Orangemen's first team last fall.

St Vincent's College football squad, sixteen strong, will leave next Thursday for the North where they have a game scheduled with Stanford the following Saturday, and it was to prepare for this that Haggerty started hard training so early.

Haggerty's ends this year will be two of the fastest men in the South, Henry Murrietta, and Irvine, the distance runner. They will be a hard pair to beat getting down the field, and are good sized fellows withal; Murrietta is a six-footer. Next to Parsons he was the swiftest runner in local athletics last season.

Phelps, Mournier and other last year's first team men are the tackles. McDonald and Phillips are leading for guards at present, but Phillips recently wrenched himself in practice and may not play up North in consequence.

Following is the probable line-up of the team on its northern trip against Stanford and Berkeley:

With this bunch in good working order, Haggerty may hope to retrieve the record of last fall. If the lads pull together, and the linemen give those star backs a chance, St Vincent's ought to show the leaders quite a run for first money this season.

Regarding the standing of Acker, both the player and the St. Vincent's faculty state that he is carrying approximately an average of thirty hours of work at present. This sturdy lad has a good berth now where he will be well taken care of if he does the right thing, and he says he means to work hard to get an education.

U.S.C.'S HOPES.

HOLMES'S LINE-UP.

The probable line-up of the University of Southern California team, as given out by Coach Holmes, is as follows:

Center, Webb and Broderson; guards, Miller and Lowe; tackles, Charles Haigley and Critten; ends, Capt. Elliott and Shutes; quarter, Best.

Backs, White, Lennox, Ortwyn Chester Haigley, McCarthy. Of these men all are veterans of the team save the Haigley brothers who are from the University of Arizona; Ortwyn of Los Angeles High School.

Shutes, who is from the Arizona Normal School, Critten of Riverside High School, and McCarthy who was full back last year in University of Arizona.

"Of course I am not counting on the indefinitely large number of new students of whom I know nothing," said Coach Holmes yesterday, but considering the large nucleus of veterans already registered I am confident of a winning team. I am going after the coast championship and I intend to give those northern teams a stiff dose of medicine if it is possible. I don't care about the preliminary games. They will serve only to try out my men.

The first appearance of the squad, which will probably number from forty to seventy-five men, will be Thursday evening, when the students will hold a rally on Bovard Field. Great enthusiasm and a rousing good time is expected.

Actual training will be begun the first week in October, when Bovard Field will be closed to all but the players.

The annual Freshman-Sophomore game will take place Thursday of the second week of college. Over a hundred Freshmen have already registered and a lively contest is anticipated. The following afternoon the faculty will clash with the Seniors.

Manager Davidson, who has been in close touch with Coach Holmes all summer digging up new material and of whom much was expected by the students, will not return this fall from Princeton.

The student body will hold a meeting Friday noon to elect a new manager.

OCCIDENTAL'S HUSKIES MANY.

PRESBYTERIANS SHOW A BUNCH OF BIG FOOTBALL MEN.

Most of the Old Players are Back, and Some Good Country High School Timber is Recruited to Fill Places of Ones Who are Gone—The Schedule.

According to Coach Ed Merrill, prospects at Occidental promise better by far this season than they did last.

Hampered by a lack of good substitutes and a light, albeit fast team, the Presbyterians did pretty well last fall, considering. This season Merrill is not predicting anything wonderful, but he feels well pleased with some of the new material that has come in, and feels that it will give him a representative eleven, barring more than his share of football hard luck.

The big center, White, is lost to the team this year as is quarter-back Spalding, who was recently elected football manager. Spalding's pa said nay, and the young man unwillingly was forced to forego the fierce joys of gridiron sport.

Patterson, left guard; Bird and Moffatt, guards; Petty, full-back; Hagerman, end, Brude Merrill and Damaree, backs, are in school again, and a promising young quarter has enrolled in Hodge of San Bernardino High School. He weighs 150 stripped, is fast, heady, and quite experienced in the devious ways of football.

Five men in the squad weigh over 180, with their clothes on, but Merrill does not look for a team that will average over 170 in their football regimentals, or say, 160 stripped. Rockwell, a youngster from Phoenix, weighing 152, is well spoken of. Demaree will probably be played at end opposite Hagerman.

Merrill sees plenty of six-footers in the squad, and is tickled greatly thereat. The fellows are mostly of the long and slim order physically. The biggest is Center Conrad, also of San Bernardino High, six feet three inches tall, weighing 190 pounds. Out of the sagebrush has come another good pair in Burt and Wyman; the latter is a six-foot one-inch proposition, and weighs 200 pounds.

Clark, San Bernardino High's fullback, weighs 180 and may make the same position for Occidental this fall. Craine, who formerly played at tackle will try for half this year, there being no scarcity of big linemen.

Of these, one of the most promising is Von Schriltz of Santa Ana, who tips the beam at 188 pounds, all muscle.

Just how the squad looks in football suits will be known tomorrow afternoon when Merrill has them lined up for preliminary practice on the new field at Highland Park. A new plant has been installed at the Presbyterian institution of learning, consisting of a four-lap track, a good-sized gym and dressing-house, and the usual showers.

Wadsley has been running the squad across country four or five miles every night for a week, and has toughened the men's muscles up wonderfully by his English stunts.

The first games for Occidental are Los Angeles High School, on October 14, and St. Vincent's College, October 21. Then the schedule skips to November 11, when U. S. C. is taken on. November 18, Pomona, and Occidental hook up.

POMONA OUTLOOK.

NOBLE'S TROUBLES.

Though not much football light is breaking on the horizon from the direction of Claremont, occasional whisperings from Pomona College indicate that Coach Ralph Noble will be able to put out an eleven of good sized fellows this fall, most of last year's team having returned, and a number of good High School players having come into replace the delinquents.

It is said a small faction at Pomona is "knocking" Noble. For what reason is not stated, as he is an eminently fair chap, and a very hard worker.

Try It!

The cost is trifling, yet often big transactions are accomplished at small cost. Classified ads. in The Times are frequently the forerunners of large deals, and scores of small business trades are of daily occurrence as a result of them. They cost only a cent a word.

SPECIAL NOTICES—

WRINKLES REMOVED IN 10 DAYS ON A POSITIVE GUARANTEE.

FRECKLES ROUTED from face, hands and arms in one application. THE CHEMICAL FAT used in the Glycophine Filling work (not Paraffine work) as practiced by me with such marked success, is becoming more popular daily from the fact of the extreme simplicity of the operation making it most desirable, for filling out cavities and hollow places in the face and neck instantaneously. Results are apparent at once, and remain permanent. Chemical fat is injected painlessly into the place where fat should be; it acts directly as fat would, taking its place as if nature had placed it there. Saddle-back noses made perfect; moles absolutely removed without pain; birth marks positively removed in 24 hours, or money refunded; all work guaranteed. MRS. M'NAIL, expert dermatologist. Practiced in this city 10 years. Office and sanatorium, 123 North Flower. Take Second-st. car. Home 'Phone 7101. 17

PERSONAL—
MME. LE PIERRO.

Scientific palmist and psychic life reader; born with double veil; may be consulted on all affairs; all hidden mystery revealed; she will show how to overcome your enemies and unite the separated; tells your entire life, past, present and future. I will give you luck that wins success in business, speculation, health, mining or buried treasures.
There is no home so sad,
No life so blighted,
No heart so forsaken and lonely
That cannot be set right.
Your health, wealth and happiness depends upon your knowing yourself.
Psychic teaching and developing.
ALL WHO WISH A TRUE, ACCURATE, reliable life reading and learn facts and not fictions in place of truth, call at once and consult a reliable palmist and life reader.
MME. LE PIERRO, 654 S. HILL ST. 17

PERSONAL—WANTED TO BORROW $300 on good security; will show $2500 collateral, fully insured. Apply BOX 276, Ocean Park. 17

PERSONAL—Business.

PERSONAL—HAVE YOUR HANDS HONESTly read and the many future events of your life accurately prognosticated by the CELEBRATED, SKILFUL, SCIENTIFIC PALMIST, PROF. C. IRVIN ALTHOUSE, acknowledged by hundreds of the best intellects—his patrons—as the finest and most remarkable reader of hands in this country, and pronounced superior to Cheiro.
PROF. ALTHOUSE'S readings, which are thorough and scientific, have nothing in common, whatever, with the fictitious readings of illiterate, humbug palmists, life readers, fortune tellers, etc., who scarcely know one line or mount from the other. A satisfactory reading can only be had from one who has thoroughly mastered the laws of this wonderful science through years of critical study, large experience, etc.
With astonishing accuracy health defects are pointed out. Careful advice given in domestic, love affairs, etc.; also of financial success or failure, changes, deaths, investments, vocation in life, and many other important things you should know.
PROF. ALTHOUSE read the hands of E. H. Sothern, who says: "I find your reading coincides with Cheiro's." And, "I am greatly interested in scientific palmistry." Paul Gilmore, actor, says: "I want to express to you my keen appreciation of your reading; it is by far the most scientific I have ever had." Burton Holmes, formerly read by Cheiro, says: "Your (Prof. Althouse's) reading is the most interesting I have yet had." Juliet Crosby, actress, says: "Prof. Althouse has given me a most helpful, complete and satisfactory reading." Tod Sloan (famous jockey,) formerly read by Cheiro, says: "Your (Prof. Althouse's) reading is the most complete I have ever had, and can say for your work that it is wonderful." Also read hands of Admiral Schley, Gov. Pardee, Senators Clark and Pettigrew, Joaquin Miller, Baron Rothschild, Ysaye, Fritz Kreisler, Musin, Sousa, Innes, Kryl, Creatore, Donatelli, Modjeska, Marlowe, Caruso, Sembrich, Gadski, Susan B. Anthony, Rev. Anna Shaw, Warde, Kidder, Jefferson, Hobson, Edison, Nat Goodwin, Maxine Elliott, William Desmond, White Whittlesey, Violet Dale and hundreds of others. ALL READINGS STRICTLY CONFIDENTIAL.
Intelligent, high-class patronage solicited—those capable of appreciating the superior qualities of a fine reader. Daily and evenings. Sunday, 11 to 3. STUDIO, 423 S. BROADWAY. 17

PERSONAL—
MRS. MASSON,

the noted palmist of London, Eng., may be consulted at her offices, 322 S. SPRING ST. (Suite 17,)
by those desiring CAREFUL, CONSCIENTIOUS AND SCIENTIFIC HAND READINGS FROM ONE OF THE FOREMOST PALMISTS OF THE DAY.
The earnest student and thinker will soon learn, in his investigations along psychological lines, that what pertains to occult phenomena proper, can readily be distinguished from crude and oft-exposed SLEIGHT-OF-HAND TRICKS, the most common of which is the telling of the subject's name, age, etc., AFTER HE HAS HIMSELF WRITTEN THAT INFORMATION.
PALMISTRY, HONESTLY PRACTICED, will NOT tell you your name, but it WILL give you information of considerably greater value in every day life.
Your vocation, your present line of work, matters of health, marriage and domestic life, financial conditions, and ways and means of climbing out of a rut of ill luck into wide paths of success and prosperity can all be told you through scientific palmistry WITHOUT A SINGLE QUESTION, WRITTEN OR VERBAL.
MRS. MASSON DOES NOT CATER TO IGNORANT SUPERSTITION, BUT TO THE FINEST INTELLIGENCE.
HIGH-CLASS PATRONAGE SOLICITED.
(Daily and evenings. Sundays, 9 to 3.) 17

PERSONAL—
MARGARET GRAHAM,
"The Successful Psychic."
Tells you what you desire to know. Readings given by mail, but to out-of-town patrons. Sketch readings by mail, $1. Full life readings, by mail, $5. Inclose stamp and give time of birth.
Office hours, 9 a.m. to 7 p.m. Evenings by appointment. Fees most reasonable.
MARGARET GRAHAM,
339½ S. Broadway,
Directly opposite Mercantile Place.

"Opportunity, Master of Human Destinies, Am I."

I present today for the consideration of men who mean business a number of business opportunities that will bear the most careful examination. They are propositions of solid merit. I have no time for curiosity-seekers. If you are not in earnest, don't come. If you have some capital that you desire to invest judiciously, intelligently and profitably—I am at your service. Carefully go over the following propositions. You'll find nothing better in these columns.

A PAYING MANUFACTURING BUSINESS. ONLY $4000.

I have a neat little manufacturing proposition, established one year. It has had sales of about $6000, clearing a net profit of $1800; inventory will show assets of $35,000, and the business is capable of considerable expansion. Owner wants $4000 cash. This is something worth looking into. I'll strongly indorse this proposition.

ANOTHER PROFITABLE MANUFACTURING CONCERN.

IT GOES AT $10,000.

A manufacturing business established twelve years; does a business that averages about $1000 a month with a profit of about $300 monthly; will bear the strictest investigation, and can be sold for $10,000. This is a good, conservative business, that if properly handled will never decrease in value and will grow with the size of the city. Buyer will have to do the office work only. Better investigate at once. I predict that this will be speedily sold.

GOOD FACTORY.
$30,000 WILL HANDLE IT.

Factory with an output of about $60,000 a year, staple line of goods; established seven years; is capable of great expansion; energetic party devoting themselves solely to this business can double or triple it in a year. Will cost $40,000, which is just about the inventory value; good will and established trade thrown in; it is possible, if buyer is competent to assume, that $30,000 cash could handle this. There are orders now ahead for two months' production. This business has been showing an annual profit of about $10,000.

FINE GROCERY STORE.

Grocery store doing business now, at the dullest time, of from $35 to $50 daily. Has a small hardware stock with demand for more; is in a rapidly growing suburb of the city; has three years' lease at $25 per month in a new building. Will sell at inventory, about $3000. The section where this business is located is growing very rapidly, and the prospective value is good. Can especially recommend this opportunity.

ANOTHER GROCERY.
$3000.

Grocery store and building; two-story building on lot 50x150; fresh stock of goods, horse, wagon and harness, wood and hay; work enough for two men; price $3000 cash; just outside of city limits. This is an extraordinary value. It will go quick.

EXCELLENT HARDWARE STORE.
WILL BE ADVERTISED MONDAY.

Will have full details Monday of a hardware stock valued at about $8000, located in one of the best residential towns on the Coast. Owner will either sell or take partner.

GOOD HARDWARE PROPOSITION.
$40,000.

Located in a lively, wide-awake business town; exceptionally good opportunity; all details will be given at my office.

SUBSTANTIAL DRUG BUSINESS.
$12,000.

One of the best opportunities in this line in the State; centrally located on busy Broadway in this city; business will pay good profit if the right man will give it careful attention. Owner will take good Los Angeles or San Francisco property as part payment.

HOTEL DINING-ROOM.
A MONEY PRODUCER.

Good hotel dining-rooms bring good returns in this section of the country; this house is operated on the American and European plans. Has a number of steady patrons; lease covers a kitchen and dining-room equipment; possession can be had at once; everything in prime condition; handsome dining-room, large, commodious storerooms; excellent opportunity for transient trade in addition to regular patrons. If you are thoroughly familiar with the restaurant business, I can strongly recommend this proposition to you. There is a small mint of good money to be made here.

MINING STOCK BACKED WITH LOS ANgeles real estate is worth investigating. Our stock is so good that we are willing to guarantee it with every dollar in real estate that we own. The guarantee is that if our stock is not paying dividends and advanced in value inside of one year from date of purchase, you can get your money back by presenting our guarantee at the bank. We mean just what we say and the security is absolutely safe.

There are very few mines better than this and none that will give this guarantee.

The mine had thousands of feet of development, mills being installed and thousands of tons of ore ready to produce bullion within sixty days. This is your opportunity for a guaranteed investment as well as one of the best speculations offered, as we anticipate early dividends and decided advances in the stock from time to time.

Stock is only 15 cents per share and your money will be returned in one year, if you prefer it to the stock. Our money is in the proposition and we guarantee yours by a written guarantee from our bank, or deed in escrow for Los Angeles real estate if you prefer it.

Act at once as this is a bona fide offer, but not more than $5000 worth is offered for sale. Address BANK, E, box 168, Times Office. 17

BUSINESS OPPORTUNITY DEPARTMENT,
R. A. BURTON REALTY CO.,
416-418 Laughlin Bldg.
315 S. Broadway.

WE MEAN BUSINESS!!!!
DO YOU?

Our Business Opportunity Department is a clearing house for the buying and selling of business chances; it is a place where buyer and seller are brought together. Whether you want to buy or want to sell you will find us fair, square and unprejudiced in our dealings.

WE WANT GOOD BUSINESS OPENINGS FOR OUR CLIENTS.

If you have a good established business which you wish to sell out for some good reason, a business which will stand the fullest investigation, we want you to list it with us.

YOUR BUSINESS MAY NOT BE PAYING.

Possibly on account of lack of capital, or lack of sufficient experience in the line of business which you have undertaken, you are not making a success of the proposition. Now, we may have just the client who can make a success of your place, and if you are willing to make a sacrifice to have it taken off your hands, it is very likely we can make a deal for you.

NOTICE TO BUYERS.

Well-located grocery in prosperous outside town, doing a good business. Will invoice about $3000.

Established butcher shop in growing outside town, has good wagon route. Living-rooms. About $1600.

Art store in city, good stock, well located. Will sell or take lady partner. About $1200.

SEARCHLIGHT—
This famous district continues to increase its gold bullion output. The Quartette mine in this district has over $7,000,000 in ore reserves alone. The Searchlight-Parallel moved two more cars of machinery and supplies the past week. Work will soon be progressing with the new hoisting engine and continued from the 200-ft. level direct to 500 feet. The Santa Fe Company adjoining is also erecting a powerful hoisting plant. Keep your eye on Searchlight.

INVESTORS WHO KNOW
The enormous amount of money that has been made in the last few years in the big land and irrigation companies of the Southwest will note the following:
We hold options on the cream of a 30,000-acre tract of rich valley land, under canal; and 50,000 miner's inches of water; which is as fine a combination as money can buy; we are organizing a syndicate to colonize same.
We want 5 wide-awake business men of means to investigate thoroughly, then join us in the syndicate as directors in same. We have the exclusive water right and all canals have been constructed.
At least three of California's largest capitalists were in the race to secure this tract, but our man won out.
We cannot make our proposition to you in this small space, but if you are a conservative incestor, and want to put your money in a safe company where it will pay you a handsome profit, call at 222 H. W. Hellman Bldg. at once where you can see photographs of land, water canals, etc., and get full particulars. 17

ASSOCIATED OIL.
During the last three days, 160,000 shares of Associated Oil stock has changed hands on the Los Angeles Stock Exchange at 60 cents and better. This shows that there is great confidence in the stock and bears out our statement that it is safe and cheap at present prices. We cannot name the day when this stock will make another phenomenal advance, but the expected is liable to occur at any time. Three well organized bear raids have failed to carry the stock below 55 cents. The stock is absolutely safe at 60 cents and will reach 75 cents sure. If you have followed our adds and taken our advice you have made money on your investment. If you are among those who are still waiting to make up your mind we say, act at once.

AUTOMOBILES.

IN OPENING UP OUR BUSINESS IN Southern California, we placed three demonstrating, 16 horsepower "Reo" light touring cars in service on June 12th, as the demands for demonstrations were very heavy. As we have succeeded in convincing most all of the prospective light car buyers that the "Reo" is the real article, we now find that we are enabled to cut our demonstrating cars down to one. This, therefore, leaves us two of these cars which we will sell at $1150 each; absolutely spot cash and no discount from this price, as these cars, except for the wear on tires and for the lack of a coat of varnish are just as good as new and we will guarantee them for one year from date of purchase. These cars will not be sold outside of the city. REO MOTOR CAR CO., 420-22 S. Hill st.

GUEST ENDS ALL.

MAINE A SUICIDE.

ASSOCIATED PRESS—P.M.]

Sept. 16.—William C. discharged naval officer of Maine, committed house on Eldorado street at 4 o'clock. He was the influence of liquor. He called at the door about 2:20, and asked leave to come in and rest. He asked to be awakened at 4 o'clock. The woman of the house woke him at the hour, and he sat up on the bed, but as soon as she had gone out he shot himself in the mouth, the bullet passing out through the top of the head. He died in a few minutes.

He had said he was trying to escape from some persons, and if he had an hour's rest they might get off his track. He had been cooking on a ranch near Edenvale and working at different jobs in the country.

SLOPE BRIEFS.

Court-martial Meets and Adjourns.

MARE ISLAND, Sept. 16.—The court-martial appointed to try Commander Young of the Bennington again met today, but immediately adjourned until Monday in order to give counsel for the accused officer time to prepare his plea.

Anchors in Dangerous Position.

PORTLAND (Or.) Sept. 16.—A Telegram special from Astoria states that a barkentine, whose identity is as yet unknown, anchored in a dangerous position early today near Clatsop Spit, at the mouth of Columbia River. Two tugs were sent from Astoria to the relief of the craft, and the ship was towed out of danger.

Stewart's Retirement Final.

BULLFROG (Nev.) Sept. 16.—Former United States Senator Stewart today denied the published report that it was his intention to again seek reëlection to the United States Senate. He declared that his retirement was final, and that he intended to devote the remainder of his days to his personal affairs.

Eli Wright Secures Release.

SACRAMENTO, Sept. 16.—Eli Wright, one of the four boodling ex-Senators, who was surrendered by his bondsmen yesterday, secured his release today upon the payment of $2500 cash into court by Grove L. Johnson, principal counsel for ex-Senator Emmons. This is taken as an indication that Johnson will defend Wright when the latter's trial comes up.

Winery Destroyed by Fire.

MARYSVILLE, Sept. 16.—The winery belonging to Gottlieb Sieber & Son and H. F. Sieber, was destroyed by fire today, entailing a loss of about $75,000, with insurance of $32,500. More than 100,000 gallons of wine were destroyed, some being ten to fifteen years old. One thousand tons of new grapes had just been received. Insurance of $6000 was placed on them yesterday. The vineyardists now have no local market for wine grapes, but the plant probably will be rebuilt by next season.

Wants Charges Pressed.

SACRAMENTO, Sept. 16.—The State Anti-Débris Association, at a meeting today, passed resolutions calling upon the State Débris Commission to press the charge laid with it against watchmen employed to gather evidence against hydraulic mines conducted in disregard of law. The association pledged itself to assist in the prosecution of the men. Meanwhile, it has suspended them, pending investigation. Charges had been made to the effect that certain watchmen had been trying to blackmail hydraulic miners.

Lotta After Bunch of Money.

SAN FRANCISCO, Sept. 16.—A case is now before the Superior Court of Marin county, in which Lotta, the actress, is endeavoring to establish her rights to a large sum of money entrusted by her years ago to Edwin S. Fretwell, now deceased, and formerly president of the American Bank and Trust Company. The amount involved is about $80,000. Some time before his death, Fretwell gave Lotta a will he had excuted, telling her that she was protected, as it gave her all his property. However, he made a later will, giving all his property to his wife. This latter will is now in course of probate.

Cigarette Starts Costly Hotel Fire.

STOCKTON, Sept. 16.—A fire which started in the attic of the Imperial Hotel about 2 o'clock this afternoon inflicted damage estimated by Daniel Rothenbusch, the owner, and A. I. Wagner, the lessee, to amount to nearly $20,000. The attic was used by the hotel employés as a dormitory, and it is thought a carelessly-thrown cigarette may have started the fire. The firemen soon had the blaze under control, and most of the damage is due to water. The insurance about half covers the loss.

ANTI-TREATY RIOTS.

Mr. Hioki of the Japanese Legation Explains the Nature of Them.

[BY THE ASSOCIATED PRESS—P.M.]

WASHINGTON, Sept. 16.—An official report concerning the recent anti-treaty riots in Tokio was today received by the Japanese legation. On the basis of this report, Mr. Hioki, chargé d'affaires of Japan, said today:

"My advices from Tokio do not attempt to minimize the condition of affairs as they exist.

"The immediate provocation of the riotous outbreak was the action of the police who sought to prevent a political mass meeting, and not the slightest feeling of hostility toward foreigners in general or Americans in particular, entered into the spirit of the mob.

"Of course, there are many Japanese who are disappointed at the terms of the peace treaty, and it is natural that they should express their disappointment, but the majority of the thinking class of my country deprecate the riotous action and regret the injurious impression created by these disturbances, which apparently led some people to regard them as an indication of a feeling of hostility on the part of the Japanese toward the United States. I am authorized to say that, notwithstanding what differences of opinion may exist in Japan over the terms of peace, there is a strong, united and friendly feeling toward the United States and deep appreciation of the earnest, impartial and sincere good will which has attended the efforts of President Roosevelt."

PLANNING A CABINET.

[BY THE ASSOCIATED PRESS—P.M.]

ST. PETERSBURG, Sept. 16.—Acting on an imperial edict, the Solsky commission will commence next week the elaboration of plans for a ministerial cabinet, the work to be completed before the meeting of the national assembly.

There has been considerable discussion regarding the extension of the present powers of the ministry in order to adapt it to the new conditions arising from the formation of the assembly, and Minister of Finance Kokovosoff has drawn up a project with that end in view, but a majority of the ministers took the view that a new body would be necessary to prepare the legislative messages that are to be submitted to the assembly.

The establishment of a Ministry of Commerce, following the lines of that of the United States, is being considered in government circles. Many officials favor such a ministry which would take over a number of departments of the overburdened Ministry of Finance and allied departments of the ministries of Railroads and Interior.

ARMISTICE NOW EFFECTIVE.

[BY THE ASSOCIATED PRESS—P.M.]

GUNSHU PASS (Manchuria) Sept. 16.—[By Asiatic Cable.] As a result of the armistice which is effective today, the outposts of the main positions on both sides will move back about two-thirds of a mile, and hereafter will display white flags.

There is now one fast train daily on the railroad. There has been a considerable advance in value of both native and Russian money. The natives welcome peace, and hope that the Peking government will send a strong man, like Yuan Shai Kai, Governor of the province of Pe Chi Li, to Manchuria, to reëstablish native authority and to prevent anarchy during the evacuation of the Russian and Japanese armies. The people fear the outlaws, who, in large numbers, are armed with Russian and Japanese rifles.

A report of the Red Cross administration shows that, altogether, 30,000 beds and twenty trains were supplied and $11,000,000 were expended during the year. Minor Red Cross organizations are already leaving for home, and with the consummation of the peace, the entire society will be relieved, the Empress's hospitals leaving last.

ZEMSTVO CONGRESS.

[BY THE ASSOCIATED PRESS—P.M.]

MOSCOW, Sept. 16.—M. Culvin, president of the Moscow Zemstvos, today visited Gov.-Gen. Durnovo, with reference to the forthcoming Zemstvo Congress. The Governor-General said that the congress would be permitted, but that its programme must be confined to three points: First, participation of zemstvos in town elections for the Douma; second, organization of the electorate campaign, and third, participation by zemstvos in town in the work of assisting the famine striken districts.

After the visit, notices were sent out summoning the congress to meet September 25. The programme of the congress was outlined as follows: Discussion of the functions of the Russian public with regard to the Douma; the establishment of unity of interpretation of the law of August 19 (the Emperor's manifesto promulgating the national assembly,) discussion of general programme as to national organization of the electoral campaign.

OIL MEN WANT TROOPS.

[BY THE ASSOCIATED PRESS—P.M.]

ST. PETERSBURG, Sept. 16.—Minister of Finance Kokovsoff has presented to Emperor Nicholas the memorial of the oil men handed to the Minister last Thursday, requesting that troops be kept at the works; that the police service be improved; that the unruly element be removed, and that a long-term loan, without interest, be granted. The Emperor ordered the convening at the end of September of a conference of oil men, industrial representatives of Central Russia, representatives of Volga steamship companies and those persons in governmental districts interested, to examine into the situation and to report to the Minister of Finance.

The Emperor also ordered the immediate concentration in the vicinity of the oil fields of a sufficient number of troops to guarantee order and the formation of a police force, recruited from reservists, for the protection of the works.

POLITICIANS HAVE CLOSE CALL.

NEW YORK, Sept. 16.—State Railroad Commissioner Frank M. Baker and George W. Dunn, well-known up-State Republican politicians, had a narrow escape from probable death in East River yesterday. They had been out on Long Island, inspecting grade crossings and taking testimony. On reaching the railroad station in Long Island City, Baker and Dunn called an electric hansom and started for New York by means of ferry. The bell signaling to the captain had been sounded and the hawsers holding the vessel to her landing had been cast off when the automobile started down an incline to the boat. Its front wheels reached the deck just as the signal was sounded in the engine room to go ahead. There the automobile stuck, the rear wheels still on the landing. All efforts on the part of the chauffeur to move his vehicle were unavailing. Meanwhile, the paddle wheels had begun to move and a space appeared between the boat and the landing. In a second's time, the cab was bridging the chasm. An inch or two further and it would have fallen into the river. Shrill yells from the employés ashore warned the pilot and he reversed the paddle just in time to prevent the accident which would have been especially serious matter to Baker, who recently lost one of his legs in a railroad wreck.

NEWFOUNDLAND FISHERIES.

WASHINGTON, Sept. 16.—[Exclusive Dispatch.] A. B. Alexander, chief of the division of statistics and methods of the Bureau of Fisheries of the Department of Commerce and Labor, is spending the season on the Grampus, the boat attached to the bureau investigating conditions of fishing off the coast of Newfoundland, particularly with regard to the rights of American fishermen in those waters.

It is admitted at the State Department that he is acting in a dual capacity, as an investigator of facts and a possible mediator.

Since the treaty of 1818 lapsed and the efforts of the State Department to negotiate a new treaty failed, American fishermen in those waters have fallen upon hard lines. They are liable at any time to arrest if found within the three-mile limit; they cannot procure bait nor dry fish that they have caught, and it is for the purpose of alleviating these hard conditions that the Grampus is now cruising in those waters, keeping in touch with both the authorities on the law and the fleet which tried to make a living at sea. Alexander will find a busy autumn.

OBSCURE SHOP IS AMBITIOUS.

PARIS, Sept. 16.—American merchants have written to Consul-General Gowdy, inquiring about an international exposition which, it was said, is now going on in Paris. The letters contained as inclosures, apparently, of the designations of space for American products in the various departments and sections of the exposition. The documents are signed "Director-General." An official of the American Consulate was sent to investigate the matter, and found that an obscure shop had assumed the name of "International Exposition," the proprietor explaining that he had followed the usage of the Bon Marche and other Paris establishments in adopting a symbolical name. Mr. Gowdy has informed the American producers of the foregoing facts.

PHILADELPHIA CANDIDATES.

PHILADELPHIA, Sept. 16.—It was officially announced today that the Republican City Committee and the Committee of Twenty-one members of the Union League had agreed upon the following candidates to take the places of those who last week withdrew from the county ticket: Dr. Joseph S. Neff for Sheriff; Thomas Dugan, Coroner; Howard A. Chase and William Emslie, former State Representative, county commissioners. Dr. Neff is a prominent physician and never held office excepting that of coroner's physician, several years ago. Dugan is now Coroner.

COTTON SPINNERS' DREAM.

To Eliminate Manipulators from the Market is the Great Achievement Sought by English.

[BY DIRECT WIRE TO THE TIMES.]

LONDON, Sept. 16.—[Exclusive Dispatch.] The elimination of manipulators from the cotton market is a dream cherished by the great English cotton spinners. C. W. MacAra of Manchester, a wealthy cotton goods manufacturer, who is president of the International Federation of the Master Cotton Spinners' Association, is the prime mover in the plan which makes gathering of statistics in regard to the staple in the Agricultural Bureau an undertaking by the aid of which the market is to be regulated by the ordinary law of demand and supply.

MacAra has been conferring with David Lubin, of California, who was the originator of the idea for the agricultural conference called by the King of Italy last spring. There is a possibility that the cotton manufacturers may join hands with the cotton planters in an effort to prevent the control of the staple from resting in the hands of the manipulators.

CRAZED BY HIGH ALTITUDE.

Former Resident of Los Angeles Meets Violent Death While Crossing the Rockies.

[BY DIRECT WIRE TO THE TIMES.]

OMAHA (Neb.) Sept. 16.—[Exclusive Dispatch.] Crazed by the high altitude, B. Schmitt, until recently proprietor of a confectionary store at Los Angeles, crawled through the window of a sleeper on the Overland Limited while crossing the Rockies and was dashed to death on the rock ballast of the Union Pacific's line.

Schmitt's mind had become affected while living in California and it was for the sake of health that he sold his business and suddenly told his wife to pack up, that he was going back to Council Bluffs.

It is supposed the change to the rare atmosphere of the mountains caused him to become suddenly violent.

His wife, who occupied the upper berth, continued the journey to Omaha and on her arrival here she was informed that the body had been found at Hanna, Wyo. Mrs. Schmitt immediately returned to take charge of the remains.

She claims Schmitt had $1000 in gold with him when he retired in the Pullman car on the night of the tragedy. Only $30 was found on the body. Officials of the road are making a careful investigation.

BOMB WRECKS BARBERSHOP.

NEW YORK, Sept. 16.—A bomb was thrown against the front of Casino P. Liotta's barber shop in Flushing avenue, Brooklyn, today. The explosion blew in the front doors and windows and tore up a portion of the floor. Liotta had received many threatening letters within a year and within a week a writer of one had informed him that he would be killed if he did not at once put $600 where it could be found by the writer. When the bomb exploded three families, including that of Liotta, who lived in the building, fled from it in a panic. Liotta opened fire on a policeman who came running to find the cause of the explosion, but the bullets went wild. It is believed the bomb was thrown from the platform of a passing street car.

CAN SHOW HE HELD THE JOB.

NEW YORK, Sept. 16.—A sack of letters is reported to have been found yesterday by inspectors in the home of Isaac G. Downing, who was removed from the office of assistant postmaster at Yonkers last Saturday by orders from the Department at Washington. Downing had been assistant postmaster more than thirty years. The inspectors are stated to have obtained entrance to his home secretly and at once have made a thorough search. The report is that the mail sack was a regulation one, containing more than 250 missives, some of which had not been opened. Some of the postmarks dated back several years.

FIVE HUNDRED GIRLS IN PANIC.

CHICAGO, Sept. 16.—Fire in the basement of the Occidental building, 61 Market street, caused a panic among 500 girls employed in the eight-story structure at Market and Washington streets today. Order was restored only after men employed there had persuaded fifty young women to leave the fire escapes on three sides of the structure. The women then turned to the stairs and elevators and were conducted safely to the street. Twenty of the girls fainted after escaping the flames. The property damage was small.

"DAVY CROCKET" DERAILED.

SAN ANTONIO (Tex.) Sept. 16.—Large pieces of iron piled on the track, supposedly by wreckers, derailed the San Antonio and Arkansas Pass Railway's "Davy Crockett" special shortly after 9 o'clock tonight, as the train was leaving the city limits. The engine, baggage car and two coaches turned completely over. John Wolf, the fireman, was killed and Harry Martin, the engineer, was seriously injured, and may die. Two passengers were seriously hurt. All were of this city.

MAY INCREASE CAPITAL STOCK.

SALT LAKE CITY (Utah) Sept. 16.—The temporary restraining order recently secured by Col. E. A. Wall to prevent the Utah Copper Company from increasing its capital stock from $4,500,000 to $6,000,000, as a part of the plan whereby the property was to pass to the control of the "copper trust," was dismissed today by Judge Morse, in the State District Court. The Utah Copper Company being a New Jersey corporation, it was held that the issue should be decided in the New Jersey courts, where a similar proceeding comes up for hearing Tuesday next.

BOMBS AMONG SALVAGE.

HELSINGFORS (Finland) Sept. 16.—Divers have arrived at Jakobstad to examine the wreck of the British steamer John Grafton, which was sunk by her crew September 10, after landing a portion of her cargo of arms and ammunition on a barren insland in the Gulf of Bothnia. Among the steamer's salvage, boxes of bombs and explosives have been found, besides the rifles already reported. The investigations have failed to throw much light upon the incident.

MINING PROPERTY TRANSFERRED

BOSTON (Mass.) Sept. 16.—[Exclusive Dispatch.] It is announced here that the American Smelters Securities Company has secured control of the Federal Mining and Smelting Company by purchase of a majority of the common stock, also the control of the Dairy Farm mine in California.

OBITUARY.

Miss Alice Hamilton.

NEW YORK, Sept. 16.—Miss Alice Hamilton, grand-daughter of Alexander Hamilton, died at her home in this city tonight, aged 60 years.

DANGEROUS VACATIONS.

NEW YORK, Sept. 16.—Vacations spent in small farmhouses, poorly ventilated, with bad drainage and contaminated water supplies, are declared by several leading physicians of this city to threaten an epidemic of typhoid fever during the autumn. The doctors declare that stringent measures will be necessary to prevent a great amount of sickness from these causes among persons who spent their vacations in the country, supposedly enjoying a change of air and fresher food than they get in the city.

WANTS PINK TEAS CUT OUT.

CHICAGO, Sept. 16.—The exclusion of afternoon receptions—with their pink teas, costly gowns and other luxuries—from the local, State and national meetings of women's clubs was advocated yesterday by Mrs. James Frake of Chicago, president of the State Federation of Women Clubs, in her address before the Sixth Congress District Convention of Women's Clubs, held at Maywood. She contended that the receptions usually given were extravagant and unbusiness-like.

SANTO DOMINGO NOW QUIET.

BALTIMORE, Sept. 16.—Prof. Jacob Hollender of Johns Hopkins University returned to Baltimore today after having spent a month on a visit to Santo Domingo as the special agent of the United States government and the adviser of President Roosevelt in dealing with the fiscal affairs of the island. He is now preparing his report for Congress. He said today: "The island is quiet and undisturbed. I believe Santo Domingo is entering upon a new era of prosperity."

BELGIANS ADMIRE "TEDDY."

NEW YORK, Sept. 15.—The public square of the canton of Ninove, in Belgium, has been named "Place Roosevelt," by order of the canton's legislative body, in admiration for President Roosevelt's share in concluding the peace treaty between Russia and Japan. Announcement of this honor to the President will appear in tomorrow's issue of the Army and Navy Journal.

FREIGHT HANDLERS SNUBBED.

CHICAGO, Sept. 16.—Freight handlers, in the event of a strike, must do without the support of union teamsters. Officers of the Truck Drivers' Union today notified the Chicago Team Owners' Association that the teamsters' organization will not help the freight workers and will deliver to or receive goods from non-union men. The team owners refused to join the fight against union drivers in the recent strike of teamsters.

FRENCH STATUE TO JEFFERSON.

ANGIERS (France) Sept. 16.—Ambassador McCormick, M. Jusserand, French Ambassador to the United States and officials of the Department of Fine Arts today attended the ceremony of the dedication of the statue of Thomas Jefferson. This is a replica of David's statue of Jefferson which former Congressman Jefferson M. Levi of New York, presented to David's native town, Angiers.

WATER-TUBE BOILER MERGER.

WARREN (O.) Sept. 16.—Official announcement is made of the consolidation of the water-tube boiler department of the Taylor Manufacturing Company and the Sterling Boiler Company of Barberton, O., with $4,500,000 capital. The Sterling Company manufactures boilers for government warships. The consolidation practically merges the water-tube boiler companies of the country.

IOWA LOSES POPULATION.

DES MOINES (Iowa) Sept. 16.—According to preliminary figures of Iowa's State census, the State had a total population, January 1, 1905, of 2,201,372, a loss of 30,481 since the census of 1900, when the State was accredited with a population of 2,231,853. Practically all the larger cities and counties showed gains. The loss was almost entirely in rural sections.

DUCHESS CONSUELO ARRIVES.

NEW YORK, Sept. 16.—The Duchess of Marlborough, who was Consuelo Vanderbilt, arrived here last night on a visit of a few weeks to her relatives and mother, Mrs. O. W. J. Belmont. Neither her sons nor her husband accompanied her and it is not expected that the duke will come over during his wife's stay.

FLASHES FROM THE WIRES

A tornado killed Mrs. E. B. McKinney, aged 60, and demolished fifteen residences and five store buildings in Burwell, Neb., Friday night.

John Davidson, well known both in this country and Europe as a dog fancier, breeder and judge at bench shows, died at his home, Monroe, Mich., yesterday.

A man who hanged himself Friday at Mamaroneck, N. Y., and was reported to be Paul Kelly, the missing motorman of the elevated train wrecked in New York last Monday, was declared yesterday not Paul Kelly.

George Schneider, aged eighty-three, formerly a banker of Chicago and treasurer of the Associated Press, died late last night at Colorado Springs, of old age. The remains will be sent to Chicago.

William Havenstraight of New York was chosen president of the Elevator Constructors' International Union yesterday at the closing session of its fourth annual convention, at Boston. San Francisco was selected as the meeting place in 1907.

Odd Fellows from all parts of this country, Canada and Mexico were in Philadelphia to attend the eighty-first annual communion of the Sovereign Grand Lodge. It is estimated that by Monday fifty thousand members of the fraternity will be in the city.

Sheriff Nesbit of Monterey County and a large party in search of a missing Japanese, found his body suspended by the neck from the limb of an oak tree at a point a mile from Watsonville yesterday. It had been hanging there since April 1. It is probably a case of suicide.

The Mexicans of the lower San Joaquin Valley celebrated the ninety-fifth anniversary of their national independence in Visalia yesterday. There was a flag-raising in the eastern part of the city and a parade through the main streets. There was a concert in the park during the afternoon.

Fire yesterday morning destroyed four barrack buildings at Fort Hamilton, in Brooklyn, sending the members of the One Hundred and Twenty-third Company of United States Coast Artillery, commanded by Lieut. E. L. Gilmer, from their quarters in such haste that they were able to save but few effects. Loss, $45,000.

The second advance for crude oil of the week adds 3 cents to Eastern and 2 cents to Western and Canadian products, Kansas remaining unchanged, says a Lima, O., dispatch. Texas light got a double boost. Heavy drains on gross stocks in all fields as shown by monthly statements, with the destruction of the Russian field and storage, caused the advance in prices. Operations for the Ohio and Indiana field this week show big production losses.

VERNON VOTES INCORPORATE.

Electors Decide to Organize Sixth-class City.

Very Little Opposition on the Part of Voters.

Will Try to Become Center for Manufactures.

The city of Vernon was born yesterday and for those who had a part in the victory the election was exciting.

Today the new city is in regular working order with a full complement of officials ready for business.

The town is divided into five wards, but only one polling place was necessary.

The registered poll was sixty-four in favor of incorporation and four against.

Though outside opposition fought hard to kill the project and automobiles and livery rigs scoured the town limits for voters to knock the incorporation scheme, the victory for incorporation was overwhelming. Not until the polls closed at 5 o'clock, however, did the friends of incorporation breathe easily.

Early in the day it was given out that cholos were to be herded to the polls to defeat the incorporation of the town. A fight was expected and all were prepared. The cholo did not appear and all was well.

The new town hugs the southeastern limits of Los Angeles and the incorporation is said to be for manufacturing purposes.

The schoolhouse which has been a subject of keen discussion between the Vernonites and the residents of Huntington Park immediately adjoining, will become a part of Vernon and yesterday's election was held in the school building.

The Vernonites declare they will settle the water question by developing their own system.

"They can call us the hogwallow," said one of the Vernonites last night after the election, "but we have skinned them to death."

This, he said, referring to the fight which the Vernonites declare has been waged by the Huntington Parkites against the incorporation of the town.

Said another: "They can't take our schoolhouse from us, they can't steal that strip of land along Slauson avenue, and they can't sell us water. We are independent."

A jollification was held last night in the new city of the sixth class and arrangements were made for a barbecue to be held in the near future.

The first officers of Vernon elected yesterday are:

Trustees—First Ward, J. J. Furlong; Second Ward, Benjamin E. Burge; Third Ward, William S. Holland; Fourth Ward, William M. Stevens; Fifth Ward, J. B. Leonis.

City Clerk, Garl Tainter; Treasurer, Willard E. Bassett; Marshal, Charles E. Shaw.

We Shall Empty This Store. New Goods for the New Store

Some people think that we are not sincere in stating that no goods will be moved to our new store. As a matter of fact, a great portion of the stock for the new store has already been received from the East and is now being unpacked in readiness for our grand opening.

We ask every citizen of Los Angeles to witness that the $200,000 stock in our present store will be sold out dollar by dollar.

We have compelled the trust stores to wake up a little, and yet we have only commenced the battle. We are boiling down prices lower and lower. The moment lines become broken we sacrifice them at prices more than sensational.

This Week Is the Time to Make Your Selections
Hurry, Hurry!

Not a minute to lose. Every hour goods are disappearing. Dozens of housekeepers have been disappointed by leaving the store to consult their husbands for a few moments, only to find that the articles they had in view had been snapped up. There is more excitement about this big removal sale than you would find in a dry goods store over a bargain table of trifles. Saving dollars is a pastime that appeals to all. Now is the time when you can positively beautify your home with all the luxuries, conveniences and comforts at prices that will never be known again.

XXIVth YEAR. SUNDAY MORNING, SEPTEMBER 17, 1905 On All News Stands Trains and Streets | 5 CENTS

"HOUSE AND LOT"—The Times' Weekly Review of Real Estate and Building.

FACT AND COMMENT.

COUNTRY real estate still remains very quiet, while city property soars higher and higher. A week ago the Sunday real estate reports showed a few transfers of good country property, but it is a case where the exception proves the rule that such property finds a dull market. There are many reasons for thinking this a mistake.

—o—

[illegible] are Low.

One reason for thinking it a mistake on the part of investors and speculators to neglect country property so much is the fact that in nearly every instance this class of property is offered at easy prices. City property and town and beach property are all eagerly sought after by many buyers. For business property in Los Angeles there are many more buyers than sellers. The natural result of this condition is a very stiff market and prices double what they were as late as a year ago in nearly every part of the city. Beach property too has made great advances, and these statements are true of all acreage, near the outside or close enough to Los Angeles to seem to justify cutting up into building lots. There are enough lots in and about Los Angeles now for a city of 500,000 population, and beach lots for as many more. The business center in the city has been so expanded it will now suffice for two and a half times the population at present here. The prices for lots far from the present business center are justified by the statement that great improvements are contemplated in a given neighborhood. That is all very well, but building brick skyscrapers will not swell the aggregate volume of business done in the city. That is only justifiable on the ground that the volume of business will be larger when the building is up. Unless business goes on growing whatever is done in one section must come away from another. Nothing of this kind has happened in the country. There has been no enhancement in values for country property in years. It's probably cheaper now that it has been in several years.

—o—

[illegible] from Country Property.

Many otherwise intelligent persons seem to think that there is no revenue to be had from country property. This is a great mistake. Take one of the cheaper kinds of farming land, alfalfa land. This cuts in Southern California to eight crops a year, a ton to the acre each cutting, or eight tons a year per acre. Hay is worth in the field loose, [illegible]. At these prices an acre of good alfalfa meadow will turn off a gross revenue of $50 to $75 per acre. The expense is very small, leaving the bulk of the income net. The land capable of doing this is worth $500 to [illegible] per acre. The cost of getting a stand of alfalfa set is not great, nor is there much time lost. Take an orange orchard. The growers have been getting 70 to 80 cents and upward per box net this year for Washington navels, and $2 to $2.50 per box for Valencias. A good orchard will yield a carload to the acre, and these have been bringing in $250 to $350 per carload. A ten-acre grove will net the owner [illegible] to $3500 a year. After paying all costs of cultivation, taxes and other expenses, including fertilizing, which does not have to be done every year, many ten-acre groves have been netting the owners $2000. Small communities have divided up as much as [illegible] from the sale of their orange crops. One five-acre orchard at Riverside, two acres in Valencias, and three in Washington navels netted above all expenses of marketing, including picking, $1635. Here are profits of 10 per cent. net on $2000 per acre, and even on higher valuations. Very few are orange groves held over $2000 per acre. In many instances, good groves which, with proper care, can be made pay as well as the best can be bought for much below $1000.

Lemons, Too.

Many persons who have owned lemon groves have been much discouraged because they did not pay. They are doing all right at present. The fruit has been bringing $2000 per carload and more for months, until almost all the lemons in Southern California have been marketed. They are now $7 per box. This comes to over $2500 per car. Some lemon orchards have been neglected by investors at $500 an acre. A man who bought one last spring can now sell the crop for five times the cost of the place. The owner of a lemon orchard who gets $2000 for the crop on an acre can afford to wait two years for another such crop.

—o—

The Richest City.

Riverside, a typical citrus fruit community, desires to be the richest community in the country of its size. The Chamber of Commerce of Riverside has issued a pamphlet which says: "Riverside is the richest city per capita in the entire United States. Riverside county is as large as Massachusetts and has only 20,000 inhabitants. There is an acre of oranges to each inhabitant and there is a vast amount of rich land adjacent to and tributary to the city of Riverside which is now idle and waiting for men and money to develop it. Riverside possesses the largest solid acreage both of orange and of lemon groves to be found anywhere in the world."

—o—

Ups and Downs.

There are few investments in the world sure for 10 per cent. return a year in twenty. These Southern California orchard industries have their ups and downs like all others. But they will come as near "making good" year in and year out as any. As for alfalfa meadows there is no apparent reason to doubt that they will become more valuable year by year. The same might reasonably be said of all the others.

—o—

Industrious Men.

An industrious family will be able to do all the work on a fifty or one-hundred-acre alfalfa meadow and hire no help from year's end to year's end. The same family can do all the work on ten or twenty acres of citrus fruit, with a little help, perhaps, in picking the crop. Where this is done much expense is saved and the family income is all the larger. There is no other class of farmers in the world who work less, enjoy life so much and have so much money to spend for the investment as the California orange grower or alfalfa raiser. All counted upon here is the net income from the principal crop. If a farmer will convert his alfalfa into milk, pork, eggs and chickens he can increase his earnings a hundred fold. If the man in the orchard will devote a little time each day to chickens he can add largely to his income.

—o—

Everything Has Its Day.

Today is the era of speculation in city property and beach lots. Those who made wise investments in these during the days of great depression, or even since the upward movement began are now taking out two, three to five dollars for every one they put in. There are a few now turning their attention to country property. They are getting in at the very bottom, and they will take out big profits, or Patrick Henry was wrong when he said he had no other light to guide his feet by but the past.

—o—

Market Conditions.

The realty market is not notably changed since the month opened. The demand for good business property has in no sense abated. The amount of such property on the market is no greater than before. As prices go higher new sellers come in willing to let go who had been waiting for the top notch to be reached. Of course, all sellers think this condition has come or they would not let go. Now one, by and by another, thinks he has held on just long enough. But for this there would be no business property at all for sale. The sellers of the last few weeks have been mostly old timers who never had any intention to sell until they thought prices were so high that there was no risk in letting go. They think the money will earn more in some other way. They do not sell because they have to do so. They sell because they think it wise. The buyers, of course, see the prospect in another light. They are for the most part newcomers, or residents of faraway cities. There is this to be said, they are persons of large experience in real estate, and reputed sound in their judgment on all matters relating to business. They are coming here from such cities as San Francisco and Chicago, to buy Los Angeles business property because they think it a better investment or a better speculation than property in their own cities. Another point to consider—the price here is much lower than in the larger cities. The highest price here is only half or less than half the highest in the cities named.

—o—

The Active Center.

The area where the demand mostly centers lies between Los Angeles and Figueroa streets, and south as far as Ninth, or even to Pico. North, it goes at least to First street, and when bargains are presented, to Temple. There is not much on the market north of Seventh street, and south of Temple. In the northern end of this area the western boundary is Broadway.

—o—

Residence Property.

There is not much demand just now for residence property, excepting for unimproved lots in bunches, which are generally bought for speculation. A large number of families are still at the beaches. This leaves a good many homes for rent. After this week the schools open and there will be from this on a big rush into the city. Those who must rent a house should lose no time. They can pick location, price and condition better now than in a few days. Those who intend to buy a house this fall can make nothing by waiting now. There are more in the market probably than there will be in a week, and more than in a month. Before many weeks eastern people will be coming in and this condition will increase until next March. Good houses are not likely to be any cheaper from today until next spring. It is not wise to wait until the rush is fully on.

—o—

Overvaluation?

[The following comes from one who seems to have been doing some quiet thinking. It may be a little pessimistic. Large cities must have centers more or less congested. Undesirable conditions will arise in any city growing so rapidly as Los Angeles. With a little caution the warning may not be without value—Real Estate Editor of The Times.]

"The question of profit is the deciding factor in most things. And especially is this true in the growth of cities. A man buys property, improves it, or lets it lie idle, sells it or holds it, as in his judgment the largest percentage of gain is to be made. Business districts and residence sections are built up and shifted about simply by the demands of trade. A palatial business block is flanked by a one-story shack; a beautiful home place is neighbored by a laundry, or an undertaker's establishment; a highly-improved lot is disfigured by an adjacent vacant lot given over to weeds and rubbish heaps—each owner acting for his own interests. In Los Angeles, the rapid growth in population and the recent rapid increase in valuations has led to very uneven development, outside of the main business streets. Property inside of the "close in" district which may be roughly bounded by Pico, Figueroa, Temple and San Pedro, is now held at such a high figure that it is impracticable as residence lots for people of moderate means, while it is undesirable for those who can afford to suit their own tastes. Hence outside subdivisions, suburban property and beach lots are booming, while there is still a large amount of property close in vacant or occupied by buildings of a past era. Improvements upon this property must necessarily be of an expensive character in order to pay a fair percentage on the valuation, or else every foot of ground must be utilized in cheap structures housing a large number of persons. In consequence this district is now largely given over to apartment houses, family hotels, rooming-houses, etc., which are fast approaching, in unsanitary conditions and indiscriminate crowding of tenants, the unsavory tenements of eastern cities. Owners who do not wish—or cannot afford—to put up new buildings, are adapting old ones, and often putting two or three old buildings on the same lot. In one instance three houses stand on one narrow lot in an already closely built-up neighborhood. In the hill districts buildings are being crowded against embankments, in some cases but a single side of the structure being exposed to light and air. Such buildings, of necessity, must be damp and unhealthy. Several alleys have also been converted into "streets," as Clay street, by facing buildings to the rear of the lot. Prices and rents are so high on all close-in property that working people must go out a long distance, sublet, or live in rooms. Nearly every residence in this part of the city bears the legend, rooms to rent, and a large number of people live in furnished rooms, often cooking and sleeping in the same apartment, or else subsisting on delicacies from the nearest bake shop, eaten off the wash-stand. All real home life is impossible under such conditions. Tourists and transients also occupy many such "rooms" during the winter. Just now the number of rooms largely exceeds the number of roomers and in consequence many houses and flats are vacant. One block alone contained six vacant houses and flats, the other day, beside three large rooming-houses and a fourth under construction, and fourteen or fifteen furnished room signs on other buildings. Business blocks will not be needed on all this vacant or unimproved property for a long time. There are now on Seventh street, between Main and Figueroa, seven vacant stores beside those in the course of construction. Evidently the supply of business buildings in this vicinity is well up to the demand. At the present valuation, however, owners must either put up business blocks, or flats and apartments, in order to get adequate returns and when the supply for these buildings is filled, there will still be a good deal of property unoccupied, while the population of the city is overcrowded or else widely scattered. There is room enough inside the city limits to accommodate a much larger population than we now possess, and to house it comfortably and healthfully if prices are not put and kept so high as to prohibit the building of moderate-priced homes. But a $2500 cottage can't be built on a $5000 lot. There is no real necessity in Los Angeles for inside rooms, sunless and ill-ventilated, for light wells, dark kitchens, basement apartments, for the abominations of Greater New York and Chicago. Yet a careful inspection of the accommodations now being offered in the central part of the city would reveal many such places occupied by families with children as well as by adults. It is bad enough when children must grow up in the most enticing of flats or apartments, but when they are condemned, in this land of sunshine, to dark, cheerless rooms with the street as their only playground, it is an outrage.

And what will be the result of the present condition of things? Will not the owners who are endeavoring to get all possible out of their property at a value that is, to say the least, exaggerated, eventually find themselves with depreciating rather than increasing prices before them? Can the present valuations be maintained and justified by the present needs of the city or by the needs of the immediate future? These are questions that it will pay the owners of "close in" property to frankly consider.

ALONG THE FOOTHILLS.

Country Homes in the Suburbs of Los Angeles Where Flowers Bloom and Sunbeams Glow.

Here is presented another group of charming homes along the foothills near Los Angeles. Pasadena may resent this way of giving the location. In truth they are nearer Pasadena than Los Angeles, but as the great metropolis of Southern California the city loves to lay claim to all her children and all their belongings, because she is proud of her numerous and lovely offspring. And thus trying to comfort Pasadena there comes a cry from Altadena, which says "This is I," or "This is me," according to the grammatical point of view. Yes, these homes are one more group of foothill beauties on the high mesa at Altadena. It is difficult for the artistic eye to get away from any of these charming spots, and so the camera is brought to bear on one and then another and still another rural gem until the operator says "No more plates." Oh, these places are so fascinating.

There is the house of the late Andrew McNally of Chicago, one of the first eastern men of means to see the charms of this spot and pitch his tent there. The house is one of the first to grace this high mesa.

The big palm is in the grounds of H. L. Story, another Chicago man and a newspaper man, whose keen eye and fine taste saw that here was the spot, at least a spot, to find comfort and satisfaction in a home.

The third picture in the group is a new house in the latest style of building in this land of sun and shade. It is decidedly original in design and is done in plaster. The ample veranda indicates the fine sense of the fitness of things which the owners have. Here the long sunny days and pleasant evenings may be spent with every physical sense at rest in the full enjoyment of perfect comfort, and every esthetic sense charmed with the view which in a long vista stretches over the valley below or lifts the vision and the aspirations to the jagged mountain tops, and upwards to the deep blue sky by day, or to the star-studded dome at night. This is the home of C. C. Clarke.

REAL ESTATE NOTES.

S. S. Wilder is putting up a $10,000 home on Hobart Boulevard near Washington street.

The Advance Buggy Co. is adding to their building at 3000 Central avenue, doubling their capacity.

A transformation scene has been enacted at the southwest corner of Broadway and Fifth streets where the big department store of Steele, Faris & Walker Co. is going. The new copper front is resplendent and the windows, beam-ceilings and other features are up-to-date. The inside is a flood of light. The mahogany finishing and the green tints are artistic. Elevators and wide stairs are arranged to make things easy for the patrons of the big store. The store will be known as the Fifth Street Store.

Tomorrow the John T. Griffith Company will forsake its old home in the Potomac building and enter new and well arranged offices in the Wilcox building. For thirteen years the firm has had one home. Increasing business calls for more roomy quarters so the new place has been leased for a term of ten years.

Leavitt & Geller is the name of a new firm to handle real estate. The office is in the Hellman building.

William H. Butten & Co., Long Beach, report the sale of lot 17, block 4, Riverside tract, to H. Nathan, of Los Angeles for $2600. It is improved with house. A new boat building establishment and a soda ash factory are contemplated along the water front here.

AMONG OWNERS AND DEALERS.

THE MOST NOTABLE SALES FOR THE WEEK IN THE CITY.

Central Business Property Continues in Active Demand, With Small Offerings and Firm Prices. Residence Property Somewhat Dull at the Moment.

The week has developed few notable features of change in the situation. As values climb higher holders who had been inclined to retain their property come into the market as sellers from week to week. But the total number of these, with all the new offerings, hardly suffice to replace the parcels sold in the meantime and taken out of the market for a time at least. Such are the facts as to good business property. Buyers thus more than outnumber the sellers for this class of property. Those in search of business lots for investment or speculation are driven out to streets just being developed into business centers and on those good corners are quickly taken. As a matter of fact, good corners, at all suitable for business or likely to be soon, are hard to find any more. Naturally, values are exceedingly firm and tending to a higher round on the ladder.

Residence property is dull. There is a good deal of this unimproved and improved on the market, but buyers are not plentiful. Holders are in no sense discouraged. The population is increasing, summer days are past and families are coming home from the beaches and other resorts. In a few weeks the tourist crowd will begin to come, and it is hoped that a better demand for residence property will spring up.

Outsider Invests.

Much outside capital is invested in Los Angeles real estate. Here is the Mecca of the American tourist and many visitors who come here see good investments into which they put their money. This is almost an everyday occurrence. One of the big sales of last week was that of the lot on the southeast corner of Spring and Sixth street, 80x155 feet, unimproved, whereby Abbot Kinney conveys to John Grosse that valuable corner for $250,000. This is at the rate of a little more than $3000 a foot. The buyer has leased the lot for a term of thirty years to the Los Angeles Development Company, and they have let a contract to Carl Leonardt for a building, seven stories, which will cost $199,000. The buyer is a Chicago capitalist, who has been spending some time in Pasadena. He seems to have formed a high idea of the future of Los Angeles, for he has also bought sixty feet on Spring street, between Sixth and Seventh, for $75,000. This purchase was made some months ago, and is worth much more money today. This lot is leased for fifty years, the lessees being under contract to put up a suitable building on this. Furthermore, Mr. Grosse has leased the Lankershim lot, on the corner of Broadway and Seventh for a term of fifty years. This lot is 107x165 feet, and the lease calls for a building to be put up within three years at a cost of not less than $150,000. Mr. Grosse has again leased a lot 63x165 feet on the corner of Spring and Seventh from the Bartlett Music people. This lease also runs fifty years and calls for a building costing not less than $150,000 within three years. A lease for fifty years is practically a purchase. The Lankershim lot is worth $400,000 and the Bartlett lot $200,000, as values are now. This, with the purchases above, makes $950,000 Mr. Grosse puts in here, besides the sum he will spend in building as above. Mr. Grosse is building a handsome home in Pasadena, in the old Ford Place, and this will be his home hereafter.

Corner on Pico Sold.

F. E. Woodruff has sold to J. A. Woodward and J. L. de Haven, three lots on the northeast corner of Pico and Alvarado streets, having a frontage of 130 feet on Pico by eighty feet on Alvarado; consideration named $14,000. The buyer will improve with a modern three-story and basement pressed brick business block, containing five store rooms below and two and three-room suites on second and third floors. The above improvement will add much to this business section.

Hamburgers' Big Plans.

D. A. Hamburger has authorized the publication of three facts. Dr. West Hughes ninety days ago gave to W. I. Hollingsworth an option on a lot on the corner of Hill and Ninth street for $125,000. The Hamburger Realty and Trust Company, with the assistance of W. I. Hollingsworth, formed a syndicate to take over this property at $150,000, the Hamburger Realty and Trust Company guaranteeing each subscriber that if at the expiration of one year from date the property was not sold at a greater figure than $150,000 it would reimburse to each subscriber the amount he had subscribed, without interest. Among subscribers to the syndicate were Otto Sweet, $12,500; W. I. Hollingsworth, $10,000; S. L. Bernstein, $5000; Louis Christopher, $5000, and several other parties, making the total subscriptions paid in cash $75,000. The syndicate intends to give a mortgage on the premises of $75,000, making the sum of $150,000, and the property is for sale at $200,000. As to the Hamburger buildings, this is the situation: "We expect to start in excavating for the Hamburger store on the southwest corner of Broadway and Eighth within the next four weeks, as soon as we get a bid for the excavation. The property is now being surveyed for the purpose of excavation. We are ready to build on both the other corners as soon as we get satisfactory tenants."

—o—

Out on Figueroa.

William Pridham has sold to J. V. Vickers the lot at the southwest corner of Twenty-eighth and Figueroa streets, on Figueroa street 162 feet, and on Twenty-eighth street, 175 feet, to a twenty-foot alley. Price quoted about $11,000. Mr. Vickers owns the adjoining property on Twenty-eighth street and has purchased the stated property as an investment. Sale was made through the agency of John D. Foster & Co.

—o—

Ex-Mayor Gains.

Ex-Mayor Fred Eaton has sold to a local syndicate a lot on the west side of Main street between Second and Third, 60x180 feet, improved with a one-story brick building, for the reported price of $90,000. Eaton bought this some time ago from Dr. Henderson Hayward and Dr. West Hughes for $45,000. They bought it four years ago for $39,000.

—o—

Buys on Washington.

Laura Dresslar buys of George Drake Ruddy, through the agency of J. A. McCoy & Co., a vacant lot on the north side of Washington street, about 150 feet west of Union avenue 55x175 feet; consideration named, $5000.

PAY RENT TO YOURSELF!
—In other words—
PUT THE MONEY YOU ARE PAYING FOR RENT INTO THE PURCHASE OF A HOME.
OUR OFFER:
If you own a lot, or have a good equity, we will build any style house on it you wish, and you can repay us in amounts about equal to rent, monthly or quarterly.
If you do not own a lot, we will buy the lot you select and build your house on it. In this event, we ask you to put up in cash a small proportion of the total cost, and we will carry the balance as in the first instance.
For the loan we charge the current banking rate of interest. The interest decreases with each payment on the principal.
We always have houses in construction and finished, in fine locations, for sale on the same terms.

BUILD FOR LITTLE MONEY.

Have you improved your property so as to receive an income from it? Or is it still only a vacant lot without any adornment to tempt the frozen tourist to invest?

Through Advertising

Thousands of Easterners

who contemplate coming to Los Angeles, and we scarcely receive a letter that does not ask our advice on investing. Hence we are safe and conservative in our statements.

"That we guarantee you a tenant or a prospective purchaser" when your property is adorned with a Lamberth building.

We make it an easy matter for you to get money at a low rate of interest if you are a property holder.

Our pride is our work, whether residence, flat or apartment house, from the handsomest of exteriors to the richest and most artistic of interiors. A Lamberth house cannot be duplicated for the price.

FOR SALE—

SOUTHWEST BARGAINS.

$3000. $3000.

On terms, $500 down, balance monthly.

One of the most complete, and the largest 6-room cottages in the city; finely constructed, large, wide, veranda extending around two sides, large lot, and is southwest. To see this is to realize more actual room and convenience than in the majority of 6-room cottages. Fine view and on clean side of street.

$2700. $2700.

$300 down and $25 per month takes a new just completing 6-room cottage on W. 37th st., tastily finished, with sunny front, good sized lot, and close to Jefferson, through car line, fast service to downtown; rent money will buy this.

Our list of southwest houses is exceptionally complete, all the way from small bungalows to large residences, from $1500 to $4000 for cottages, some exceptionally good bargains at different prices among them, and above $4000 for larger places.

BEAUTIFUL CITY RESIDENCES.

DESIRABLY LOCATED.

ATTRACTIVELY PRICED.

An excellent list of choice residences we present for your consideration today. These properties will appeal to the eye and taste of thoughtful, judicious buyers. Money invested in property of this type will produce substantial dividends. Just peruse the following descriptions:

FINE MODERN BUNGALOW.

One of the prettiest and best located bungalows in the city; handsome rock maple floors; fine built-in buffet and fireplace; standard wash trays; instantaneous heater; good cellar; located in one of the most desirable neighborhoods in Los Angeles. This proposition is a bargain—a fact that will impress you as soon as you see the house. Come today. Terms can be arranged.

ELEGANT HOME IN SOUTHWEST PART OF THE CITY.

We would actually feel sorry for the man who wouldn't recognize this property as a rare bargain. The price has simply been dropped down to the last notch. Contains 8 spacious, well-lighted rooms and a cosy "den;" house is practically new and is one of the most beautiful homes in Los Angeles; attractively finished in weathered oak; owner is very anxious to make a speedy sale; the property is easily worth $5500. A genuine bargain for the wide-awake man. Don't wait too long.

COMMODIOUS WESTLAKE RESIDENCE.
AN UNUSUAL BARGAIN.

Are you alive to the value of Westlake properties? An investment in this exclusive section will be highly productive. We have just secured a superb home in this district—a magnificent HOME in every sense of the phrase. Has large, cheerful, well-arranged rooms; Flemish oak finish in library, dining-room and hall; parlor finished in white enamel; paneled library, with artistic wooden frieze; prettily designed lighting fixtures; fireplace with old-gold mantel; downstairs floors built of quarter-sawed oak; finely tinted walls; 5 spacious bedchambers, finished in white enamel; rock maple floors; modern bathroom; an admirable investment, considered from every standpoint. Why not investigate NOW?

A STRIKING BARGAIN IN A HANDSOME MISSION HOME.

This is really the "bargain of the hour." One of the most majestic houses in the beautiful Westlake district—built in the characteristic mission style—something that quickly attracts easterners. Built of fine Portland cement and steel lath; 9 large-sized rooms; house is practically new; hall, library and dining-room finely finished in Flemish oak; parlor in white enamel; library is paneled and has handsome wooden frieze; very attractive lighting fixtures; old-gold brick mantel with open fireplace; floors downstairs of quarter-sawed oak; handsomely tinted walls; 5 large bedrooms, finished in white enamel; rock maple floors. This is an exceptional opportunity for profitable investment.

BEAUTIFUL MISSION RESIDENCE AT A VERY LOW PRICE.

This property will appeal to the most exacting buyer. The house is a model of Mission style architecture. It is finely located on a well-elevated corner; substantial retaining walls support the lot; 9 spacious rooms; 2 well-appointed baths; good plumbing throughout; beveled plate-glass entrance; hall and stairway finely finished in quarter-sawed oak; handsome pressed-brick mantels; imposing beamed ceilings; paneled walls; casement windows; reception room finished in white; well-equipped kitchen, with handsome linoleum; artistic lighting fixtures; 5 roomy, well-lighted bedchambers; fine waxed hardwood floors; all floors downstairs built of quarter-sawed oak. This house simply talks for itself. Come and see it and be convinced. You'll never find a better investment opportunity.

THESE HOUSES ARE ALL IN VERY CHOICE LOCATIONS AND THE PRICES ARE RIGHT.

$3400 $3400 $3400 A very decided bargain; a modern two-story 8-room house on full-sized lot facing north on good street, southwest. It is certainly the best for the money in Los Angeles.

$3800 $3800 $3800 Easy terms will be made by the owner of this beautiful new and highly modern two-story house, (3 large bedrooms,) oak floors; elegant lighting fixtures; it's east front on a fine street southwest.

$4800 $4800 $4800 Very near Angelus Vista Tract on the high level land you can get a charming and extra well built, "brand new" and extremely modern two-story, 7-room house for less money than you could build it. Oak floors; plate-glass windows; elaborate electric fixtures; lots of closets; fine lot 50x141.

$5500 $5500 $5500 A beautiful new house, owner will take good lots for equity of $3000. It is new, never occupied. Very modern; has 9 extra large rooms; fine interior finish; oak floors, and located southwest on a fine street among expensive homes. It is cheap at price.

$5750 $5750 $5750 A colonial, large, two-story, new house of 9 rooms; extra well constructed and modern in every detail. Oak floors; Flemish finish. Extra large bath; house is very attractive and has never been occupied; fine location southwest on wide street; excellent surroundings.

$6500 $6500 $6500 Between Washington and 16th on the high ground facing east and built by owner for his home; a new, full 2-story, 7-room house with all modern conveniences; oak floors; furnace; lots of windows; large rooms; an extra well-constructed house and very cheap at price.

$7000 $7000 $7000 New full 2 stories, on a fine corner in the "Lone Star Tract." House is a "Gem;" has 9 beautiful rooms; extra large and extra well lighted; new and never occupied; oak floors throughout. Plate-glass windows; extra fine plumbing and electric fixtures; fine basement and furnace; choice restricted district and close to splendid car service.

$9000 $9000 $9000 One of the bargains in the beautiful Westmoreland tract; only expensive homes surrounding; a new and extremely modern, ten-room house (6 large bedrooms,) oak floors; plate-glass windows; good basement with furnace; large attic; fine elevated east-front lot 60x135; A SNAP AT PRICE; one-half purchase price can remain on mortgage at 6 per cent. Owner non-resident, has no use for house. Be quick.

$25,000 $25,000 $25,000 WEST ADAMS HOMES of this character are very hard to find and this one in particular is worth your prompt inspection. It is absolutely a bargain at the price. The grounds are very spacious and highly improved with rare shrubs, fruits and flowers. The house is more than attractive and is extremely modern. Has 12 large airy rooms, with hardwood floors throughout. Everything in its construction is of "the very best."

S.E. COR. 4TH AND SPRING STS.
BOTH PHONES 29.

THESE ARE ATTRACTIVE, WELL BUILT AND RIGHTLY-PRICED HOMES. IF IT WERE NOT SO WE WOULD NOT SPEND TIME AND MONEY PUSHING THEM TO A SALE.

—$3250—

$600 cash, balance payments of $25 per month; in this charming 5-room cottage, just completed, we confidently offer the most elegant little home of this size to be found in the city; the lot is 50x131 feet, fronting north on quiet and homelike street, southwest; the house has every modern appointment; large rooms, oak floors, rich flemish oak finish; built-in seats and buffet of handsomest design; large circular bay in living-room; everything complete with an eye to taste and cozy simplicity. Especially complete domestic arrangements.

—$3350—

This is a strictly modern and very attractive: large 6-room cottage; has hardwood floors, flemish oak finish, built-in seats, bookcase, buffet, etc.; cemented basement; large grounds 75x150 feet, lying on a corner, very nicely improved. The location is just off the Colegrove car line, one block west of Western avenue, in the prettiest part of East Hollywood. The neighborhood is well built up, roomy houses under construction in adjacent blocks, and the mountain view and fresh sea breezes are unexcelled.

—$3750—

$700 cash, balance $25 per month; here is one of those elegant semi-bungalow cottages of 6 large rooms, which we have not been able to construct fast enough to supply the demand. We have combined in this house every idea of comfort and chaste elegance suggested by modern building methods; beautiful without and within; its features are sweeping gables, a large, deep veranda; reception hall with archway to living-room, oak floors; outside chimney; very handsome built-in appointments; rich Flemish oak finish; large bedrooms, large bath, charming arrangements throughout; generous lot and exceedingly pretty S.W. neighborhood. It is perfect.

—$4250—

This modern 7-room home is the best buy for the money in the city. It stands near Adams street, on east front lot 50x150 feet to alley, among all two-story homes. House is but a few months old; is splendidly built, roomy and convenient; oak floors with inlaid borders in hall, parlor, dining-room and library; very large dining-room; all rooms good size; handsome pressed-brick mantel, built-in seats, bookcases and fine buffet; three rooms, cosy sleeping rooms, with large closets; beautiful bath, and front and rear balconies. This attractive home is sacrificed for immediate sale. The adjoining lot sold for $1350 and the house could not be replaced under $3000.

—$4750—

$1000 cash, balance payments of $35 per month; here is one of those altogether charming high 1½-story 8-room homes with attractive gables, wide veranda, balconies, etc., etc., that add so much to the beauty of our city. Every room has full height ceilings and most are quite large; above stairs are 4 sleepings rooms, one with a large dressing-room alcove; large bath and roomy closets; combination stairs; all rooms below have oak floors; rich flemish oak finish; handsome built-in seats, bookcases and buffet; attractive mantel with outside chimney; house has basement and furnace pipes, and sits on wide lot, 50x131 feet, on a corner, southwest, in fine neighborhood.

—$6500—

Here is a splendid home for someone who appreciates wide, beautiful grounds. The location is Arapahoe street at its highest point, and the lot is 67½ feet frontage. The improvements are cement retaining wall, drive, large barn and carriage house, abundance of fruit and flowers. The residence is a strikingly beautiful home, complete to the last detail of modern construction and convenience, with hardwood floors, basement, furnace, etc., etc. All large rooms, consisting of living-room with large inglenook and beamed ceilings, parlor, dining-room and domestic apartment below stairs, and three extraordinarily large bedrooms, very large bath, wide balconies, and attic above stairs. This home could not be duplicated today for $7000, for the house cost over $4000 and the land is well worth $3250.

This beautiful ten-room residence is located on Magnolia avenue, on the prettiest point, among all two-story homes of expensive construction. It has been built but little over one year, and the cost of land and building exceeded the price now asked. The house is elegant within and without; fitted with every modern idea of beauty and convenience; oak floors, flemish oak finish below stairs, hardwood mantel and built-in appointments; basement and furnace; all rooms are large; bath and closets; attic has long billiard room and servants' bedroom. Good barn in the rear. Here is a splendid home at a very low figure.

—$10,500—

Fronting on Palm Place we offer this splendidly built and attractive home. The grounds are 60x150 feet to alley. There are 9 rooms, all large, finely arranged and bright with many large windows. The appointments include every modern idea carried out with chaste elegance and beauty; basement and furnace; oak floors below and above stairs; five handsome sleeping-rooms. Two mantels; mahogany finish; veranda with pressed brick trimmings; an east front in an ideal locality. If you see this you will recognize its exceptional value.

PHONES HOME 1000, MAIN 430.

Nearly every house we have on our large list is new and modern, and the prices are right. Note carefully the residences listed below. If none of these suit, we have others just as fine.

A PRETTY BUNGALOW.

$2800—A new modern 6-room bungalow in the C. V. Hall tract near Adams st.; the living-room and dining-room have beamed ceilings; large brick mantel, fine buffet; nice kitchen, screen porch with two stationary tubs; lawn seeded; without doubt this is one of the best bargains in this tract in a bungalow.

A BEAUTIFUL COTTAGE.

$3300—A new 6-room cottage in the C. V. Hall tract, near Adams, east front; parlor, living-room and dining-room have the weathered oak finish, cove ceilings and frescoed walls; built-in buffet, beamed ceiling in hall, two nice bedrooms, fine bathroom, large well-arranged kitchen, cooling closet, screen porch, chain lighting fixtures.

A VERY ARTISTIC HOME.

$3850—A very fine new east-front home, located in that lovely southwest residence district; 1½-story effect; living-room 14x22, beamed ceilings, pressed brick mantel, built-in seats, dining-room paneled, coved ceilings, fine buffet, cabinet kitchen; 2 large bedrooms and bath in white enamel; large attic, fine large porch; chain lighting fixtures; house 40x54 feet, porch 10x40.

A FINE HOME.

$4250—New modern 2-story 8-room house in southwest part of city near Adams street; hall, living-room, dining-room and den have the weathered oak finish and hardwood floors; fine buffet, pressed brick mantel, fine lighting fixtures, two toilets, cellar, built for furnace; four nice bedchambers and bath on second floor; lot fenced and lawn seeded; lot 50x150. This is a genuine bargain.

A FINE HOME ON VERY EASY TERMS.

$4500—$500 down, and $40 per month. This is a fine 7-room house in the southwest; 5 rooms on lower floor, parlor, living-room, dining-rooms, bedroom and kitchen; two large bedrooms and bath on second floor; the parlor, living-room and dining-room have the weathered oak finish and hardwood floors, beamed ceilings in parlor and dining-room; rustic brick fireplace in living-room; pressed brick mantel in dining-room; also built-in sideboard and large window seat.

AN IDEAL HOME INCLUDING FURNITURE.

$5500—A two-story seven-room mission-style east front; this is one of the prettiest little homes in the southwest section, and this price includes the furniture, which is new. The parlor, living-room and dining-room have the dark finish; kitchen, alpine; pressed brick mantel, built-in buffet, nice bathroom, two stationary tubs in screen porch; good barn, nice lawn, fine flowers; lot 50x150 to 20-foot alley. THIS IS AN IDEAL HOME AT A BARGAIN PRICE.

A BEAUTIFUL RESIDENCE.

$6250—2-story 10-room residence and attic; this residence is located in one of the finest sections of the city, southwest; hardwood floors; a good-sized den with east and south exposures; either 5 or 6 bedrooms; an upstairs deck; the latest plumbing; cold-air closets; electric lights, cement cellar, piped for furnace, stationary tubs; cement steps and stone pilliars add to the general appearance of this house; this house is complete in every detail; new and never occupied; very reasonable terms.

A HANDSOME HOME.

In southwest, on high ground in touch with fine homes in a highly-restricted neighborhood. The house is new, modern and up-to-date in every particular. Has seven rooms, four bedrooms. The floor plan is on the basis of eight rooms, the space of the extra room being taken up in conveniences in the shape of closets and cosy nooks, which go to make up a home rather than a house. It was built as such a house rather than to sell and consequently has exceptional value both in material and workmanship. The scheme is comfort and taste throughout, window seats, French doors, fine fireplace, etc. See this before buying a home; lot 200x135.

FOR SALE—BY INGRAM & BRIGGS.

$4300. $4300. $4300.

This is way below value. It is a large east front, 8-room house, with hardwood floors, fine appointments, strictly modern, solar heaters, 4 large bedrooms and a closed-in and screened rear balcony, all very large rooms. The lot is 65x150 feet, well improved, with trees in the front. There isn't a better house for the money in the city. It must be sold at once, so ask us to take you out and see it. The location is high, close, on rapid car service.

BE ORIGINAL!
GO TO ORIGINAL SUNNYSIDE,
THE IDENTICAL SPOT.

Which, by reason of its superb situation and delightful surroundings, gave the title of Sunnyside to itself and all the contiguous locality. Originally Dr. Smith's ranch and known as Sunnyside, it now teems with life and activity, affording cheerful self-supporting homes to tired toilers of the city. Within a few minutes' ride of the business district by two fast electric lines.

TRANSPORTATION FACILITIES
BRING IT SO CLOSE TO TOWN
THAT YOU MIGHT AS WELL BE IN THE CITY.
ONLY
THE AIR IS SWEETER,
THE NOISE IS ABSENT,
THE TAXES ARE LOWER,
THE VIEW IS FINER,
THE SURROUNDINGS ARE PURER,
THE WATER IS MORE PLENTIFUL,
YOU HAVE YOUR OWN GARDEN,
YOU KEEP CHICKENS,
YOU PAY LESS THAN RENT,
AND YOU ARE HAPPIER.

FOR SALE—
WE CAN SAVE YOU MONEY.
You know 7th st., the best near-in cross street in the city. For a short time we can deliver 52x130 feet, close in, on W 7th st., improved with elegant flat building, consisting of 26 living-rooms; strictly modern; always rented. Flats built 18 months ago at a cost of more than $7000. Property in this vicinity firm at $300 per front foot. Seventh street soon to be paved, then prices advance. Act quickly if you want a bargain; $15,000; terms.

$9000 will buy 50x150 feet close in on Santee, alley in rear; 20-foot drive on side. Improved with a good, substantial strictly modern flat, 2 of 5 rooms and 2 of 4 rooms each. This is under the market value and pays big as investment.

Towne avenue, near Fourth st., 50x110 feet, 15-foot alley on side. Property in this block $500 per front foot. Improvements nominal. Price $10,000; terms.

Close-in corner on W. 11th st., 55x65 feet frontage. Improved with fine Mission style building almost new; divided as 3, 4 and 5-room apartments; 8 apartments in all; each containing instantaneous heater, porcelain bath, bowl, etc. Best construction and open nickel plumbing. Pays 12 per cent. Our option soon expires, then owner will not deliver at this figure, $15,500; terms.

Right in town on the hill! Two blocks from the Courthouse, three blocks from the new postoffice; the best bargain on Olive st., a large double lot, 65x165 feet, with two six-room modern cottages; each renting for $30 monthly. This property presents unusual opportunities as an investment. The lot is amply deep enough to permit of the cottages being set back without interfering with their renting qualities, leaving the front of the lot for a fine apartment house improvement. The price is 25 per cent. under the market. Price $11,000; very reasonable terms.

The cheapest lot on Flower street, near Third; high and sightly, frontage on two streets. This lot is very accessible through the tunnel, and is a splendid investment, being listed with us exclusively for a short time far below market value; 40x160 feet; price $6000; very reasonable terms.

FOR SALE—

ONLY A FEW CORNERS IN THE NEW BUSINESS DISTRICT ARE FOR SALE AT ANY PRICE, AND ESPECIALLY AT THE CROSSING OF STREETS, AS PICO AND GRAND AVE. TWO OF THE LONGEST AND MOST IMPORTANT FUTURE BUSINESS THOROUGHFARES OF THE CITY. LOOK AT THE MAP. SEE WHAT A VAST TERRITORY THEY REACH, AND CONSIDER IF THE N.E. CORNER OF THESE STREETS, 83x135, PARTIALLY IMPROVED WITH A BUILDING WORTH $10,000, IS NOT A BARGAIN AT $40,000. THE TERMS ARE EASY.
AN ADDITIONAL EXPENDITURE OF $10,000 WILL MAKE THE INCOME 8 PER CENT. ON $50,000. IS THAT NOT SUFFICIENT, WHILE THE GROUND IS DOUBLING IN VALUE. VERY FEW OF THE RECENT PURCHASES PAY SUCH INTEREST. SEE US BEFORE WEDNESDAY.

HERE IS SOMETHING BELOW MARKET VALUE.

EXTRAORDINARY OPPORTUNITIES FOR WISE INVESTORS.

$6750—Georgia st., near 15th st. Lot 50x135 running through to Delong st., improved with fine 6-room cottage and large barn. The value in this property is in its double frontage and also the fact that the Los Angeles-Pacific R. R. Co. makes of this lot a corner by its private right-of-way and rumor has it that they will erect a large depot on the property recently purchased between Figueroa and Georgia sts. This property will sell for $10,000 in 60 days. It only requires $3750 to handle it.

$12,500—16th street, between Main and Hill. 62 feet on the south side of 16th with cottage of 6 rooms, which will rent for $30 per month. The S. E. corner of Hill and 16th was sold last week for $28,000. This property is only a few feet distant and the large frontage makes it especially desirable and valuable.

$15,000—Pico st., near Georgia. 60x133 to alley, with valuable improvements. Pico st. is paved to Hoover and is rapidly becoming a splendid business thoroughfare. This is a very attractive property and there should be a large advance in the very near future.

$32,500—$12,500 cash, balance any reasonable time. Income $210 per month. Grand ave., near Sixth. Lot 40x165, with a new modern 3-story building containing 42 rooms, guaranteed income of $210 per month for 3½ years, lease guaranteed by one of the largest firms in the city. This is certainly close-in property. The income is good and the price is reasonable. Why go a mile farther out and pay more money for less desirable property?

$40,000—Income $285 per month. Two very desirable corners with lot comprising the entire frontage on the south side of Washington st., between Park Grove ave. and Norwood st., and having a depth of 175 feet. Each corner has upon it a new modern flat building of 28 rooms with a beautiful park-like effect between the two buildings. There is also a double house of 13 rooms which faces Park Grove ave. and Norwood st. Washington st. is 80 feet wide, is now being paved, and will no doubt be the best cross street in the city on account of its length.

$800 per foot.—47 feet frontage on Hill st., north of Second. The price of $800 per foot on this property is for immediate action. It will not be on the market long at the price quoted.

Realty Liners

FOR SALE—
Business Property.

FOR SALE—BY

W. I. HOLLINGSWORTH & CO.,
ESTABLISHED 1890.

ONLY A SHORT WHILE AGO THE CENTER OF LOS ANGELES WAS AT THIRD AND SPRING ST.

INVESTORS WHO PURCHASED SOUTH OF SIXTH STREET AT THE THEN PREVAILING PRICES WERE CONSIDERED RASH. AT THAT TIME ONE COULD BUY FIVE OR SIX SQUARES SOUTH OF THE BUSINESS CENTER FOR ABOUT ONE-HALF WHAT OUR MOST VALUABLE FRONTAGE WAS WORTH.

THEN OUR TOWN WAS PRACTICALLY UPON A GAMBLING BASIS. THERE WAS REALLY NOT ENOUGH CAPITAL INVESTED IN WELL-IMPROVED REALTY TO INSURE THE BUYER OF VACANT CLOSE-IN PROPERTY THAT HE WAS GETTING "VALUE RECEIVED."

NOW, LOS ANGELES IS UPON AN ENTIRELY DIFFERENT FOOTING. THE GROWING TOWN HAS METAMORPHOSED INTO A THRIVING CITY OF GREAT ENTERPRISE.

PROPERTY VALUES WILL GREATLY ENHANCE DURING THIS FALL AND WINTER.

WE CAN SAFELY PROPHESY THAT ANY LOT IN THE BLOCK BOUNDED BY MAIN, FIGUEROA, SEVENTH AND TENTH, IF BOUGHT AT THE PRESENT MARKET VALUE, WILL MAKE THE PURCHASER FROM 15 TO 25 PER CENT. WITHIN THE NEXT FOUR MONTHS. WHY? BECAUSE REALTY IN THIS SECTION IS TOO LOW, AS COMPARED WITH PRESENT DOWNTOWN PRICES.

THIS, TAKEN IN CONNECTION WITH THE FACT THAT MAMMOTH IMPROVEMENTS ARE TO GO UP IN THAT SECTION WITHIN THE NEXT SIXTY DAYS, IS AMPLE PROOF THAT THIS PROPERTY WILL BE NEEDED VERY SHORTLY FOR FIRST-CLASS BUSINESS HOUSES.

SEVENTH AND BROADWAY WILL SOON BE THE BUSINESS CENTER OF NOT LOS ANGELES, BUT SOUTHERN CALIFORNIA.

CRICHTON SMITH, CURRIER BLDG.

$6800—I consider the following one of the best investments in this city today. Briefly speaking, these flats (and house in rear) are about one year old, unusually well built, and contain 18 rooms, 4 baths with instantaneous heaters, 4 basins and 4 toilets. These flats are of inviting appearance, lawns are in and front porch 20 feet long.

The location is good, close in, a wide graded street, half block from car and 8 minutes from city. When full they net the owner 14 per cent.; at present they show an investment of 8 per cent.

17 Sole agent, CRICHTON SMITH.

FOR SALE—GOOD INVESTMENT. FOUR beautiful flats, cottage in rear; lot 50x165; grand view, on Flower st., 5 minutes' walk to Chamber of Commerce; income $1440 per year. Price for a few days, $14,500. See this at once. FRANK B. ROMO, with Arsbett, Blake, Shoemaker Co., 126 S. Broadway. 17

FOR SALE—"WE SELL THE HILLS."
$50,000—Do you want to make a cool quarter of a million in a few years, on a present investment of $50,000? We can put you in a way to do just that thing. Within 25 miles of the Pacific Coast in the territory of Tepico, Mex., and on, or very near, the line of the Southern Pacific Railroad, from Guaymas to Guadalajara, Mex., (a concession for this road was lately granted by the Mexican government to the Southern Pacific Company, and that company has just deposited $248,000 gold, with the Mexican government as a guarantee that it will complete the road at an early date,) we have for sale AN IDEAL CATTLE RANCH OF 12,000 ACRES, THAT WILL MAINTAIN 2000 CATTLE ALL THE YEAR ROUND.
On a small portion of this ranch there are 20,000 NATIVE BEARING RUBBER TREES that will return a net annual income of $4000.
In addition to this, there is an immense amount of very valuable hardwood timber, experts say that when the railroad is completed, this timber alone is worth a great deal more than we ask for the entire ranch.
Suppose now, that this ranch is what we represent it to be, that it will comfortably maintain 2000 head of cattle, that the rubber will yield a net income of $4000 a year, suppose there is as much valuable timber on it as the experts say; suppose the railroad is built as proposed and that the whole Pacific Coast continues to improve (as we have every reason to believe it will,) does it not look as if such a ranch with such earning capacity and such resources, should be fairly worth $20 an acre? Looks that way to us, and 12,000 acres at $20 an acre is more than a quarter of a million. Just figure it yourself.
The owner of this property, Dr. B. W. Wallace, who has lived in that country continuously for the past 10 years, has other valuable properties there that he desires to improve, and wishes to sell this ranch, or something else, to obtain money to use in making improvements. He is in the city for a short time, will be at our office Monday, Tuesday of this week. If you are at all interested in this proposition, we invite you to meet him at our office and talk it over with him. He can tell you all about it, if you have not enough money to handle it yourself, get some of your friends to join you, it is a great syndicate proposition. He would really prefer to sell only a half interest, but he will return to Mexico in a short time and wishes to make a deal on something, while he might take part in good Los Angeles city property. Call on the BANNELLS LAND CO., 127 N. Main st. Home phone 7751. Sunset Main 3797. 17

FOR SALE—"GO TO GARDENA."
In the direct line of city growth, toward the harbor, the garden spot of Los Angeles county; the center of berry and small fruit production; fine dairy and alfalfa section, with plenty of cheap irrigating water the entire year. Two electric lines give cheap freight and transit, the demand for property is increased by the new survey for another electric line from Los Angeles to the sea, passing ¾ mile east of Gardena.
To investors—Two large tracts of land on and near electric line, ready for subdivision; abundance of domestic and irrigation water already developed on the tracts.
$5000—10 acres, 3 acres set to walnuts, 1 year ago, 7 in alfalfa, 4 room house, large barn, 4 horses, 10 cows, wagons, farm machinery, etc. 10 shares water stock.
$750—1½ acres on car line, irrigation and domestic water piped, ½ cash, easy terms.
$8500—An ideal home, price reduced to $7000, must be sold at once, business interests compel owner to go East.
$500—New 4 room house, ceiled and painted, lot 50x130, two blocks to car line.
$3000—10 acres, fine level land, ½ mile from car line, 20 shares water stock.
$1500—5 acres of fine level land, good soil, small house, plenty of water, on car line.
$4000—10 acres, the choice of the fine tract of land in "The Strawberry Park Tract," all leveled and graded to 2 inches to the 100 feet, 2½ acres in strawberries, 65 different kinds of fruit, plenty of irrigating and domestic water. This is the best bargain in the Gardena section.
$1000—One acre right in Gardena, with new barn, good terms, 2 and 3 acre tracts, with both irrigating and domestic water. ½ mile from electric line, on very easy terms.
W. M. GRAY, Gardena, Cal. 17

FOR SALE—

160 ACRES FOR SALE

IN THE HEART OF THE BEST STRAWBERRY PRODUCING SECTION OF CALIFORNIA.

We believe this proposition to be one of the most advantageous opportunities for profitable investment that has appeared in the local market for some time.
ONLY $175 PER ACRE

This property can be quickly and easily sold in 5-acre tracts. It is now platted into 32 5-acre lots, and can be bought as ACREAGE at the ACREAGE PRICE.
The best of water facilities are included with the land; 200 shares of stock in the Moneta Water Co. are covered by the purchase price of this valuable property. Water is piped in 6-inch steel main and is distributed over the entire tract. The property is desirably located at West Avery, the well-known and prosperous alfalfa, berry, poultry and dairy colony of Los Angeles county.

Property is touched by the San Pedro and Redondo electric lines.
Planted to alfalfa or strawberries this land will pay big dividends.
WILL SELL EASILY AT $1250 PER 5-ACRE LOT

The surrounding country is thickly settled and land values are rapidly increasing. The investment feature here stands out like a house afire.
Thousands will surge into Southern California this fall and winter in quest of small chicken ranches and berry farms. You can sell this property at a big profit in 5-acre lots—and it will "go like hot cakes."
Acreage with abundant water, on an electric car line, and at $175 an acre, is extraordinary value. You simply CAN'T HELP making money here.

An abundant flow of excellent water may also be secured by digging wells upon this property—and it is only necessary to excavate a comparatively few feet in order to obtain a dependable supply.
EASY MONEY FOR THE ALERT INVESTOR.

Here's a live investment for the wide-awake investor—and it's going to go quick. It goes for one-half cash, balance 6 per cent.

Ponder over this proposition.
Read the foregoing statements twice.
Absorb them. Let them sink into your "think machine."
Then come and see us bright and early tomorrow morning.

ROBERT MITCHELL & CO.,

FOR SALE—
The greatest bargain ever offered in ranches. 20,500 acres in Tehama county, Cal., about 9 miles from a city of about 8000 population. 8000 acres in wheat, 12,500 acres of A No. 1 grass-covered range land, consisting of beautiful valleys, slightly rolling land, covered with some magnificent oaks, 1000 acres of splendid alfalfa land; ranch all fenced into fields; average rainfall is about 30 inches; crop failure never known; various buildings on the ranch cost about $10,000. This is one of the finest stock and grain ranches in the State of California; abundance of water from springs and living streams; on account of the death of the owner it is offered for $122,000, $25,000 cash, balance on long time.
A splendid colonization tract, 74,000 acres, 4 miles from a good business town, 12 miles from the Pacific Ocean, in the State of Tepec, Mex. About 66,000 acres of level land, about 8000 acres of slightly rolling land, 6000 acres hilly. The valley land is of the richest sediment soil, well adapted to the growth of beans, bananas, pineapples, oranges, sugar cane, rice, rubber or cotton. The rolling land is excellent pasture land, covered with rich grass, abundance of water from living streams and springs; some choice timber on the hilly land. A contract has been recently let for a railroad that will pass through the center of this large tract from Guaymas to Guadalajara. The climate is equal to Southern California, perfect in every respect. This magnificent body of land is offered at 75 cents per acre.
$723 acres in Santa Barbara county. A frontage of over six miles on the ocean, about 2000 acres of level land, balance is excellent stock ranch, well watered from the Cojo Creek and numerous springs. A beautiful location for a beach resort, and some excellent mineral springs on the ranch; some splendid oak timber. This magnificent body of land is offered for the sum of $75,000.
Here is a great opportunity close to home. Fernando Valley is the best place to buy land in Southern California today. The water question is fully settled and there will be an abundance of water for all purposes in that valley. We have about 1000 acres of the best land up there, part of it it under the irrigation system, with abundance of water for irrigation at the present time. We can sell this in 40-acre tracts from $40 to $65 per acre. This land will soon bring, in our judgment, from $300 to $500 per acre. There is no better fruit, vegetable or alfalfa land in this country, besides it is in the frostless belt.

ROCKEFELLER PREDICTS.

That 1907-8 will see millions of men thrown out of the factories; that they will have wrought so well and so faithfully they will work themselves out of a job.

Rockefeller has money enough to avert this calamity.

But will he?

However, this ominous forecast of the prescient billionaire need not greatly worry the "man with the hoe" who hoes his own land.

Commercial crises and unholy trusts can never make sterile the bounteous bosom of mother earth.

The man with five acres of productive beach land may have a competence from which he can derive more contentment than Rockefeller from his weirdly begotten millions. He can eat bountefully of food with a good appetite, while Rockefeller dines off of a bowl of gruel, and suffers from indigestion; and, besides, the farmer's modest savings will lie as lightly on his conscience as his food upon his stomach, and he need not worry all the hair off his head to gain them, either.

But we should be grateful to Rockefeller for his timely warning. By 1907 the average worker can save enough to buy a little home to retreat to, a home from which no factory whistle could ever again call him forth.

I CAN SELL HIM LAND IN A POSITIVELY FROSTLESS BELT, WITHIN 10 MILES OF LOS ANGELES, BACK OF MANHATTAN AND HERMOSA BEACHES, AT $200 AN ACRE AND CAN SHOW HIM LANDOWNERS IN THIS SAME SECTION WHO MAKE GOOD LIVINGS FROM LESS THAN FIVE ACRES.

The soil is rich sandy loam, which can be cultivated every day in the year, rain or shine, without tracking mud through the house. It will produce berries, vegetables and carnations (which pay well) the year around. You can harvest one crop and immediately plant another, and you have the advantage of both Los Angeles and beach markets, this section being penetrated by two electric lines and one steam railway.

Besides, you will be in a section which, panic or no panic, will be embraced in Greater Los Angeles, and then you can sell city lots.

Think it over, then come and see me and get terms.

SANTA MONICA.

SANTA MONICA CLIMATE.
BEAUTIFUL IN MARCH AS WELL AS JULY.

With the winter season comes that ever-perplexing question, where shall we spend the season—in the city, or go to the beach? The people of Santa Monica can safely say come to our town, where the climate is delightful all the year round. People used to think that winter at the seashore was cold and gloomy. Now they are beginning to know that the ocean tempers the atmosphere so that the climate of the beach is as beautiful in March as it is in July. The inland cities are delightful in winter, but Santa Monica is one of the few places in the entire world which has no unpleasant seasons. The doctors will tell you by all means try the bracing air of the beach. Great numbers of people suffering from the terribly prevalent affliction, the curse of our modern life, nervous prostration, find at Santa Monica the restful quiet and the soothing potion which brings them repose and a return of the old vitality and strength of brain and body. One can easily understand why the doctors are so enthusiastic over the value of Santa Monica climate, and the waters of the Pacific.

Have you visited A. M. Montgomery's store lately? His stock is strictly up to date. Don't fail to visit his store. You can always be suited at Montgomery's. His store is located on Third street. 17

HAS MANY THINGS IN EMBRYO.
A common salutation now is, are you going to spend your winter at Ocean Park?

Those who have spent former winters at this beautiful town by the sea positively say that the temperature is more equable, the evenings are nice and warm; one can any evening after dinner promenade on the board walk and be very comfortable; now isn't that quite an inducement? While most of people are sitting in their Los Angeles homes trying to keep warm those of Ocean Park are walking to and fro, enjoying the sea breeze. The town will soon be well lighted with numerous electric lights; a pleasure park of 70 acres, taking in clubhouse, grounds, racing course, baseball grounds, etc., is being made for the enjoyment of the public. This park will be set thickly with palms and all kinds of beautiful shrubbery and numerous driveways.

There is nothing that the public-spirited citizens of Ocean Park will forget when it comes to making their town one of the most, if not the most attractive seaside resort. There are yet many good things in embryo. The attraction at the Clubhouse is whist every Wednesday night; ladies' card party Wednesday afternoon, at which time refreshments are served; Saturday nights dancing; only members of the club and their friends by invitation attend these gatherings.

When at Ocean Park don't forget to call at THE SMITH REALTY CO., room 4, Casino Bldg., and get good prices on all real estate. It is no trouble for them to drive you around and show you the good buys; their prices will astonish you. Call and see them. 17

FITZGERALD'S
PIANO
LETTER
NO. 9.

Piano Buyers:—

Is there a man or woman in the whole city of Los Angeles who has purchased a piano without first "looking into" the FITZGERALD way of doing business? If there is, that buyer has placed a yoke upon his or her neck which was wholly unnecessary, and which will, in the future, cause him or her to bitterly denounce the accursed system of collecting interest in the manner in which it is done in the piano business.

Our business system is a very simple one. We do not claim any great amount of virtue over that possessed by the average business house, neither do we claim that our money will buy anything better than that which any other money will buy. What we claim is that OUR WAY OF SELLING PIANOS IS THE ONLY SYSTEM IN VOGUE WHICH PLACES THE MINIMUM AMOUNT OF BURDEN ON THE SHOULDERS OF THE MAN WHO IS PAYING FOR A PIANO ON THE PAYMENT PLAN.

We grant, of course, that the man who pays cash for a piano should have a slight advantage in price over the man who buys his piano "on time," but we do not see the justice in charging the "time buyer" that small advance AND THEN BURDENING HIM WITH A HIGH RATE OF INTEREST ON THE WHOLE THING. Did you ever pay interest on anything? Did you ever have the accursed interest pile up on you so rapidly as to become a positive burden?

It is not the rich man who is giving his children educational advantages on the installment plan. It is the man of moderate means, and we cannot see wherein the justice lies which takes advantage of this fact to saddle those who cannot help themselves with that burden which the man of money is too wise to assume.

The interest money we lose we make up in the great number of pianos we sell, so you see our motives in doing the RIGHT WAY are not wholly disinterested ones after all.

Will you look into this interest question? Will you talk with us before you commit yourself to pay interest? Will you see what a beautiful piano we will sell you on terms of only $6 down and $6 monthly, WITHOUT ONE CENT OF INTEREST? Not to do this would be to willfully assume a burden which would prove a life regret, BUT AFTER IT IS TOO LATE TO REMEDY YOUR MISTAKE.

Yours truly,
FITZGERALD MUSIC CO.,
17 113 S. Spring st.

East of Main Street

To those who wish to invest money in business property for a big advance:

To those who would carefully investigate what we consider a good pointer:

Fifth, Sixth and Seventh Streets are about to enjoy a period of unusual prosperity, and now is your time to buy.

The near completion of the Hotel Alexandria; the leasing of both the northeast and southwest corners of Fifth and Spring Streets; and northwest corner of Main and Fifth Streets; the building of the Henderson Heywood seven-story building on the southwest corner of Sixth and Spring, and the seven-story Fred Barman building on the southeast corner of Sixth and Spring; the desire on the part of I. N. Van Nuys to build a ten-story building on the southwest corner of Seventh and Spring, covering an area of 170x165 feet, and the presumed desire of the lessee of the northwest corner of Seventh and Spring Streets to receive an income, paying as he does $10,000 ground rental per year; the building of a five-story furniture building on Main Street, adjoining Huntington Building, between Sixth and Seventh, to cost $150,000, the erection of a $100,000 building near the corner of Sixth and Maple Avenue for Heywood Brothers & Wakefield, upon property just purchased by I. N. Van Nuys; the commencement of work upon some great improvement by H. E. Huntington in the block bounded by Sixth, Seventh, Los Angeles Streets and Maple Avenue, upon property which has cost him nearly half a million dollars, and this improvement, whatever it may be, together with many others, will not be of trifling importance to contiguous properties, but will be immediate and startling.

We have sold over $300,000 worth of property in the last three weeks on East Sixth and Seventh Streets in this city, and we recommend the purchase of property on these two streets, because, for instance, the corner of Fifteenth and Hill Streets is recommended today as a great bargain at $600 per front foot, and it is ten blocks from the center of the town, while property on the corner of East Seventh and San Julian, about six blocks from the center of the town, can be bought for $550 per front foot, and on a street eighty feet wide, macadamized and running from one end of the city to another. Property on West Seventh Street, near Figueroa, is held at $1500 per front foot, which is eight blocks west of Main Street, while property four blocks east of Main is held at $550 per front foot; and a corner at that.

We have the corner of Sixth and San Pedro, Seventh and San Pedro, Sixth and San Julian, Seventh and San Julian, Sixth and Maple Avenue, Seventh and Towne Avenue, for sale at bargains. Our tip is for East Sixth and East Seventh Streets at present startlingly low prices for an immediate advance, and for interest on improvements which you may erect, as witness the I. N. Van Nuys purchase and improvement on East Sixth and Maple Avenue.

Death from a Lion's Paw.

A man entered Astley's Theater in the early morning, and found to his horror that the four lions there had broken from their cage. One gave him a blow with its paw, then took him in its mouth. The blow from a lion's paw is said to be, after the stroke of a whale's tail and the kick of a giraffe, the strongest thing in nature. So that the victim was dead when the keeper went to the rescue. Only one lion had concerned itself with the man, and was now sitting over him as a dog sits over a bone. Two of the lions were playing on the stage with a "property" garland, and the fourth was seated in the royal box, placidly surveying the gambols on the stage and the terrible banquet in the auditorium. The murderer relinquished its prey immediately its master appeared, and all four bolted for their den like children detected in some misconduct.—[St. James' Gazette.

Gentlemen—Representing several of the employees of the City Hall I went to La Grande Beach to make an investigation. I found everything that could be desired for a popular beach resort, and recommended the purchase of lots by my associates. Its natural advantages are such as to make it a success. The location, climate and all improvements now going on are bound to make La Grande Beach a very prominent resort on this Coast.

Yours truly,
H. N. BEECHER.

Mr. Beecher is a city electrician in the Inspection Department at the City Hall.

Gentlemen—I was very much pleased with my visit to La Grande Beach. I only regret that I had not taken more lots at the opening price.

I also want to mention the clam dinner. It was the first time I ever saw clams so thick on a beach.

Yours truly.

Gentlemen—I have just returned from La Grande Beach and wish to tell you that the natural advantages there are unequaled. The surrounding country is fertile. The climate is ideal.

Anybody who visits La Grande Beach will be as well pleased with their investment as I am. The Beach is being nicely graded, and the pavilion well under way.

Yours truly,

Dear Sirs—I have just returned from a trip to La Grande Beach, and I found that it is everything you have represented it to be. I think your particular part of the beach is the choicest portion and the pavilion you are erecting will be something grand. My investment in lots there I consider are of the best, and if able would make further investments, and recommend my friends that this certainly is the place to invest.

Yours respectfully,
(Signed)

One of the Largest Flower Gardens in the United States—Located at Montebello

Statistics prove that 5 acres of land in one of the choice fertile sections of semi-tropic California, under certain conditions, will produce a greater income in 365 days than 50 acres of land in Minnesota, Michigan, Ohio, or most any of the Eastern agricultural States, in the same length of time. Note, however, the proviso "under certain conditions." The greatest condition is that of adequate water supply. No section of land will produce a more satisfactory income to the acre than that occupied by the Montebello tract. This is because of an unusually fertile soil in combination with a water supply that for its quality and permanence is unsurpassed in the entire State.

Montebello lies in the very heart of a fertile garden district and is only 15 minutes' distant from the city via the Salt Lake R. R. Orange and lemon culture has attained the highest degree of perfection at Montebello and no better grade of alfalfa is grown anywhere in the State than here.

Montebello offers a splendid opportunity to the small farmer—with an eager market but a few minutes from his door.

It has every natural advantage for the country home of the business, professional or workingman. Go down today and see this beautiful spot. You will be convinced that nothing has been overdrawn. Lots are selling rapidly. Present prices may change at any time. Be among the large number of people who will go down today.

Five water shares are deeded with each 5-acre lot, the owner becoming a stockholder in the water system.

Five-acre lots may be secured from $270 and up per acre—1-4 cash, balance in from 1 to 4 years at 6 per cent. Free excursions at 8 a.m., 11 a.m. and 3:40 p.m. Tickets may be secured at the office of D. O. Stewart & Co., 138 S. Broadway. Tels. Main 1720; Home 1253. Office open Sundays from 9 to 10 a.m.

The Winners

32nd Week.

This is the cow that won the first prize last week. It was drawn by MADGE KENNEDY, 940 W. 12th St., and she attends the Sentous St. School. The other prize winners are as follows:

JULIAN GROVER, 1198 Sunset Bvd., Custer St. School.

DONALD F. WALLACE, 742 S. Flower St., Grand Ave. School.

DOROTHY MING, 1653 W. 28th St., Los Angeles H. S.

ELMA MIESS, 1221 S. Olive St., 16th St. School.

MADELINE WILLARD, Corona, Cal., Corona High School.

Checks have been mailed to all the above.

QUALITY

We wish to impress you with the QUALITY OF ST. CHARLES evaporated cream. Also with the richness. We might write pages and pages on this subject, but it would never convince you as the trial of one can would. Try it just once, your grocer has it, and it will please you very much.

COW TALK

Well the boys appeared again this week, but still they are a little light. Would like to hear from more of them next week. I am receiving many letters in regard to the conditions for the street car ad. Let me explain once more. The size of the ad is 11 by 21 inches, limited to 25 words, and one drawing. In regard to the drawing, it does not have to be a cow necessarily; you may make it any kind of a drawing in order to better illustrate your ad. Another point, you may send me as many suggestions and ads as you like up to Oct. 1st, when the contest closes. They will all compete, provided they are accompanied by either a St. Charles or Silver Cow label. Every one has a splendid chance to win this prize of $5.00, and I want to hear from all of my friends.

You want to get in your ads now as soon as possible, as the 1st of October is not very far off. Just as soon as I have decided which is the best, I will have it reproduced, and it will appear in the Los Angeles Inter-Urban and the Pacific Electric cars, not only in Los Angeles, but in Pasadena and Long Beach as well. Don't be afraid to ask questions. Also if your grocer does not keep the cream, send me his name, and I will mail you a label free of charge.

EDISON DAM IS STARTED.

NINE-MILE TUNNEL IS VERY NEARLY COMPLETED.

Work is Being Done by Contract and Better Progress Made—Driving of Upraise Extremely Dangerous on Account of Falling Rock and Bad Air from Blasts.

[SPECIAL CORRESPONDENCE OF THE TIMES.]

BAKERSFIELD, Sept. 15.—F. C. Finkle, chief engineer of the Edison Power Company, was in the city today, and announces that the work of driving the nine-mile tunnel in Kern River Cañon is rapidly nearing completion. But 4000 feet of tunnel remains to be driven, and at the rate at which the work is being done it will take but a short time to complete it.

The upraise of 974 feet from the power-house site to the mouth of the tunnel, which has been one of the most difficult features of the great undertaking, is also being driven rapidly, and Mr. Finkle believes it will be completed in six weeks at the most, a much shorter time than was anticipated. The work is now being done by contract, and is going on much faster than when done by day labor. The driving of this upraise is exceedingly dangerous, as well as difficult, on account of the liability of loose rock falling on the men, and another difficulty is encountered in the purifying of the air after the blasts are fired. There is no possibly way of getting a draft in the hole, and the suffocating gases from the dynamite hang so closely to the rock that a considerable period of time must elapse before the miners can go back to work.

The drainage tunnel which takes the water from the river above the damsite was broken through afew days since, and the river is now flowing through it, leaving the bed of the stream dry. The river bed is now being cleaned, and the preliminary work of building the dam is under way. It will be built twenty feet above ordinary low-water mark and sixteen feet below. It will be built of masonry and concrete, and will be as solid as the rock-bound hills around it. An intake to the company's tunnel will be constructed so that the amount of water going into the tunnel can be controlled, and the top of the dam will be finished in such a manner as to allow the waste water to flow over it and continue on down the regular channel. The construction of the dam will form a lake at least three-quarters of a mile in length, and perhaps half a mile in width in one or two places.

OLD-TIMERS' PICNIC.

High School Boys and Girls of Twenty Years Ago Do Celebrate.

It was a memorable occasion, yesterday, at Eastlake Park, when the members of the class of 1885 of the Los Angeles High School met there for their twentieth anniversary—and twenty years is pretty old for a High School class in California.

The class twenty years ago numbered twenty-six members, the largest number graduated up to that time. The class of '85 also enjoyed the distinction of having made the best record in general scholarship, and the highest individual record in that of its valedictorian, Miss Minnie S. Moody, now Mrs. Rush Bridge.

The spirit of comraderie that bound this class by close ties caused the numbers to hold frequent reunions for five years, when under the guidance of their teacher, Mrs. Anna S. Averill, they followed a course of reading and discussions in general literature. In 1890 a complete reorganization was effected, its meetings becoming necessarily at last only anniversary reunions.

At these anniversaries resident members were always present and letters from absent ones kept all in touch with one another. Those who answered to roll call were: Mr. and Mrs. Leslie Hewitt, Mr. and Mrs. Clinton Bradley, Mr. and Mrs. Charles Lantz, Mrs. Hattie Beckett Trefethen, Mrs. Ada Baxter Bryant, Mrs. Ina Baxter Boal, and Mrs. Anna Averill. The other former instructors often present at the reunions, Miss E. A. Packard, Miss Florence Dunham, and Mrs. C. P. Bradfield, were absent.

Nine of the thirty-two children belonging to the class were present, and letters reported the names, ages and progress of the others. The history of the class for twenty years was then reviewed and it was noted that all the members had made good citizens, favorably recognized in business and active affairs of the world. One of the members, Dr. Jesse Burks, fills a chair in the State Normal School of Albany, N. Y. With warm handclasps, with cheerful good-byes, and with many loving words for the absent members, the class of '85 disbanded.

CHARGED WITH LARCENY.

Mrs. Yager Will be Arraigned on Monday to Answer—Arson Complaint in Reserve.

The detectives yesterday swore to a complaint charging Mrs. Florence A. Yager with grand larceny. It is alleged that she stole $400 from W. W. Ordway, no reference being made to the attempt to burn Ordway's house and the $135,000 in government bonds. It was thought best to await the outcome of the larceny trial. The prisoner will be arraigned in Justice Rose's court on Monday.

Mrs. Yager still maintains her innocence and denies all knowledge of the theft or of the presence of the valise in the cellar of the burning house. Her desperate efforts to conceal the money found on her person, however, are taken by the police to indicate her guilt.

ANOTHER ONE ON CARTER.

Colored Girl Implicates Her Lothario, Now in Jail Awaiting Trial for Another Crime.

Ermie May Lawrence, a colored girl, was yesterday held for trial in the Superior Court on a grand larceny charge. She was found in possession of a watch and chain and some money supposed to have been stolen by her from Ella Fields, the keeper of a lodging-house on Jackson street.

The girl claimed that she had gotten the watch from Francis Carter, a negro now awaiting trial in the County Jail on a robbery charge. She says she met him at Oxnard and loaned him $3 on the watch, and a letter was produced that Carter had written to the girl, in which he told her to say nothing about having the watch. When the letter was called to his notice Carter acknowledged writing it, with the exception of the portion referring to the watch; but it all looks like Carter.

HARBOR FRONTAGE

DO NOT FAIL TO INVESTIGATE

The Riverside Tract

This property lies on the Long Beach side of the San Gabriel Slough, a beautiful sheet of water open for navigation between Long Beach and San Pedro. Our boats at your disposal to inspect the channel.

All the property lying west of the river which divides the two tracts has been purchased by the Dana Burks Syndicate, composed of Los Angeles, Venice and Ocean Park capitalists, who propose making this one of the finest harbors in the world.

Sunday Times, Sept. 10, 1905.

DREDGING PROSPECT BRIGHT

The project of dredging canals through the tide flats west of Long Beach, building wharves and making a commercial part of that locality is in prospect of early fulfillment according to Dana Burks, President of the Ocean Park Board of City Trustees, who is one of the promoters of the great enterprise.

Preliminary surveys and soundings are completed and show no unusual difficulties to be overcome. We propose to develop 27,000 feet of wharfage and water frontage on which are now the tide flats immediately west of Long Beach. The channel will be a uniform depth of 20 feet at low tide, which is sufficient for present needs, as the channel in the outer harbor has a depth of but one foot more.

Our company will improve the property in a thorough manner, putting in at least five slips for warehouses and dockage and a grading and caring for the streets in an approved manner.

"We propose to mak of Long Beach a First Class Harbor," said Dana Burks.

Norway's Strong Man.

CHRISTIAN MICHELSEN WILL BE HIS COUNTRY'S CHOICE.

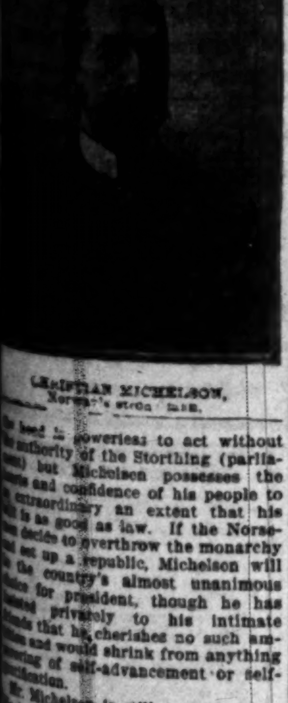
(SPECIAL CORRESPONDENCE OF THE TIMES.) CHRISTIANIA, Aug. 26.—Norwegians consider themselves particularly fortunate that the present grave crisis in their nation's career has produced a man whom they implicitly consider equal to the emergency—Christian Michelsen, Prime Minister, and "father of independent Norway." Pending decision as to the ultimate form which the new Norwegian government shall take—whether monarchy or republic—Michelsen is practical dictator of the country. The ministry of which he is the head is powerless to act without the authority of the Storthing (parliament) but Michelsen possesses the trust and confidence of his people to so extraordinary an extent that his will is as good as law. If the Norsemen decide to overthrow the monarchy and set up a republic, Michelsen will be the country's almost unanimous choice for president, though he has stated privately to his intimate friends that he cherishes no such ambition and would shrink from anything savoring of self-advancement or self-glorification.



CHRISTIAN MICHELSEN,
Norway's strong man.

Mr. Michelsen is still a young man. He is not yet 48 years of age. Tall, broad-shouldered, square-jawed and Roman-nosed, his physique spells strength from head to foot. He is level-headed, reserved in manner and speech and thoroughly conservative—attributes one would expect in a man who has been trained in the practical school of business life and attained success and eminence in it. Michelsen's father, a prominent Bergen merchant, destined him for a legal career and he was graduated with high honors from the law school of the University of Christiania; but the shipping trade, that bulwark of Norway's industrial life, soon tempted him and [illegible] he was already a factor in the navigation interests of his native city. He founded the firm of Michelsen & Co., ship-owners, which is now one of the largest in Norway. Its vessels comprise a good-sized mercantile marine of their own and their flags flap in the breezes of every port in the world. Michelsen is several times a millionaire and is one of Norway's "captains of industry." Friends and business rivals say that his ability to reach a decision quickly—and to stick to it when reached—has been the determining factor of his success in trade, as it has proved in politics and statesmanship. At Bergen he has for years been known as "Spot" Michelsen, because while other ship-owners have haggled and procrastinated over big deals and contracts, Michelsen acted on the "spot"—and got the business. It is his way of tackling a proposition, as Sweden discovered, to its sorrow, when he came to the ministerial helm at Christiania a few months ago and decided that the time for a reckoning with King Oscar had come and could not be deferred longer. Mr. Michelsen was a pioneer in introducing steam power in the Norwegian mercantile-marine. He was among the first to discard sailing vessels as practicable ocean-carriers for modern shipping needs.

This strong man of Norway entered politics less than fifteen years ago and within that time has risen to the highest office within the gift of his countrymen. Elected to the Storthing to represent his native city of Bergen, he early become associated with the negotiations with Sweden for a regulation of the consular question. His practical business experience made him particularly well qualified to advance Norway's case for separate consuls—the rock on which the union with Sweden finally broke two months ago. His parliamentary record was established, however, in connection with the project to build a State railway from Bergen to Christiania, a scheme costing $12,500,000. For three years he fought for this enterprise on the floor of the Storthing and finally beat down all opposition to it. From that time he has been considered one of Norway's real leaders and when in the spring of this year it became necessary to select a cabinet consisting of men of iron, to fight the consular question with Sweden to a finish, Michelsen's was the name on every Norwegian's lips as the figure around which the country's ideals and hopes could best be rallied. He assumed office on the frank platform of a disruption of the union unless Norway's demands were unconditionally met, and when Sweden's king rejected Norway's proposals, Michelsen led the nation boldly on to the policy of secession anu dethronement which has brought the Scandinavian nations to the brink of war throughout the summer.

"We have not committed revolution," said Mr. Michelsen in conversation with an American correspondent at Christiania. "We have simply done what was necessary to preserve our constitutional rights and liberties—to insure our being masters in our own house—and we are prepared for all the consequences that our action may precipitate."

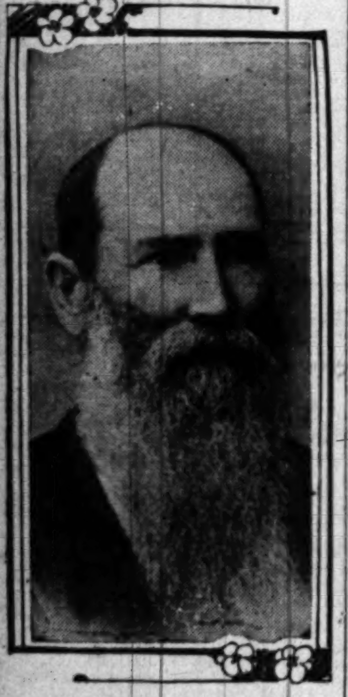
ONCE DOWNEY'S ONE REPUBLICAN.

DAVID P. SMART, PIONEER, IS CALLED HENCE.

Death Strikes Down One of the Early Settlers of Los Angeles County—Heavily Interested in the Los Nietos Valley, and President of Bank.

David P. Smart, one of the early pioneers of this county, and first settlers in Downey, died in that town yesterday morning at 8 o'clock, after an illness of several months.

The deceased was born in Callaway county, Mo., November 27, 1838, and in the early sixties came west to Nevada.



THE LATE DAVID P. SMART.

In 1870 he moved to Downey, or what was at that time old "Gallatin."

For thirty-five years he has been prominent in local affairs and has taken a prominent place in the Republican party, and for several years cast the only Republican vote in the town of Downey.

He was a heavy stockholder in the Los Nietos Valley Bank and was president of the same institution. He was also one of the charter members of the I. O. O. F. lodge of his town.

The funeral service will be held at the deceased's home at 2 o'clock this afternoon, under the auspices of the I. O. O. F. lodge. Burial in Evergreen Cemetery, Los Angeles, this afternoon at 3:30 o'clock.

LITTLE MISS TAKES RIDE.

Two Lost Baby Girls in Hands of Police Within Few Minutes of Each Other.

Louie May Turner, a young lady just 5 years old, took a car ride all by her lonesome yesterday.

She had taken her mamma out shopping on Broadway, and some way mamma strayed away and was in a stew because Louie May couldn't find her.

Mrs. Turner, red and perspiring, hurried to the Police Station with the hat and cloak of her little daughter in her hands, and begged the police to find a girl to fit the togs. While she was there a telephone message came to the station that the child had been placed on a car and sent home.

It was not five minutes later when the patrolman at Third and Spring streets called for the wagon to send in a lost baby girl. This was a golden-haired little tot of 3, and it was only a few minutes until a train of women and children, followed by the excited mother, rushed into the station to claim the little one.

NOW FOR NAPLES.

Henry E. Huntington Will Take a Hand in Making a Seaside Resort at This Point.

Henry E. Huntington spent last Thursday at Naples looking over what has been done there and the plans for the future development of this seaside resort. Mr. Huntington took his chief engineer, George J. Kuhrts, with him and made a careful inspection of the work done and the plans for what is to be done. The engineer approved of both and Mr. Huntington was so favorably impressed that he arranged to take a substantial interest in Naples and also in the 523 acres of land held by the Parsons, who are the founders of Naples, and up to this time the owners. With the man with the magic name and magical ability to do things interested, Naples need not lag a minute in her onward march of progress. Active developing work is promised right along until the owners expect to have one of the finest seaside resorts on the coast. Indeed they say the finest.

SAN DIEGO.

BAD MONEY PASSING.

[SPECIAL CORRESPONDENCE OF THE TIMES.]

SAN DIEGO, Sept. 16.—A dangerous $10 bill is in circulation. One of the most pronounced differences is that on a genuine bill the lines on the coat of Lewis, whose picture shows in the left hand vignette, do not intertwine at all, while in the counterfeit there is a very pronounced cross-hatching.

Local banks have discovered that someone is "sweating" $20 gold pieces by taking off a dollar's worth or more of gold. The method employed is to file the milling from the edge. A coin which has gone through the process shows a marked difference when standing on edge beside a coin which is in the ordinary condition.

With the City Clerk has been filed an application for a twenty-five-year franchise, by the Bartlett Estate Company, to construct and operate a street railway on Thirtieth street from Dartmouth street to Riddle avenue.

REDONDO

"THE BEAUTIFUL"

This beautiful New England watering place and City of commercial destiny is growing all the while. New residences going up all over the City, business houses in process of erection and plans being prepared for others, nearly 100 men and 300 horses at work grading property, building railroads, and laying out streets, should recommend to your attention and confirm your belief that during the year of 1906 the most popular resort along the shores of the Pacific will be Redondo Beach; and at the prices which Mr. Huntington is holding this property at the present time, and with the improvements going on, including the double tracking of the Redondo Road, it is our belief that your money will double in value in the next twelve months.

You are dealing with Mr. Huntington, and not with speculators. His prices have never changed from those originally offered.

I have been treated by Dr. Schiffman for years. I have tried all his different methods, and can say unhesitatingly no dentist or physician has ever operated with such success or skill. In extracting my teeth he did it without any pain to me. It is a great pleasure to me to recommend him and his method of treatment.
MILO M. POTTER,
Prop. Van Nuys Hotel, L. A., and Hotel Potter, Santa Barbara.

Ten years ago a reputable dentist of Virginia told me that a certain molar tooth could not be satisfactorily saved, and that it would probably not be of service for one year. It has not only served me for ten years, as Dr. Schiffman saved and crowned it, and comparatively speaking, without pain. I sing his praise.
OWEN M. ANDREWS,
Pastor M. E. Church, South, Cor. 6th and Mateo sts.

It gives me great pleasure to state that Dr. Schiffman extracted an impacted wisdom tooth for me, which had been giving me great annoyance for years. It was extracted absolutely without a particle of pain to me. It was easily worth 100 times the amount paid.
ROBERT MARSH,
Of Robert Marsh & Co., 302-303 H. W. Hellman Bldg.

ODD FELLOWS AT SAN DIEGO.

Their Elaborate Plans for a State Encampment.

October Gathering is to be Large and Brilliant.

Nearly a Week of Fraternal Doings Arranged.

Odd Fellows throughout the State are making great preparations for the grand encampment that will be held in San Diego October 3 to October 7, and the indications are that there will be a large attendance from every section. San Diego has been after the encampment for three years, and now that it has secured the prize it is proposed to make the sessions memorable ones. Many Odd Fellows who have never visited San Diego will find an additional attraction in the encampment this year in the opportunity given them to see the country in the extreme southern end of the State.

A special train will leave San Francisco for San Diego on Sunday, October 1, and it is expected that over 450 members of various cantons will reach San Diego on that train, the various bodies being picked up as the train comes southward. On arriving at their destination the visitors will be met at the train and escorted to Co. B Hall, on Eighth street, which will be the headquarters. Through the courtesy of the War Department the army barracks at the end of H street has been secured as department headquarters for the Uniform Rank, and the cantons will march there to disband.

The formal programme will begin Monday evening, October 2, with a reception in Co. B Hall, and the first session of the grand encampment will open in that hall at 10 o'clock the following morning, and that evening there will be a public reception in the Isis Theater, when a musical and literary programme will be given. The encampment will meet again Wednesday morning, October 4, and that afternoon at 2 o'clock there will be a competitive drill at the Coronado race track, in which seven or eight cantons will participate. Wednesday evening the Patriarchal and Golden Rule degrees will be conferred on a large class of candidates. There will be a big parade Thursday morning, and the afternoon will be given up to an excursion to Tia Juana and Old Mexico. Thursday evening there will be more degree work, winding up with a social entertainment.

On Friday morning will be held the closing exrecises of the grand encampment, and the installation of officers, and in the evening there will be more degree work and a grand ball.

The Rebekah lodges, which form the ladies' auxiliary to the Odd Fellows, will be in session during the encampment, and their programmes will be varied by schools of instruction and degree work, and a general participation in the festivities of the Odd Fellows.

REMAINS OF CORTES.

Taken from the Sepulcher in a Mexican Chapel Many Years Ago.

[Mexican Herald.] In a dispatch dated at Madrid, the other day, it was stated that the Spanish Government had initiated negotiations with the Mexican Minister at Madrid for the transfer to Spain of the remains of Hernan Cortez.

Nothing is known of this matter in the Department of Foreign Relations, but it is recognized that the mention of the subject opens up a field of highly interesting historical speculation.

Where are the remains of Hernan Cortes? To remove them to Spain it would be necessary first to find them or rather, to locate them. It is said that there is but one man in Mexico who knows the secret of the whereabouts of the remains of the Conqueror and that man is the distinguished lawyer and representative in Mexico of the descendants of Cortes, Licenciade Alaman.

Moreover, to remove the bones of Cortes to Spain would be a direct and flagrant violation of his last will. He died in the peninsula in semi-disgrace with the court, and whether it was due to bitterness of that circumstance or to the affection for the land with which he no doubt foresa wthat his name would, for all time to come, be associated, the fact is that by the terms of his will executed at Seville in 1547, he directed that his remains should, wherever he might die, be transported to New Spain and interred in the convent of La Concepcion at Coyoacan.

The clause could not be carried to the fullest extent, for the property which he bequeathed for the erection of a convent of nuns at Coyoacan under the advocation of La Concepcion was not sufficient for the purpose, and said convent was never built. There is a little chapel of La Concepcion at Coyoacan whose foundation is attributed to Cortes, and that is all.

In consequence his body was interred in the church attached to the Hospital de Jesus, in this city, also founded by him. There it remained until 1823, when owing to the exaltation of the popular sentiment at that time against everything Spanish, engendered by the still recent war of independence, there seemed to be in danger of the sepulcher being profaned. To prevent so regrettable an act, Don Lucas Alaman, the representative of the Dukes of Monteleone, descendants of Cortes, secretly removed the remains and gave it out that they had been sent to Italy and committed to the care of said descendants.

Thus only could a project of congress which aimed at the destruction of the sepulcher of Cortes and the scattering of his ashes to the wind be frustrated.

But it is supposed that the remains never left Mexico, but were hidden by Don Lucas.

The Alaman family are still the representatives of the descendants of Cortes, and it is presumed that the worthy head of that family knows the hiding place of the bones of the Conquistador.

Perhaps at no distant day a monument may be erected to Cortes in Mexico and his bones again repose in a consecrated spot in public view.

Whisky Made in Bathrooms.

The United States revenue agents here are kept busy running down illicit stills. They are found in all sorts of queer places. Some time ago a gang of moonshiners leased a house in Mount Vernon. There were six or seven in the gang, all well dressed and apparently well-to-do summer visitors. For several weeks they loafed and lounged about the veranda and lawns, but held aloof from all their neighbors.

One day the neighbors were surprised to see a wild dash from the doors and windows of the mysterious cottage. Half an hour later the revenue agents arrived at the house, and the neighbors had their curiosity settled by a peep inside. Whisky stills had been set up in the bathrooms and most of the piping utilized for the worms. Tubs of mash were all over the house, and in the basement were several barrels of the finished product. The gang was never caught.—[New York Tribune.

Why My Cures Are Both Prompt and Thorough

I WILL WAIT FOR MY FEE UNTIL YOU ARE WELL.

I HAVE FREQUENTLY STATED IN MY announcements that I cure thoroughly in less time than other physicians require to produce a partial cure. Like all other truths that are told, I presume this claim of mine has been accepted as truth by some, while others have regarded it as too unreasonable to even resemble the truth.

There is nothing unreasonable about it. The unreasonableness is all on the part of the man who doesn't believe it. Scientific reasoning makes truth stand right out all over the assertion.

Suppose you wanted to go to New York. Which route would you take? the most direct railway line or the Cape Horn route? Suppose you are suffering from a disease and want to be cured, isn't thoroughly scientific and accurate treatment administered by an experienced and skilled specialist, the most direct means to the desired end, and isn't inadequate, unscientific and unskilled treatment by an inexperienced physician comparable to the Cape Horn route? In justice to the latter I must add that certainty of arriving is left out of the consideration.

This brings me to a point where I may be asked for proof that the service I render is of the kind first mentioned. The fact that I permanently cure all my patients is in itself conclusive proof. The fact has stood before the public so long that I do not believe any thinking man doubts it. And how has it stood before the public? It has stood before the public in the form of a growing institution and practice. My practice is the largest of its kind west of Chicago.

If you want a thorough cure in less time than others require to effect a temporary "patching up," come to my office and receive scientific treatment, with seventeen years of successful experience of it.

Men's Diseases Only

Weakness, Contracted Disorders, Specific Blood Poison, Stricture, Varicocele, Hydrocele, Piles and Skin diseases, speedily cured by my modern scientific methods.

Consultation and Advice Free

I will be pleased to have any ailing man call and talk his case over with me. I will fully explain my treatment to him, but the visit will not obligate him in any way to become my patient.

MINES AND MINING.

WILL BUILD ORE REFINERY.

SANTA ANA TIN COMPANY TO HAVE NEW PLANT.

Only One of Its Kind in the World Using Secret Process—Custom Mill for Amalie District—Piute Mines Shipping—Panamint Boom—Two More May Have Perished.

The Santa Ana Tin Mining Company of this city has announced its intention of erecting a refinery to handle the ores from its property in Trabuco Cañon, Orange county, which contain some of the rarest and most valuable metals known to man. A mill was erected some time ago, and is reported to be operating satisfactorily, but the nature of the ore is such that it requires a very elaborate course of treatment after milling, and the refinery is needed.

When the company first commenced work it took but a short time to discover that the ore was far from being what it had been supposed to be and that it could not be worked by the ordinary methods. Experiments and laboratory investigation followed and finally a hydro-metallurgical process was evolved by General Manager J. A. [illegible], by which he is enabled to extract platinum, iridium, palladium, osmium, rhodium, rhuthenium, cobalt, bismuth and other minerals and metals with some gold and tin.

The process is a secret one and when the refinery is built it will be the only one of its kind in the world. It will probably be located either in Los Angeles or at some point on the Coast. At present it is undecided whether or not it will be erected by the present corporation or by a separate company. If those interested in the original company take up the matter it will probably be erected by them, otherwise another company is likely to be formed and financed. If the latter course is followed the refinery will be a custom plant handling ores from the Santa Ana property as well as from those of several other companies that are being formed to operate similar ores from the same neighborhood. It is expected that custom work will be done in any event whenever it is offered.

MILL FOR AMALIE.

A deal of importance to the mine owners of the Amalie district has just been closed between H. H. Blood and the directors of the Flamo Fume Mining Company, whereby the former becomes the owner of a ten-stamp mill and all the personal property of the latter concern now located on the Granite King mine in Jawbone Cañon.

The plant purchased by Mr. Blood will be moved at once to the Amalie district where it will be used to reduce the ores of the Zada, Cowboy and Zenobia mines. The mill consists of two five-stamp batteries and a compound concentrating table, and a forty-ton cyanide plant will collect the values which pass the battery and concentrator.

PIUTE MINES SHIPPING.

[illegible] brothers, who are operating [illegible] in the Piute district of Kern, are making a shipment to be sent to [illegible]. The ore runs on an average [illegible], according to the Bakersfield [illegible], and comes from a [illegible] which was uncovered [illegible] a drift 280 feet in on the [illegible]. The ledge is in place, is well defined and can be traced for a distance of over six hundred feet by croppings on the surface.

Among the other properties owned by the same parties is one recently [illegible] on which but little work has been done as yet, but samples [illegible] which assay in the neighborhood of [illegible] per ton and the ore is free milling. Active development work will proceed on this property as soon as the [illegible] are through with the work now [illegible].

LOW COST OPERATIONS.

The Exposed Treasure Company at [illegible] reports having mined and milled its ore during the month of August at a cost of only $4.65 per ton. This was accomplished with a twenty-stamp mill and the ore comes from [illegible] varying thirty degrees from perpendicular in most places. The cost includes that of pumping water to a depth of 300 feet at the rate of [illegible] gallons a day. The rate is declared to be very low indeed.

[illegible] carloads of tungsten, instead of [illegible] as announced, were shipped last [illegible] from Randsburg, one going to [illegible] and the other to Germany via San Francisco and Cape [illegible]. The ore was 72 per cent. pure [illegible]. There is reported to be an [illegible] of 40 per cent. ore on the [illegible] for which a mill is to be [illegible] within another year.

SALT IN DEATH VALLEY.

A man named Osborne has located a [illegible] ledge of pure rock salt in the [illegible] extremity of Death Valley and [illegible] are being made to work [illegible] according to the Beatty Miner. An [illegible] from the New Liverpool Salt [illegible] the company whose plant at [illegible] was recently destroyed by the [illegible] is inspecting the property with a [illegible] to its operation as soon as the [illegible] railroad is built.

[illegible] people are reported to be leaving [illegible] and Beatty daily for the [illegible] organized Wild Rose district in the Panamint range in Inyo county, [illegible] a man known as "Shorty" Harris [illegible] making a sensational strike [illegible] hundreds to the scene. According to a miner returning to Beatty [illegible] district as many as 1200 locations have been made around Harris's [illegible].

MAY BE MORE VICTIMS.

The Beatty Miner says:

"[illegible] McMahon started out Bill [illegible] and a man named Fadden [illegible] Beatty for the Funeral Range [illegible] on a grub stake about [illegible] of July, with six weeks' supply [illegible]. Nothing has been heard from [illegible] since. Both men were experienced prospectors and well acquainted with the desert country."

The same paper also says:

"The Nevada State treasury is said to contain [illegible]. It would seem [illegible] small portion of this sum might [illegible] for the protection of the [illegible] and venturesome prospector [illegible] is, to a great extent, responsible for its existence."

Taken together, the two articles are interesting and to the point. It [illegible] indeed, seem as though the State [illegible] something, but perhaps it is [illegible] to blame, as the records [illegible] the last Legislature did take [illegible] but the indifference of the commissioners appears to have [illegible] defeated the end sought.

For the Auto Owner.

[illegible] clutch slips, squirt some kerosene on the leather facing and tighten the clutch spring. If this does not [illegible], use Fuller's earth, resin, or [illegible] the road; anything is better than [illegible] it revolve, which wears [illegible] burning the leather, and [illegible] hot that it may be practically impossible to "get the clutch [illegible]

SIX MINUTES FROM THIRD AND SPRING
TAKE GREEN CARS AND GO TO FOURTH AND CLARANCE
The only close-in property for sale on the terms of $20 Down and $10 a Month
Adjoining Salt Lake Terminal Grounds
Prices $500 and upwards

The street work having been completed on this tract, graded streets, cement curbs and cement sidewalks water piped to every lot, we can now present to you an opportunity to buy close in property that is bound to double in value within a year on the most reasonable terms ever offered.
Industrial enterprises are fast taking up this locality and the same kind of property on the west side of the river cannot be bought for five times as much as we ask you for this.
The Seventh Street Bridge is now an assured fact as an application was made a few days ago for the 21-year franchise that Mr. Huntington refused. There is no question but that this is the best investment that one could make for quick advances in price. When this road is started this property will advance to enormous figures on account of its desirability for industrial institutions and also its close proximity to the great terminal of a transcontinental system. Many houses are already built on this tract and occupied by working people employed in the adjoining manufacturing establishments across the river.

Prices will positively advance 10 per cent. on Monday

"House and Lot"—Weekly Review of Real Estate and Building—Continued

AMONG OWNERS AND DEALERS.

FURTHER REPORTS OF TRANSACTIONS OF RECENT DATE.

The City, Surrounding Towns and the Country Districts Figure Here in Business—Residence and Ranch Properties Which Have Changed Hands.

Sales of ranch property during the week have not been numerous and of importance at the same time. There are a great many sales reported daily in the formal list of transfers published in The Times. Details of many of them are not obtainable.

Down Hill Street.

R. A. Rowan & Co. have sold for M. W. Everhardy to Henry S. Williams the southeast corner of Sixteenth and Hill streets, 129.75 feet on Hill by 65 on Sixteenth, improved with flats worth about $10,000, and a good nine-room house, the rental being about $170 per month; consideration named, $28,000. This price may seem somewhat high as compared with property in that vicinity. But it is pointed out that the lot lies the long way on Hill street, making it more valuable, and the improvements are valuable and the rents considerable.

A Nice Bunch.

The Althouse Bros. report the following sales made during the week: West Ninth-street Heights Company sells to Louis Brand an eight-room, two-story frame residence, No. 933 Fedora street, lot 50x128 feet; consideration, $5000. George H. Rector sells to H. C. Gleason a lot on the north side of Washington street, 160 feet west of Cherry street, improved with a six-room bungalow, lot 52x175 feet; consideration, $8000. J. G. Schafer sells to M. W. Everhardy an unimproved lot on the northeast corner of Pico and Sentous streets, 153½x200 feet; consideration, $21,000. West Ninth-street Heights Company sells to J. T. Abell the northwest corner of San Marino and Normandie avenue, unimproved, lot 52x128 feet. Mr. Abell will improve in the near future with a two-story residence to cost $6000; consideration, $1500. West Ninth-street Heights Company sells to E. R. Lewis an unimproved lot on the east side of Normandie avenue, 100 feet south of Ninth street, 100x128 feet; consideration, $2400. M. A. Redford sells to J. Dodge an unimproved lot on the north side of Washington street, 100 feet west of Cherry street, 52x175 feet; consideration, $6000. Mrs. A. V. Orchard has sold to F. Caspany a lot 84x155 feet on the west side of Santee street, 65 feet south of Fourteenth, improved with an eight-room, two-story house, for the stated price of $10,500.

Improved and Unimproved.

Richard Fullaway sells to H. Huffman, through James H. Fulcher, a five-room house and lot, 50x125 feet, being No. 183 Hewitt street, 140 feet north of Third street; price $3500. Mr. Huffman intends to improve the property for commercial purposes. The same agency sells for W. A. Carney to A. Thompson, three unimproved lots, 40x140 feet each, on the northeast corner of Jessie and Mimosa streets; stated price, $3500.

On the Heights.

The Heron Realty Company has made the following sales: Lot 75x155 feet on the south side of Twenty-third street, between Cimaron and Arlington, Adel H. Ross to Marie P. Leighton, for $2250; lot on the northeast corner Cknaron and Palm street, Kinney Heights, Miss Ella Crane and Mrs. Emma E. Hough, to D. C. McCan for $7100; lot 100x140 feet on east side of Fourth avenue, Arlington Heights, Mrs. Louise Gibbs to Jesse Knight, for $2200.

Rise on Hope Street.

Gustave Brenner, Louis Meyer and L. Schwarz have bought from Myron C. and George D. Wick, the northeast corner of Hope and Eighth streets, 70x165 feet, containing a twenty-room frame house; quoted price, $45,000 spot cash. The sale was made through the agency of R. A. Rowan & Co. Last winter the Wicks purchased the property through the same agency for $37,500.

Near Arcade.

John Brink has sold to a syndicate of local investors, through the agency of Black Bros. and Steele & Co., a piece of property at the northeast corner of Fifth street and Towne avenue, a couple of blocks west of the Arcade Depot. The lot fronts 82½ feet on Fifth street and has a depth of 100 feet on Towne avenue; consideration, $40,000. No improvements are on the lot at present and none are contemplated.

For Improvement.

F. L. Botsford and associates have bought from A. C. Bilicke twelve lots on West Ninth street, west of Hoover street, in the Finley tract, for $20,000. The new owners will proceed to build homes on these lots.

Here and There.

Carl Pauly has sold for Susan K. Wiess to Mrs. E. A. Hodgkins a lot 40x165 feet on the west side of Olive street between Eighth and Ninth streets, improved with a fourteen-room double house, for $25,000. The records show that Mabelle Burbridge has sold to Eleanor T. Brown and R. H. Travers lot 15, Adams Place, for $1200; to Thomas F. Miller, lot 1, same tract, for $5500; lot 2, same tract, for $6000; also lot 3, $6000, and lot 4, $5500. Walter and Clara Taylor have sold to W. E. McVay a lot on the north side of Eighth street, 153 feet west of Broadway, 60x120 feet, with a two-story frame house on it, for $75,000. Edward Kendall & Co. have sold to Mrs. J. C. Doxon a lot 50x140 feet on the west side of Vermont avenue, 200 feet north of San Marino avenue, and have agreed to build for her a seven-room, two-story home to cost $3500. The records show that J. J. and Margaret E. Vosburgh have sold to J. A. Rosesteel, lot 5, Botiller tract, $41,000. The lot is on Main street south of Eighth.

Fifth Near Towne.

Hans Lohsa has sold to J. Klatcher a lot 27½ feet front on the south side of East Fifth street for $18,000. The buyer owns the corner of Fifth and Towne and this new purchase gives him a good business lot 55x100 feet.

Acreage for Subdivision.

The McCarthy Company states that its experiment in putting on the market lots of one-quarter, one-half and one-acre area on Compton avenue is being fully justified by the active inquiry for such lots. The Gillon orchard, in oranges and lemons, will be similarly disposed of in extra large lots as the demand for them develops. John E. Yoakum has recently sold to a local syndicate ten acres of unimproved land on the corner of Stanley avenue and Florence street for $10,000. J. F. Reynolds has bought forty acres on the southwest corner of Vermont and Western avenues from non-resident owners for the reported price of $28,000. Haack & Osborn are doing much improvement work on their new tract, the Vendome Park tract on Western avenue, between the city and Hollywood.

Grand Avenue Sales.

Catherine Norton has sold to Dr. C. M. Benbrook and Dr. F. D. Holman a lot 60x165 feet on the east side of Grand avenue 120 feet north of Tenth street, with a twenty-room apartment house on it, for $30,000.

South Los Angeles Street.

Mrs. Emeline Childs has sold to M. Kalisher a lot on the west side of Los Angeles street between Eleventh and Twelfth for $7500.

Another on Grand.

Richard T. Blaisdell and O. A. Vickrey have sold for Robert Hall to Mrs. Susan K. Miers a lot on the west side of Grand avenue, seventy-five feet frontage, beginning 1250 feet north of Tenth street, for $30,000. The property is unimproved and the rate is $400 a front foot.

Triplets Here.

H. G. Cotton & Co. report three sales as follows: H. H. Cotton to Waldo R. Norriss, lot 43x131 feet improved with two-flat building at 553 Maple avenue, for $20,000. Same seller to Mrs. Wall, lot 43x110 feet, improved with nine-room house at 712 West Washington street, for $6000. Mrs. Emma Kaiser to L. Richbart, lot 50x145 feet, on Central avenue, between Eighteenth and Washington streets, for $3200.

Business Block Sold.

E. G. Robinson has sold the Dressler building on the northwest corner of Washington and Burlington streets to local investors for $35,000. The lot is 87x160 feet.

Nearly a Score of Lots.

J. R. Keel & Co. report the following sales made during recent days: J. T. Morgan to H. A. Ecclestone, lot 30x155 feet, Morgan's Hollywood Place, $1190. William E. Witter to Charles E. Etter, lot in City Boundary Tract, for $425. Isidor Fallstrom to A. E. Lundeen, lot on Arlington Heights, for $1100.

Big Bunch Here.

Charles M. Stimson reports the following list of recent sales: To Strong & Dickenson, ten acres at Colegrove to be subdivided, for $11,000. To E. L. Chew, lots 8 and 9 in block W, West Los Angeles, for $4000. To James A. Duty, lot 9, Electric Railway Homestead tract, for $400. To John A. Connett, lot 12, block 4, Highland Park Extension, with one-and-half-story house, $2000. To George Irwin, lot 12, block G, Hones tract, $700. To Stanley Mathews, lot 107, Goodwin tract, $650. To George E. Caldwell, lots 45 and 46, North Ellendale tract, $900. To Thomas B. Eldridge, lot 23, block B, Nadeau Orange Tract, $725.

Pastor Goes Farming.

Rev. F. M. Dowling, pastor of the First Christian Church of Pasadena, has traded his residence in that city for the Sherman property on Cypress avenue, Covina, a ranch of ten acres, planted to navels and lemons. There is a handsome residence on the property, and Mr. Dowling with his family will live here for at least one year, having been granted by his congregation leave of absence for that time on account of ill-health.

To Enlarge Santa Ana.

Forty acres in the western part of Santa Ana near where the Pacific Electric cars will enter from Los Angeles was purchased last week by a group of capitalists headed by the Townsend-Robinson Investment Co., H. S. Hazeltine and Los Angeles men. It will be subdivided and marketed in town lots. The aggregate price reported paid is about $25,000. The purchase includes the P. M. Conkle ranch of fourteen acres on First street, sold for $8000; the A. A. Adams ranch, adjoining the Conkle ranch on the west, fifteen acres, sold for about $7000; the ten-acre tract, adjoining the Pacific Electric subdivision on the west, owned by Smart, Bunker & Anderson, sold for about $8000; one acre belonging to A. L. Carter, sold at a reported price of $800. The Conkle place was sold to H. S. Hazeltine and Los Angeles associates, and the others to the Townsend-Robinson Investment Company.

Pasadena Sales.

J. S. Thompson has purchased of Dr. Daly nine lots on the east side of Winona avenue, between Villa and Orange Grove avenues, Pasadena, for a consideration stated to be $8100. The property has a frontage of 450 feet, making the price paid equal to $18 per front foot. The old Gray place on the west side of North Los Robles avenue, just south of Woodbury Road, has been sold by P. W. Morel to C. A. Cooch for a consideration of about $6500. Theodore Spaulding has purchased of J. Miles the adjoining five acres, fronting on Los Robles, just north of India street.

Big Ranch for Sale.

The Times a few days ago had this: A forced sale of ranch property will take place here next Monday of unusual interest to investors. It is the sale of Chino Ranch, consisting of 38,000 acres of land, much of it of fine quality, nearly all of it good. This sale is made to satisfy a trust deed given the San Francisco Savings Union to secure a debt of $430,000, which is due. The sale will take place at the Courthouse in Los Angeles on Monday next at 10 o'clock. The ranch will be sold in eleven parcels as provided in the deed of trust. This will make large parcels, as may appear, the acreage being nearly 3500 acres in each parcel. The sale is made in this county because a portion of the land is in the county of Los Angeles. The sale is of general importance for this reason: the title has been in such a condition that no one could convey. The sale will absolutely clear the title and make conveyance possible. Thus a large body of fine land will probably be opened to settlement in small holdings, making homes for many families. The creditor bank may have to bid in all the property. The incumbrance is a trifle over $11 per acre. The hills are probably worth three times that figure for grazing purposes. There is land in the valley worth twenty times the average amount of the debt, but the debt is not distributed evenly, over the land. At least it is reasonable to think it is not.

On Normandie.

N. F. Stokes has sold to W. H. Comett an eight-room house with lot being 2827 Normandie avenue for $6500.

Hollywood Way.

W. Priester of Center street has sold to Franklin Mortimer a tract of thirty-one acres between Alma and Center streets, east and west, and Benefit and Santa Monica, north and south; consideration named $44,100. George H. Coffin & Son have reported the sale of twenty-two lots in Hillcrest Terrace tract since September 1, aggregating over $22,000. The ten-acre olive ranch southeast from Hoegee's hill and fronting east on Hoover street, has been sold by W. H. Hoegee for a stated consideration of $15,500. It cost $1750 five years ago.

Pico Corner.

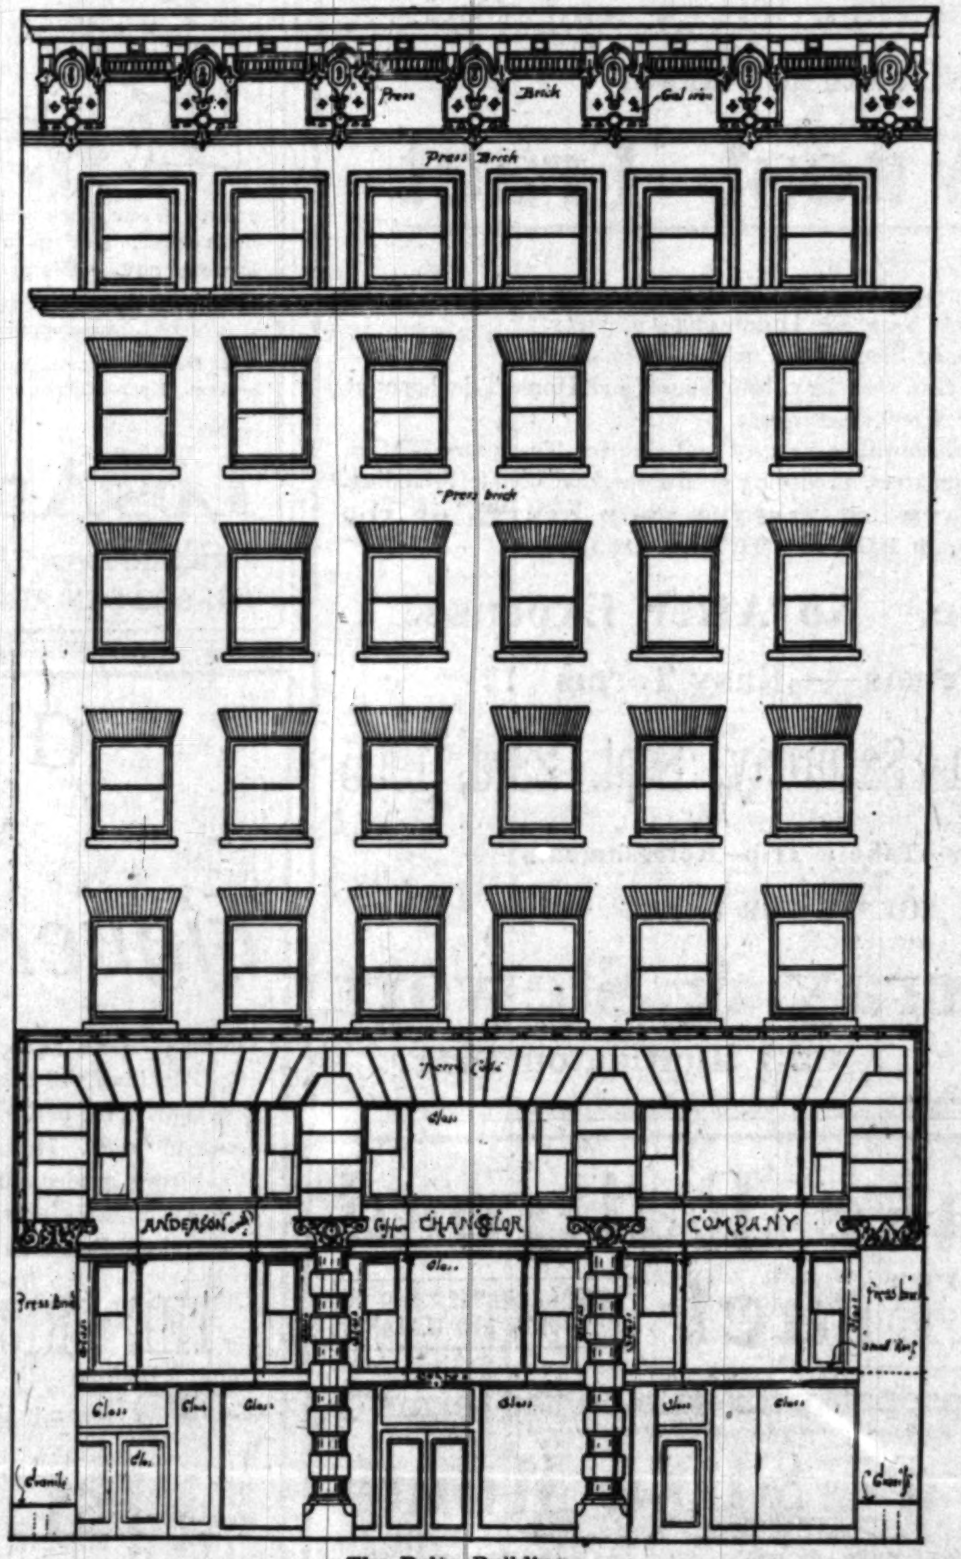
C. H. Kellogg has sold for John Conway to W. H. Fowler the southwest corner of Pico and Harvard streets 68x114 feet for $6800. Mr. Fowler is a resident of Green Bay, Wis., but will spend the winter in Los Angeles.

Pomona Sales.

J. A. Fitch reports the following sales at Pomona durink the week: B. Robertson sells to Dr. G. W. Forester an improved alfalfa ranch located about three miles southeast of Pomona. This is a highly productive ranch, contains over fifty-nine acres; thirty being in alfalfa with a good stand; has several acres more good alfalfa land; balance grain land. There is a good pumping plant on the property. Consideration named $9000. Through the same agency Miss M. Ross sold to S. S. Walker, a recent arrival from Mendicino County, a neat five-room cottage and three lots 60x123 each, on West Second street. Purchaser buys for a home. The large residence lot on the corner of Palomares street and Holt avenue, opposite Capt. J. T. Brady's home, was purchased this week by J. A. Fitch from J. G. Lorbeer. It has a frontage on Palomares of 178 feet and on Holt avenue of 156 feet.

To the South.

Holmes & Walton report the following sales within the last week on their new Subdivision known as Walters Main street and Moneta avenue Tract and Walters Moneta avenue and Figueroa street Tract. Easterly 10 feet of lot 16 and the westerly 30 feet of lot 14 block "A" to E. H. Wambold, $675. Lot 47 and 49 block "B", M. and M. Tract, to R. M. Watson, $675. Westerly 40 feet of lot 16 of block "A" M. & M. tract to Lizzie S. Stewart. Lot 17 block "B" M. & M. tract to H. W. Martin, $675. Easterly 20 feet of lot 14 and the westerly 20 feet of lot 12 block "A" M. & M. Tract to E. H. Wambold, $675. Lot 44 block "A" M. & F. Tract to Mary B. Goldsworthy, $1000. Lot 45 block "A" M. & F. Alven, $675. Lot 27 block "A" M. & M. tract to R. W. Alven $625. Westerly 10 feet of lot 19 and easterly 30 feet of lot 21 block "A" M. & M. to Wilson & Kelly, $675. Easterly 40 feet of lot 28 block "A" M. & M. Tract, to Mrs. J. H. Guy, $675. Lot 44 block "B" M. & F. Tract to Mrs. P. A. Merrill, $1000. Lot 33 block "A" M. & M. Tract to W. R. Tyler, $675. Westerly 10 feet of lot 28 and the easterly 30 feet of lot 30 M. & M. Tract to T. R. Jennings, $675. Easterly 10 feet of lot 43 and the westerly 30 feet of lot 41 block "A" M. & M. Tract to Miss Augusta Anderson, $675. Easterly 10 feet of lot 25 and the westerly 30 feet of lot 23 block "A" M. & M. Tract to Lucie B. Hopkins and Ray R. Hopkins, $675. Westerly 40 feet of lot 34 block "A" M. & M. Tract to W. J. Miller $675. Lot 47 block "A" M. & M. Tract to Harry Groves, $650. Holmes & Walton also report sales for two weeks previous of thirty-eight lots in said tracts aggregating $32,300. Lots of said tracts range from $550 to $2000 averaging about $850, each. Total sales since the opening of the tracts amounting to about $47,500.



The Delta Building.

FOR THREE NEW SKYSCRAPERS.

THE JOHN H. JONES PROPERTY IS LEASED FOR FIFTY YEARS.

Strong Local Syndicate Formed to Put up One of the Greatest Skyscrapers on the Pacific Coast—There are Millions Involved in This Undertaking.

The John H. Jones estate will be magnificently improved at a near day. The property has been in the hands of a pioneer who died a few years ago since away back in the sixties. It is to this day in a practically unimproved condition.

First there is a lot on the southeast corner of Spring and Fifth streets, lying 120 feet on Spring and 159 to an alley on Fifth. Second on the northeast corner the same streets lies a lot ninety-five feet on Spring and 159 on Fifth to an alley with an L 60x150 feet running in north from Fifth street along the alley. Third there is a lot on the northwest corner of Main and Fifth streets, 120 feet on Main and 158 on Fifth, running back to the alley which separated it from the lot on the southeast corner of Spring. The two lots cover the entire distance on Fifth street between Main and Spring. The three parcels are a great area of very valuable business property in the heart of the city.

Leased for Fifty Years.

This magnificent property has been secured under lease for a term of fifty years by a syndicate well able to take care of it in every way. The estimated value of the three pieces is $1,350,000, and could probably be sold for that amount. The syndicate pays for the first five years 2½ per cent. on that sum, and for the other forty-five years 4 per cent. on the sum. They are under an obligation to put up buildings costing at least $1,100,000. As a matter of fact the buildings are likely to run to $1,500,000. They will be ten-story fire proof structures of the most modern, and substantial character.

When Work Will Begin.

The southeast corner of Spring will be where work will begin. The building on that and the one on Main street must be completed within three years from today. The northeast corner of Spring will come later.

The plan is to cover all this immense acre with fine buildings including the L along the alley. The whole length along Fifth street, north side from Main to Spring will be one solid mass of buildings, as the structure is to stretch across the alley above the ground floor all of the 120 feet which the Main street lot has. The face of the building on Fifth street will be nearly 350 feet and along the alley west the depth will be 245 feet. The Main street front will be 120 feet and that on Spring will be 95 feet. Ten stories over that vast area means an immense structure.

The Men Behind the Bricks.

The men behind the guns, that is the bricks in this great undertaking are: A. C. Bilicke, R. A. Rowan, J. S. Torrance, Adams-Phillips Company, Maurice S. Hellman, J. F. Sartori and others. The combination looks good, looks like doers. They can do it.

THE DELTA BUILDING.

The Next Skyscraper to Go up in City of Los Angeles to be on South Spring.

The next skyscraper to go up in the city of Los Angeles is to be on South Spring.

This page shows the Delta Building, about to be put up for the Delta Investment Company on the east side of South Spring street, between Fourth and Fifth streets. The building will cost when completed about $160,000. Then A. Eisen is the architect, and Paul Haupt is the contractor. The building is to be completed by April 1, 1906. It will cover a ground space of 60x159.6 feet and will be built on a steel frame. Two stories will occupy the ground floor, and each upper floor will contain twenty office rooms, supplied with modern conveniences, combination lavatories, wash basins, coat-rooms, etc. There will be gas, electric and steam-heating fixtures, and each room will have a pipe for compressed air for cleaning purposes. Both passenger and freight elevators will be installed. The entire interior, with the exception of the storerooms, will be finished in enameled white oak, there will be hardwood floors and cove ceilings. The staircase following the elevator shaft to the upper floors, will be of iron, with Italian marble treads to second story, above second story to be plain iron. The first story entrance hall and vestibule will be in Peruvian mahogany. The store fronts of entire first story will be set in about nine feet, forming a vestibule, the ceiling or soffit over entrance to have Peruvian mahogany panels. The steel columns in front will be encased with ornamental terra-cotta work. The first and second stories will be finished in drawn copper, and terra-cotta pressed-brick front above. The principal contract has been let to Paul Haupt; the plumbing, gas and steam fitting to Blumve & Jay Co.; electrical wiring to Woodill & Hulse Electrical Company, and painting to Richard Arnes.

Through the agency of C. J. Huyler & Co. the entire building has been leased by the Delta Investment Company to Anderson & Chanslor Company. This firm will occupy the entire ground floor with its grocery and provision business, and will sublet the upper floors in office suites.

IT IS ORGANIZED.

Los Angeles Dock and Terminal Company a Concrete Fact. These in It.

The finishing touches were put to the organization of the Los Angeles Dock and Terminal Company yesterday. The capital stock of the company is $1,500,000 and of this the sum $525,000 was paid up at the meeting. A board of directors was then elected as follows: Dana Burks, H. P. Barber of Los Angeles, and C. J. Curtis, C. C. Ames, W. M. Campbell, C. H. Spoor of Hubbard & Spoor, L. J. Peel, W. T. Bill and Harley Slater representing himself, Henry Fisher and F. C. Hornby, all of Redlands, C. H. Windham of Long Beach.

These directors organized by choosing the following officers: President, Dana Burks; first vice-president, C. J. Curtis; second vice-president, David Curtis; treasurer, C. C. Ames; secretary, W. M. Campbell. The executive committee is composed of Henry P. Barber, Dana Burks and C. H. Windham. H. P. Barber is chairman of the executive committee.

The combination is a very strong one, able to do great things. Dana Burks and Henry P. Barker are Los Angeles men, known to all. C. J. Curtis is a Redlands fruit man by no means unknown in Los Angeles where for a long time he was one of the doers of things in a big fruit company. C. C. Ames is president of the Redlands National Bank. Mr. Curtis is also a banker. All the men in this great undertaking are active in business and may be expected to make things move. The direction of affairs will be largely in the hands of Dana Burks and Henry P. Barber, the organizers of the great undertaking. It looks as if they had got the men and got the money too.

The Drama—Players, Playhouses, Music and Musicians.

MUSIC AND MUSICIANS.

THE choir-folk have come back to town.

Studios are opening, professional people are again seen upon the streets, and in almost every church the reorganized musical forces are taking up the melodic work of the coming year.

In no preceding season has so much interest attached to the doings of our singers—principally, because there are more of them, because our churches have risen to metropolitan wealth and importance, and also because numerous significant changes have been made in the conduct, direction and even in the policy of the musical services.

The choir, as well as the minister, is now a recognized professional and therefore financial adjunct to a church's management. From a few small-salaried "professors" of the early '90's, with well-meaning but indifferently accomplished amateurs beneath their eccentric baton, progress has gone steadily forward, until the salaried quartette has become a permanent factor in almost every one of our large churches, with professional singers sending up finely-rendered anthems of harmonic praise that go fittingly with cultured audiences, inspired preachers and magnificent church buildings.

At Christ Church John Douglas Walker directs the music, and with himself as tenor, the solo quartette during the coming year will consist of Maude E. Richards, contralto; Maude Reese-Davies, soprano; and William James Chick, baritone. Mr. Walker has organized a chorus of fifty voices, and today, for the first time, the "telephone service" will be placed within reach of the choir's voices, so that sick folk at home may hear the music as well as the ministerial service.

Archibald W. Sessions, the new organist of Christ Church, is doubtless the most prominent of the city's younger players. Since his return from Guilmant's tutelage, in Paris, he has succeeded Alfred A. Butler at this console, and also at the organ of B'nai B'rith synagogue.

At Immanuel Presbyterian Church the choir for the coming season will include Mrs. Bessie Ives Harrison, soprano; Miss Wilson, contralto; A. Sheldon Balinger, tenor, and Harry Baker, basso and director.

It is uncertain whether the Independent Church of Christ will have a choir during the coming year. If it does, Miss Blanche Rogers will probably be the organist, and perhaps the director.

At the First Congregational church the choir is still under the direction of Harry Clifford Lott, Mrs. C. G. Stivers being soprano and Mrs. C. G. Richards, contralto. W. F. Skeele is the organist, as of old.

Joseph P. Dupuy, director of the First Christian choir, is the only leader in the city who is in charge of two bodies of church singers. Mr. Dupuy has B'nai B'rith as well. His choir at the Christian Church has suffered considerably by matrimonially inclined sopranos of late, the first instance being brilliant voiced Ethel Fults, who married Robert Smith. At present another changing process is going on. The alto is Miss Blanche Brown, J. J. Martin is the bass and Mr. Dupuy the tenor.

The choir election in the First Methodist Church is to come this week, with the probability in sight that J. B. Poulin will be retained as tenor and director. Miss Belle Martin, the soprano, is to be married in October, and Mr. Poulin is already casting his lines elsewhere. Miss June Nutting is the alto, Hugo Whitehead the bass and Miss Ada Showalter, the organist.

Mrs. Frank H. Colby, wife of the organist, is a soprano much in demand. Last year she was with the Church of the Unity, and they desire to have her with them again. However, the new Venice Choir, under the direction of her husband, has also put in a strong bid for her services. She has not yet decided her final course.

Temple Baptist choir is to continue this year under the direction of Harry Barnhart. Considerable news interest attaches to its membership, as changes have been made. The new soprano is Miss Mabel Runge, the alto Miss Anna Latimer, Spencer Robinson the tenor, and Barnhart the bass. Orders were issued during the week past for the establishment of a full vested choir.

At B'nai B'rith Temple a complete reorganization of the musical force has been effected since the beginning of last year. Mr. Dupuy directs, Mrs. Catherine Collette is the soprano, Miss Katherine Ebbert the contralto, Harry Williams the bass, and the director himself the tenor. As stated, Sessions has succeeded Butler at the organ.

At St. Vibiana's Cathedral, while some may come and some may go, there are two who will remain during the coming year, and who are well established in local Catholic music. These are A. J. Stamm, the director, and Lillian Scanlon, contralto.

Thomas W. Wilde, at St. Vincent's, is another landmark in Catholicism, and is now the Dean of organists and directors in point of service. For seventeen years he has been in his present position, and will continue through another year.

The choir of St. Paul's Pro-Cathedral is at present in a reorganization crisis. Director Wesley Martin, who has had charge of the boy musicians, has resigned, and his successor has not yet been appointed, nor is it likely that he will be before the return of Dean J. J. Wilkins, who is at present in the East.

At St. John's Church Waldo F. Chase will direct, with Miss Louise Nixon-Hill as soprano, Mr. Pfister as tenor, and Mr. Peterson as baritone.

Burt Estes Howard's reorganized congregation has not, as yet, perfected its choir arrangements. Miss Estelle Heartt is singing there at present, and if a choir is established she will doubtless be asked to hold her position permanently.

At the First Presbyterian Church, where Paul directed last year, a new choir is in. In the present choir Miss Charlotte Pinkham is the soprano, Miss Harriett Longstreet the contralto, Hugh N. Callender the tenor and Frank Ayres the bass, with Mrs. Loud at the organ.

Miss Mary L. O'Donoughue, formerly directress at Immanuel Church, is now in the same position at the Catholic Church of the Sacred Heart. Her choir consists of Miss Mary Merrick, soprano; Mrs. Budlong, contralto; Mr. Pauly, tenor; and Anthony Schwamm, basso.

Miss Jennie Winston, former soprano at Immanuel Church, is now soprano and directress of the Grand View Presbyterian Church, corner of Twenty-fourth street and Vermont avenue.

Alice Coleman organist of the First M.E. Church in Pasadena
Miss Lillian Scanlon of St. Vibiana's, foremost woman singer of local Catholicism
Miss Blanche Brown, contralto of the First Christian Choir
Spencer Robinson who will sing at Burdette's Church
Alfred A. Butler retiring organist of Christ Church and the Synagogue
Mlle Catherine Heartt, now singing at Burt Estes Howard's Church
Louise Nixon-Hill now singing at St. John's
Harry Clifford Lott, who has just returned from the East to the First Congregational Choir
Katherine Ward, contralto of First Presbyterian Church under Paul's direction
Ella Claire Northrop, former Soprano of Immanuel Church
Blanch Rogers, who will probably be the organist of the Independant Church of Christ during the coming year
Anna Latimer, contralto at Temple Baptist Church
Katherine C. Ebbert new contralto at B'nai B'rith
Mrs. Catherine Collete, new Soprano at B'nai B'rith
Mrs. C. G. Stivers now in the First Congregational Choir
Mary L. O'Donoughue, organist and Directress at the Church of the Sacred Heart
John Douglas Walker, director of Christ Church Choir for the coming year
Mrs. Frank Colby, Soprano desired by two Choirs
Archibald W. Sessions, new organist of Christ Church and the Synagogue
Edmond S. Shank, basso of the First M.E. Church of Pasadena

Busy members of the Los Angeles Choir Fraternity of 1905-06.

The First Presbyterian Church of Pasadena has an excellent choir, captained by that splendid organist and poetic composer, Morton F. Mason. In the choir are Mrs. Catherine Collette, soprano; Miss Norma Rockhold, contralto; Jackson S. Greg, tenor; and Harry Williams, basso.

The First Methodist Church of Pasadena has an able body of singers. A recent addition is Edmond S. Shank, a well known local basso. Miss Alice Coleman remains as the organist.

Mr. Krauss Here.

Arnold Krauss has returned, in good health and spirits, from his extended northern trip. He reached the city yesterday.

Will Take Fine Position.

Miss Mabel Brousseau of this city, who with her sister Miss Kate Brousseau has been spending several months in New York City has just accepted a position as piano teacher in the Kee Mar College at Hagerstown, Md. Miss Brousseau's many friends will be interested to know of her good fortune as she is one of the most talented pianists of the city. She expects to start on September 18 for Maryland to take up her work.

Symphony Orchestra.

The season ticket sale of the Los Angeles Symphony Orchestra opened last week at the Mason box office, and already there have been more than two hundred subscribers. Mr. Hamilton is still in the East, but will return shortly.

Bauermeister's Farewell.

According to London papers there seems to be no doubt that Mme. Bauermeister will leave the operatic stage after next season.

"This genial and cultured artist," says Black and White, "has had a distinguished career for upward of forty years, and her 'old women' have always been characteristic studies both from the vocal and dramatic point of view. She will be remembered for many years for her Martha in 'Faust,' and the splendid reception she had on the occasion of her farewell, which took place at the memorable matinée organized by Mme. Melba, will, as she herself says, never be forgotten by her.

"She played for the last time in

The Drama---Music and Musicians—Brush and Pencil.

England, at any rate, in Romeo and Juliette, as the Nurse, and her touching little speech went to the heart of every one in the vast audience. Mlle. Bauermeister studied first at the Royal Academy of Music here, and her operatic experience began when she was about fourteen years of age.

"She will sing once more in a season at New York, and then it is her intention to devote herself to teaching, a useful work in which her wide experience, and above all her sound musical knowledge, will stand her in good stead. She carries with her not only the esteem of the opera-loving public, but the affectionate regard of practically every artist of note; and her achievements have been gained by her strict sense of duty and her invariable reliability."

AT THE THEATERS.

Mason.

MAY IRWIN, in her newest play, "Mrs. Black is Back," will be seen at the Mason Operahouse during the first three nights of the coming week, commencing with tomorrow.

At the first performance of this piece in New York Charles Somerville of the Evening Journal said: "Up at the Bijou 'Mrs. Black is Back.' Mrs. Black is May Irwin. May Irwin is back. Same May Irwin. That mouth of many inches, the hustle and bustle of her, the same soft and funny warbling of a song. Hobart wrote the piece. It is easy to see where he got his inspiration: May Irwin."

From which we are to judge that May Irwin in propria persona is the principal part of the coming show.

Yiddish Plays at Burbank.

Glictman's Yiddish Players, said to be a strong organization of its class, will appear at the Burbank Theater during the coming week, giving three special matinées, on Wednesday, Thursday and Friday.

The company has been appearing during the past eleven weeks at the Columbia Theater in San Francisco, and also at the Grand Operahouse.

The people include Bernard Shoengold, Mr. Weisman, Mr. Bernard, Mr. Goldberg, Mr. Hirsch, Miss Raffelo, Miss Eva Katz, Miss Finklestein and Miss Eva Berlin.

The repertoire here will be, in the order named, "Kolnidrey," "Gabriel," "The Jewish King Lear."

Mr. Glictman himself is said to be an actor of unusual ability. A full equipment of scenery is carried.

Belasco.

The Belasco Theater company will play Edwin Milton Royle's comedy "Friends" this week, and the occasion will be marked by the reappearance of Howard Scott, who has been away during the summer.

Juliet Crosby and the regular Belasco force will appear in the cast.

Burbank.

John Burton's return to town will be celebrated by Morosco's stock production of Kendall's "The Vinegar Buyer," which will be seen during the entire week beginning this afternoon.

Special scenery and costumes have been prepared.

Dane's Debut.

Oscar Dane, a young actor who has a good Eastern reputation, will give a matinée performance at the Belasco this week—Wednesday afternoon—in his own new version of Stevenson's "Dr. Jekyll and Mr. Hyde."

Mr. Dane is the son of Henry J. Messing, a prominent St. Louis Rabbi. The actor is well known in Hebraic circles here.

Orpheum.

Nina Morris, an actress who has been popular in the East for several seasons, will make her first vaudeville appearance here this week at the Orpheum, in Brandon Hurst's little farce, "A Friend's Advice."

Howard and North, comedians, will introduce rapid-fire conversation. The Avon Comedy Four will return with their potpourri of singing, dancing and comedy, "The New Teacher." Mr. and Mrs. John Allison will present their comedy sketch, "Minnie from Minnesota," in which Mrs. Allison appears as a Swedish housemaid.

Burton's jumping greyhounds, Susie Fisher, the four "Emperors of Music," and new motion pictures will conclude the bill.

Chutes.

The Metropolitan Comic Opera Company, a new Coast organization numbering thirty-five people, will be seen today in Chute's theater. They present works of standard comic opera repertoire.

Donatelli has arranged two programs for today, the music including the ballet from "Excelsior," excerpts from "Faust," Suppe's rendition of "A Midsummer Night's Dream," and Donatelli's "Momento Musicale."

An out-door lion act will be given by Bolaski.

Grand Operahouse.

This is to be the final week of the Ulrich Stock Company at the Grand Operahouse, and the final offering will be Theodore Kremer's latest production, "Queen of the Highbinders."

Casino.

Marked success has been scored at the Casino Theater by Bob McCauley and Fannie Donavan, in a singing and talking act. They will probably remain at the Casino Theater for six weeks. They are bound to make a hit wherever they go with this turn.

Fischer's.

"A Warm Reception" will be the bill at Fischer's during the coming week. The musical piece has apparently scored a success, and its run will be continued.

The vaudeville programme will include McCrea and Poole, rifle shots; Parish, the ventriloquist; Nellie Black, vocalist, and new motion pictures.

Unique.

Rawson's dog and pony show will be the headline attraction at the Unique Theater for the coming week. The programme includes the Millards, the Wilsons in an Indian act, Deverne, the Mullaly sisters and Bacon and Vahe.

Russian Theater in New York.

On October 20 a Russian theater will be opened in New York on Third street, having been promoted by Paul Orleneff, an enterprising and artistic Russian, who contemplates establishing a permanent Russian theater. The class of plays to be presented is of the highest order: Gorky's "Children of Light," and "The Night Refuge;" Cherkov's "Uncle Wania;" Ibsen's "Ghosts," "The Master Builder," "An Enemy of the People," "Hedda Gabler;" Hoffman's "Sunken Bell," "Michael Kramer" and "Lonely Souls," and another play, written by an Austrian playwright, Herman Behr, and called "The Apostle," which is declared to be a play of wonderful strength. This Russian company will own its own play house, and the building has been started. Last season, in New York, their plays caused about the greatest commotion of anything in the dramatic field. They were recalled to Europe, but devotés of classical drama raised funds and made it possible for these artists to remain in America the coming winter.

Mme. Nasimoff, the leading lady, has returned to Russia to procure the rights on one or two new plays by Gorky and Cherkov; also to obtain the services of ten actors and actresses of standing in Russia, to add to the strength of the company.

Orleneff himself has undertaken very heavy risks in order that the theater might be possible, but many friends and people who wish to sustain so valuable an acquisition to dramatic art have generously subscribed. This is supposed to be the first Russian theater in America, and will be known as Orleneff's Russian Lyceum, a small theater seating about nine hundred people and at prices which are generally known as "popular." Orleneff is said to be a man of the highest ideals and broadest possibilities, and as possessing extraordinary interpretative powers. Boston and Philadelphia will be visited at intervals, and doubtless the former will welcome Orleneff with the enthusiasm which he apparently deserves.

PROMPTINGS.

Martin Alsop has been engaged for a role in "The Woman in the Case."

Norman Hackett has been engaged as leading man for Louis James in his revival of "Virginius."

Donald Bowles and George Bloomquist are having vacation yachting along the coast of Massachusetts, making Gloucester their headquarters.

In a forthcoming essay on Shakespeare, Tolstoi, it is understood, explains the conditions responsible for what he calls "the misdirected worship" of the Englishman's writings.

Henry Miller has announced that the players who will support Margaret Anglin in Zira, in New York, will be Frank Worthing, Jameson Lee Finney, George Titheradge, Fred Thorne, Harrington Reynolds, Beverly Sitgreaves, and Mrs. Thomas Whiffen.

The New York verdict on Hall Caine's "The Prodigal Son" is favorable enough for commercial purposes. The play began a long engagement at the New Amsterdam Theater there Monday night.

Bjornstjerne Bjornson's latest drama, "Daglannet," was produced Thursday night at the National Theater, Christiania, with great success. The author, who personally managed the production, was recalled repeatedly.

Ethel Barrymore, with her brother John, returned last week from Europe. She confirms the report of her coming marriage to Capt. Henry Graham, and says she is in love with her new play, "Alice-Sit-By-The-Fire," by J. M. Barrie. In this play she will impersonate a middle-aged woman, the mother of two children, a radical departure from her usual line of plays.

Emil Paur's Pittsburgh Orchestra will be composed almost entirely of new members the coming season. Seventeen members have returned to Europe, their contracts having expired. Among the number leaving are Herman Beyer-Hane, principal violoncellist; F. V. Radollet, principal flute and Carl Preusse, the famous French horn. Conductor Paur is now in Europe engaging players to take their places.

Mrs. Brown-Potter is having a disagreeable time in the bankruptcy court. After selling nearly all her property to meet the claims of her creditors, she broke into tears when it was suggested that two Shetland ponies, great pets of hers, should be included in the sale. It will be remembered that an attorney, Fossick, was prosecuted in connection with this failure, and sentenced to five years for misappropriating his clients' money.

It is not probable that any of the New Orleans theaters will open on schedule time. The Lyric has already announced the postponement of its first production from September 3 to the 17th of the same month. A further deferment is anticipated. The Orpheum has advertised its opening for September 18, but it is very doubtful if the present intentions of the management can be consistently carried out. The other theaters have wisely refrained from proclaiming their dates. The strict quarantine restrictions make it very difficult for anyone to leave the afflicted city.

On a Surf-rolled Torso of Venus.

(Found at Tripoli Vecchio, and now in the Louvre.)

One day in the world's youth, long, long ago,
Before the golden hair of Time grew gray,
The bright warm sea, scarce stirred by the dolphin's play,
Was swept by sudden music soft and low;
And rippling, as 'neath kisses, parted slow,
And gave a snowy, dripping goddess birth,
Fairer than fairest daughters of the earth;
Who brought fresh life to all men here below.

And, lo, that self-same sea has now upthrown
A mutilated Venus, rolled and rolled
For ages by the surf, and that has grown
More soft, more chaste, more lovely than of old,
With every line toned down, so that the stone
Seems seen as through a veil which ages hold.

Allen Hutchinson, Sculptor.

We who live in Southern California are to be congratulated that our sunshine attracts hitherward so many of the elect among the world's workers—that poets, painters, sculptors, and their brothers come to breathe for awhile our pure airs, and find at last that the spell is upon them, and that it is their blessed doom to remain.

One and all they accept gladly this high and happy decree of a kind fate, and one and all they begin their work with brush or pen or chisel, with a fine and untiring enthusiasm, blazing the way for the strong and splendid art life that is destined to be ours in the near future.

Among the last of the pioneers is Allen Hutchinson, the sculptor, who has been a sojourner in many places of the round world, but who knows at last that Southern California is the one spot best suited to his mind and talent. He has just opened a studio in San Bernardino.

Mr. Hutchinson was a pupil of Lanteri, and the earlier part of his career as a sculptor was passed in Chelsea, London, where he had his studio. He made his debut before the art world at the Royal Academy in 1883 with a full face relief portrait, and since then he has been a constant exhibitor.

Feeling a strong desire to prosecute his studies farther afield, and to leave the well-worn ruts of studio life behind him for a time, he went to the northwest territory of Canada in 1886, and there made exhaustive plastic study of the North American Indian. The red man could at that time be seen in all his pristine vigor and picturesqueness, far removed from the contaminating influences of civilization and the white man. It was here that the sculptor made his first essay in a field of work which has since made him famous as a student of racial types. A year later, he crossed the Rocky Mountains and found himself among the Coast Indians of British Columbia. He did not confine himself to depicting Indians, however, but opened a studio in Victoria and made busts of some of its leading citizens.

In 1889 he went to Honolulu, and started a series of Hawaiian types for the Bishop Museum. Replicas of his interesting and valuable work at this period are to be found in most of the Ethnological museums of the world. During a stay of many years on the islands, Mr. Hutchinson made portraits, in the round and in relief, of some well known people, among whom may be mentioned King Kalakaua, King Lunalilu, President Dole, and Robert Louis Stevenson.

The bust of Stevenson, [illegible] executed in 1893, was after[illegible] ited in the New Gallery, London, [illegible] this bust and the [illegible] Gaudens are thought to be the [illegible] plastic portraits of the famous [illegible] of letters now extant. In passing [illegible] may be mentioned that Mr. Hutchinson enjoyed a close intimacy [illegible] this most delightful of friends [illegible] that he was about to visit Stevenson at his home in Samoa when the news of the latter's death reached [illegible]

In 1897 Mr. Hutchinson went [illegible] Australia to study the aborigines [illegible] that country. After some [illegible] he opened a studio in Sydney, [illegible] among other important commissions he executed a memorial bust [illegible] the Lieutenant-Governor, Sir [illegible] Stephen, for the National Art Gallery. A few years later—in 1900, to be exact—we find the sculptor among the Maoris, in New Zealand, busily and happily at work on a series of [illegible] types, one of which, "A Woman [illegible] Waikato," we here reproduce.

Like many other sculptors from [illegible] parts of the world, Mr. Hutchinson was attracted to St. Louis in [illegible] here he participated in much of [illegible] plastic decoration which adorned [illegible] great World's Fair. Here he exhibited, by special request, "A Mongolian Type," in the [illegible] section. For this study, strong [illegible] construction and exquisite in its perfection of detail, he received a [illegible] medal. This head had been previously exhibited in the Royal Academy, London, as well as in Berlin.

Mention must also be made of Hutchinson's figurines in wax, [illegible] times only swiftly executed [illegible] but nevertheless full of [illegible] gance and vivacity.

ART NOTES.

A writer in the Century [illegible] depreciates the Peale portrait [illegible] Paul Jones, now in Independence [illegible] Philadelphia. "It is," he [illegible] "vapid and expressionless, [illegible] with this new engraving [illegible] round copperplate engraving [illegible] eau.] and a comparison [illegible] with Houdon's bust, which [illegible] eled from a life-mask, and [illegible] sarily always be the standard [illegible] cellence in judging portraits [illegible] demonstrates at a glance [illegible] earlier work is a much more [illegible] likeness, and possesses far more [illegible] real personality of the [illegible] than Peale's painting." It was [illegible] ly purchased for a few shillings [illegible] ty years ago, at a second-hand [illegible] shop in London, by Mr. [illegible] Franklin Stevens of Boston [illegible] years ago he gave it to the [illegible] Society, and the gift was [illegible] obscure corner of the [illegible] chamber of the old State [illegible]

A young Danish [illegible] Pedersen has just returned [illegible] hagen from India after [illegible] that rarely falls to a [illegible] illustrator. Engaged by a [illegible] publisher to illustrate a [illegible] he made the acquaintance [illegible] of Maharajahs and Rajahs [illegible] him commissions for [illegible] paintings on a scale [illegible] his strength. Many of his [illegible] executing in Copenhagen [illegible] they are finished he will [illegible] Golconda again and [illegible] just as large a harvest [illegible] presents as before.

The architects of the [illegible] ing at Indianapolis have [illegible] test against the design [illegible] monument to President [illegible] Harrison which is to [illegible] it. EVENTS OF THE WEEK.

THE autumn days have come almost before smart folks have returned from their summer outings, and all sorts of plans are being laid for informal doings.

Monday evening, R. G. Masson was host at an enjoyable dinner at the Van Nuys Hotel, in compliment to Miss Lelia Simonds and Warren Carhart, whose wedding is to take place in November.

Tuesday a pretty wedding was that of Miss Sylvia Bowman, daughter of Mrs. Adaline Bowman of No. 947 Denver avenue and Herbert B. Stedman, the marriage taking place at the home of the bride's mother, with only a few intimate friends and relatives present. That same evening, Miss Harriet Marshall Woodward and J. P. Wells were married at the Broadway Christian Church, before a large company of friends, with Rev. J. P. McKnight officiating.

Society was much surprised and interested to learn of the marriage of Miss Augusta Egelhoff and Clarence B. Rundel, which took place at 2 o'clock in the afternoon at Ocean Park at the home of the bride's sister, Mrs.

MRS. LUCIEN J. STANDEFER, and her two pretty children, Master Kenneth and little Miss Theo Standefer.

C. E. Gillen, on Fraser avenue, Rev. [illegible] Jenkins performing the service. The marriage of Miss Louise Bosbyshell and [illegible] Gibbs took place before a large company of friends on Tuesday evening in the First Congregational Church and was one of the fashionable [illegible] of the week. After the ceremony an informal reception for the bridal party and relatives was held at the home of the bride's parents, Mr. and Mrs. E. P. Bosbyshell of No. 1121 [illegible] street. Another wedding of [illegible] interest in the young set was [illegible] Miss Mame Hambright and [illegible]erin, which took place on [illegible] St. Vincent's Church, in [illegible] of a small company of [illegible] relatives. That same day [illegible]cisco, the wedding of Miss [illegible] and Glenn C. Peck was [illegible] St. Mary's Parish Church. [illegible] Lacey of No. 690 South [illegible] avenue was hostess at a [illegible] party on Tuesday, given for [illegible] Gladys Chase of Hollywood and Miss [illegible] Scudder of Pasadena, two [illegible] brides-elect. That afternoon Mrs. Charles W. Hinchcliffe of No. 2414 South Grand avenue, entertained with a pretty luncheon in compliment to Miss Lotus Coombs of San Francisco and Miss Reynolds of Oakland, two pretty visiting girls. Wednesday Mrs. John T. Rowntree of No. [illegible] Loma Drive was hostess at a luncheon given at Playa del Rey in honor of her daughter, Miss Bessie [illegible] Rowntree whose engagement was recently announced. Mrs. C. Q. Stan[illegible] of Whittier street entertained a company of twelve women with a luncheon and Mrs. Robert Parker had as guests for the afternoon the South [illegible] Chapter of O. E. S. Thursday Mrs. C. W. Hinchcliffe of South Grand avenue, gave a dinner at the Jonathan Club for her young son, Charles Hinchcliffe, Jr. In the afternoon one of the loveliest affairs of the week was the luncheon given at the Woman's Clubhouse by Mrs. Jefferson D. Gibbs, in compliment to Mrs. H. A. Landis, Mrs. Eugene Hawkins and Mrs. Charles L. Wallace of Beaumont, Tex. Miss Pearl King gave a most attractive dinner party for Miss [illegible] and Mr. Scott, who are to be married next week. Mrs. Burwell A. [illegible] gave a box party at the Belasco Theater for Mrs. W. Charles [illegible] who is a visitor here for a short time. Friday afternoon, Miss Beulah [illegible] of Pasadena, was hostess at a [illegible] party given in compliment to Miss Chase and Miss Scudder, and Saturday Miss Gates entertained with a theater party for her guest, [illegible] Tucker.

[illegible] Function.

That gracious hostess, Mrs. Henderson Hayward of Wilshire Boulevard, has issued invitations for what will [illegible] be the first large affair of the [illegible]. It is to be a tea, given in compliment to Mrs. A. L. Danskin [illegible] Mrs. Frank Flint, who intend leaving the first part of October with Senator Flint for Washington, to spend the winter. Mrs. Hayward's affairs are always just a little out of the ordinary and her guests always anticipate a [illegible] pleasurable time. The affair is to be given on Saturday afternoon, [illegible]ber 30, at the home of Mrs. Hayward, No. 2501 Wilshire Boulevard.

[illegible] Girl to Wed.

Everybody will be much interested [illegible] the announcement of the engagement of Miss Louise Eager, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. E. R. Eager of No. 88 South Bonnie Brae street, to Charles Bergin, the marriage to take place on October 3 at St. Vibiania's Cathedral. Miss Eager is a beautiful blonde with delicate coloring and fetchingly attired. She has been one of the popular girls of the young set and every one feels much interest in this fair girl's choice and her wedding. Mr. Bergin is a son of Mrs. John Bergin of South Flower street and is a member of the Newman Club in which he is popular and is secretary of the Los Angeles Council of the Knights of Columbus. Beside this he is assistant secretary of the Los Angeles Soap Company.

Owing to the prominence of both families the wedding is to be a large church affair in order to accommodate the many friends of the couple.

Miss Eager has chosen as her maid of honor, Miss Frances Wartelle and the two bridesmaids will be Miss Vesta Edwards and Miss Mary Hurley. The best man is Daniel Grant, nephew of Mrs. L. A. Grant, and the ushers will be Leo Bergin and Albert Forthman.

First Large Luncheon.

Mrs. Jefferson Gibbs of No. 424 Park View street, was hostess on Thursday afternoon at a beautiful luncheon given in compliment to three charming visitors from Texas, Mrs. H. A. Landes and Mrs. Eugene Hawkins of Galveston and Mrs. Charles L. Wallace of Beaumont. The luncheon was served in the handsome red room of the Woman's Clubhouse, and [illegible] decked with a pleasing arrangement scarlet carnations whose spiciness mingled with woodsy ferns. Places were marked with cards adorned with hand-painted carnations in the same shade and tied with fancy satin bows.

Besides the hostess and guests of honor those for whom covers were laid were: Mrs. W. J. Washburn, Mrs. Morris Albee, Mrs. Josiah Evans Cowles, Mrs. Robert J. Burdette, Mrs. Willoughby Rodman, Mrs. Henderson Hayward, Mrs. Sumner P. Hunt, Mrs. N. P. Conroy, Mrs. B. F. Church, Mrs. Moye Stephens, Mrs. Harriet S. Wright, Mrs. Berthold Baruch, Mrs. E. R. Bradley and Mrs. D. G. Stephens.

Surprise to Friends.

The many friends of Miss Edith Louise Weiser, the talented young vocalist, will be surprised to learn of her engagement to Harold Warren Barham, a young broker of the city. So quiet have the couple kept the news that few people [illegible] it. The wedding is to take place on September 26, and is to be a very quiet one after which the couple intend to leave for an extended trip. Miss Weiser is from Chicago, having only lived out here about a year, where she first met Mr. Barham. She is a most accomplished musician, and delighted the audiences at Venice this summer with her sweet singing.

—o—

Fair Girl Weds.

On Tuesday at noon a pretty home wedding was solemnized at the home of Mrs. Adaline Bowman of No. 947 Denver avenue, her only daughter, fair brown-eyed Miss Sylvia Bowman, becoming the bride of Herbert B. Stedman, with Rev. Hugh K. Walker officiating. Miss Lucile Cope, a cousin of the bride, played the wedding march and soft music during the ceremony. The home had been decked with nodding Shasta daisies and white jassamine, combined with ferns and potted palms. The couple stood in the arched windows beneath a bower of greenery, from which garlands of jassamine and baskets of the daisies swung. The bride was attired in a beautiful costume of pale gray cloth-of-gold, a new fabric. The soft folds of the gown fell in princesse effect over a waist of handmade lace. The tiny short jacket of the gown was trimmed with a touch of pink oriental embroidery and the sleeves were finished with soft lace. A turban of soft gray went with the costume, and shoes and gloves matched the gown. With this was carried a parasol of white silk, hand-painted with exquisite wild roses and with a shepherd's crook handle. Her bouquet was of bride roses. A wedding breakfast was served, after which the couple left on their honeymoon, to be gone several weeks, and will be at home in Los Angeles after October 14.

MISS BELLE MARTIN, whose engagement to Charles Lamb is announced.

Birthday Gathering.

The pretty home of Mr. and Mrs. Melville Stewart of No. 3704 South Hope street was the scene of a pleasant gathering of friends on the evening of September 13 in honor of the birthday of Lloyd, son of Mr. and Mrs. Stewart. Prayer was offered by Francis Murphy, followed by an interesting musical programme, contributed to by Lloyd Stewart, who gave a violin solo, "War March," from Mendelssohn, and he responded to an encore with "Cavatina," C. Bohm. "Spring's Awakening" (Bach,) was a clarinet solo, given by William H. McBean. "Angel's Serenade" (Braga,) was a most delicate piece, given by Miss Wentworth. Mr. Stewart gave "Abenleid" and "Traumerie" (Schumann,) and the "Valse in D Flat" was a piano solo rendered by Miss Jessie Gregory. Miss Wentworth sang several times and Mr. Stewart completed the programme with more splendid numbers.

Those who enjoyed the evening were, Mr. and Mrs. Francis Murphy, Mr. and Mrs. Emswiler, Mr. and Mrs. Mitton, Mr. and Mrs. Harting, Mr. and Mrs. Still, Mr. and Mrs. Trask, Mr. and Mrs. Stewart, Mrs. Jessie Gregory Gilman, Mrs. Milfield and Misses Olive and Dorothy Trask, Anna and Gladys Still and Harting Wentworth and Messrs. McBean, Stewart and Pratt.

Y.M.C.B. Social.

Last Monday evening at the First Congregational Church, the Young Men's Centurian Band held their second annual meeting and election of officers. The newly chosen men for the ensuing year are as follows. Centuriatus Maximus, Percy G. Anderson; Centuriatus Primus, George B. King; Centuriatus Secundus, Robert J. Harwood; Centuriatus Tertius, Thomas Lynn; Scriba, Charles A. Dalton; Questor, Charles M. Heron.

Charles E. Richards, the popular leader of the class, was given an enthusiastic ovation by the boys, and responded in words of appreciation of the interest taken in the work by the members of the class.

Immediately after the business meeting all filed downstairs to the social hall, where the young women of the Good Samaritan Circle and others from the Bible School had prepared a big surprise for them in the nature of a dainty banquet. The room was prettily decorated with streamers of purple and white crepe tissue paper. The snowy white tables, decorated with ferns and white carnations, were arranged in the shape of a large triangle, and to these the young women escorted the surprised and bewildered Centurians.

The toasts which followed the repast were unique, partaking of a military nature. Mr. Richards, acting as toastmaster, took for the first subject, "Attention," and the following toasts were responded to: "Right Dress," Ralph A. Chase; "Left Dress," Miss Christine Johnson; "Front," Miss Louise Atsatt; "Load," C. E. Fisher; "Aim," Miss Beckwith; "Fire," Robert H. Bacon.

A rising vote of thanks was tendered the young women for their efforts and Miss Helen Balch, the president of the G.S.C., responded. The boys were unanimous in declaring it to be the most successful and enjoyable evening in the history of the class. The new officers of the Y.M.C.B. are planning much greater work for the new year and expect it to be the record-breaker. All young men are welcome.

Miss Louise Eager and her fiance Charles Bergin who are to be married on October 3 at St. Vibiana's Cathedral.

—o—

For Miss Coghill.

Miss Claire Coghill of Redlands is the guest of her friend, Miss Fay Ferrol of No. 900 South Union avenue, for a few weeks, and in her honor Miss Ferrol is planning to entertain with an informal card party on Wednesday evening of this week.

Miss Lulu Roberts and Boyd Roberts of No. 1349 Orange street entertained on Thursday evening with a jolly little evening in compliment to this charming visitor. It was a porch party, and music and games furnished amusement for the young people.

Miss Coghill is a member of the Lambda Theta Phi sorority of this city and she has many friends here.

—o—

Three Weeks Trip.

Mr. and Mrs. Morris Albee of West Twenty-third street left yesterday for an extended northern trip to be gone about three weeks. They intend stopping in San Francisco and from thence go directly to the Portland Exposition. From Portland they will go on to British Columbia, spending their time in Victoria.

—o—

Large Church Wedding.

Miss Lillian Harris, daughter of Mrs. Elida Harris, who is to wed Robert H. Adams, has chosen Wednesday evening, October 11, as her wedding night, and the ceremony is to take place in St. Paul's Pro-Cathedral.

Miss Harris has selected as matron of honor her sister, Mrs. Frederick Hesmalhalch, while her younger sister, Miss Edith Harris, is to be maid of honor. Three pretty girls who will act as bridesmaids are Misses Janice Meredith of Stanford, who will come down for the wedding, Miss Nona Taylor and Miss Gertrude McCaffery of this city.

Ross Smith is to be the best man and young men who will act as ushers include Messrs. Russell Taylor, Frank Grace, Jack Comstock and Mr. Olmstead.

Miss Harris has been the object of much pleasant entertaining and last week was guest of honor at a theater party given by Mrs. Philip Zobelein.

—o—

Will Wed Wednesday.

Miss Maude Little, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. W. F. Little of No. 928 South Burlington avenue, and Clyde J. W. Smith will be married on Wednesday of this week, the ceremony being a quiet one, taking place at the home of the bride at noon. The bride has chosen as her attendant Miss Agnes Whetsell.

—o—

Return from Abroad.

Rev. C. C. Pierce and Mrs. Pierce, with their daughter, Miss Maria, returned home on Friday morning from an extended trip abroad. They visited most of the large cities en route home, and stopped at the Portland fair on their trip down the Coast. Many friends and relatives were at the station to give them a welcome home.

—o—

Touring California.

Mr. and Mrs. John Torry of Marrinette, Wis., accompanied by Miss Kate Hamer, are at the Hotel Lankershim and will be here for about ten days. Mr. Torry is a prominent politician and capitalist of Wisconsin, and he, with his wife and Miss Hamer, are touring California. They visited in San Francisco, and were in Santa Barbara for a short time, and are now taking in the coast resorts.

—o—

Wed at Home.

Miss Gladys Chase, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. P. B. Chase of Hollywood, and J. T. Herrington are to be married at the home of the bride in Hollywood on the evening of September 26. There will be no attendants except the four pretty girls who are to carry the daisy chains, and only a few friends will witness the ceremony.

A Belle of Santa Monica.

Mrs. James Lucien Standefer, a charming young matron of Los Angeles, has moved to Santa Monica, where she intends to make her home. She has purchased the pretty little bungalow of Nathan P. Bundy on Fifteenth street, near Oregon avenue. Santa Monica people will be glad to learn of the return of Mrs. Standefer, as before her marriage she was one of the belles of South Beach. She was formerly Miss Edith King, and was one of the jolly set of young girls among whom were Miss Fanny Layng, Miss Louise Dohs, Miss Hattie Loomis, Miss Ethel King and Miss Lottie Chalfant. These girls were most popular, and Mrs. Standefer has a host of friends and admirers in Santa Monica. She is a handsome woman, with laughing brown eyes and soft hair of the same hue. Her two little children are the pride of her heart, and well they may be, as they are fascinating mites.

—o—

Reception to Pastor.

Under the auspices of the Woman's Union of Temple Baptist Church, a lovely reception was given on Tuesday evening at Comnock Hall in honor of Rev. Robert J. Burdette and Mrs. Burdette, who have but recently returned from an enjoyable European tour.

The hall was gay with bright flowers, and smilax was garlanded over the deep brown walls, while scarlet geraniums blazed brightly against the effective background. Colored lights glowed and sweet music floated through the rooms, all welcoming the beloved couple back. Mrs. W. E. Schliemann, acting president of the Woman's Union, received and was assisted by Mrs. J. W. Faber, Mrs. C. S. De Lano, Mrs. George Cash and Mrs. J. Horace Adams.

The early part of the evening was spent in listening to the delightful musical programme given under the direction of Miss Grace Deering and Mrs. Grace Jacobs. An orchestra played sweetly, and vocal solos were given by Mr. Rose, Miss Aroline Ellis and Mrs. Gruell. Frank Crosier acted as toastmaster, and an address of welcome was made by Maddison Jones, which was responded to by both Dr. and Mrs. Burdette in their usual refreshing manner. A large number of guests enjoyed the gala evening.

—o—

Return from Trip.

J. A. Jowett and his daughter, Miss Ruth Jowett, of Menlo avenue, have just returned from a month's delightful trip to Portland and northern resorts. En route to Portland they visited the Yosemite Valley and San Francisco, and after seeing the exposition, went further north to Tacoma, Washington and Seattle, finally going to Victoria in British Columbia.

Visit Cousins.

Judge and Mrs. H. E. Deemer and Miss Dorothy Deemer of Red Oak, Iowa, who have been visiting their cousins, Mrs. Harriet A. Burd and family at their family residence, No. 2946 Brighton avenue, have returned to their home. Judge Deemer is a distinguished and clever man with many friends in the city, who will be sorry to hear of his departure.

Lawn Fete at Bell.

On the lawn and tennis court of the old Bell homestead, surrounded by graceful peppers and stately eucalypti and aglow with Japanese lanterns, was held a most successful fete last evening.

The grounds were thronged with a crowd of over five hundred guests. Many came from Los Angeles by special car and also from Huntington Park and the line of waiting automobiles without made it plain that all the world and his wife were present.

From one side of the veranda, completely screened by a bank of ferns and palms sweet music was discoursed by an orchestra from Los Angeles Conservatory of Music under the direction of Earl Bishop Valentine.

Some of the clever bits of the evening were furnished by Miss Bertha E. Hancock, who is director of the oratory department of that school. Miss Hancock gave one of Burdette's stories "Exhibition Day," in an irresistible manner, showing in her work, the exceedingly high art of artlessness and an entire absence of affectation. She responded to the encore with a clever little dialect sketch.

From the pretty Oriental booth erected and artistically hung with ferns and cut bowers by Shimi, the local florist. Within this effective little spot tea and wafers were dispensed by Miss Nellie Shoemaker and Miss Henriette Mossbacher of Kansas City, assisted by fetching little maids in Japanese costume.

A hot taffy stand was one of the "drawing" features. Mrs. S. F. Land, assisted by Mrs. J. I. Johnson, attired in white coat and cap, pulled the toothsome dainty, which was bought up eagerly by the purchasers. Miss Clara Weber, president of the Huntington Park Entre Nous Society, assisted by Miss Maude Patterson, lent a helping hand to the Bell sisters and gracefully presided at the punch bowl. One of the best-patronized shows was the futurity booth, where for a small consideration, Miss Clara Jones, attired in a gay gypsy costume, disclosed thrilling futures to the chance comer. On the tennis court and lawn, ice cream and cake were served. Chaperones, who complained of the evening chill, were provided for in the large living-room of the old home of Mr. and Mrs. Alphonso E. Bell, where a cheerful blaze of great logs was a comforting scene.

Superior Cucumber Cream

There's all the difference in the world in cucumber creams.

Many preparations labeled cucumber cream haven't a bit of cucumber juice in them; others are composed of animal fats with just a drop or two of cucumber juice.

The cucumber cream made by Mrs. Gervaise-Graham is a pure product composed only of cucumber juice, elder flowers and the milk of almonds, with a pure body matter.

This is a valuable preparation for preserving the complexion—removes tan and sunburn and prevents the skin from becoming rough and red.

Tomorrow

We shall make our initial exhibit of the completed lines of Fall and Winter

Cloaks, Suits and Dress Materials

It's a showing that embraces all the best creations, the foremost ideas, of the most famous foreign and American designers.

Handsome Wraps

Among the coats you may see both original models and copies from such world-famed designers as Paul Poiret, Paquin, Doucet, Randintz, Calot and others whose names are equally well known to the Fashion World.

Lace coats of Irish Point or Baby Irish. Silk Battenberg, Irish Crochet, Embroidery Applique, Broadcloth and Satin Duchesse.

Costumes

Dressy costumes and demi-costumes for evening or afternoon wear are here in greater numbers, in broader varieties and prettier and more exclusive styles than we have ever before shown. White and all the soft, delicate evening colors are represented in Crepes de Chine, Chiffons, Radium and Louisine silks.

In the trimmings and decorations every modern idea has been taken advantage of, every new creation employed.

The showing is one that should not be missed by any woman—whether you care to purchase or not.

Tailored Suits

The Fall season brings with it a variety of pretty models in cloth tailored suits and each particular style has a following strong enough to insure a long and honored career.

There is the long coat—45 to 50 inches—in Paddock styles or tight fitting.

Short tight fitting jacket styles and plain or blouse Etons.

Some are severely plain tailor-mades, others trimmed and finished in a manner to satisfy every taste.

Materials are Broadcloths, Serges, Tweeds, Men's Suitings and Cheviots.

Black, Navy and Alice Blues, Plum, Wine, Gray and Greens in all the newest shadings.

Prices range from $17.50 to $115.00 and at every step between.

A charm about all this apparel that you will recognize at once—and appreciate—is its absolute exclusiveness. The styles we show will be found in no other shop in town, nor will they be duplicated by us.

Autumn Silks

Moires $1.00 Yd. and up

Moires of every kind will be prime favorites for autumn gowns, costumes and waists. They are shown in plain colors, figures, checks and plaids of every hue.

Prices begin at $1.00 a yd.

Handsome Plaids

Plaids of rich, heavy taffeta, satin Bengaline, Princess crepe and a dozen new loom effects are here in many novel and pretty color combinations and designs. Every fashion authority points to plaids as the coming leaders for Fall and Winter gowns and waists. Beautiful specimens may be had up from $1.00 a yard.

Reliable Black Taffetas

We carry a complete line of the famous

Bonnet Taffetas

All widths from 19 to 36 inches, and positively guarantee every yard.

Woolen Dress Goods

PANAMAS are again in the fore front of Fashion's march. They come in plain colors and fine soft shadow checks; styles eminently suitable for utility suits or for dressy occasions, according to the shade you may choose. Every color tone from white to black, 44 to 56 inches wide at:

$1.00, $1.25 AND $1.50 YD.

SCHOOL CLOTHS. A new line for tomorrow of fancy checks and plaids especially for misses' school frocks. Dark, rich colorings enlivened and beautified with bright reds, yellows and greens; 38 inches wide, yd., 48c.

"MORAVIN," the new cloth for the coming season, is one of the handsomest loom products we have ever seen. Light weight, soft, a perfect satin finish that will last, the proper weight for either coats or suits, all sponged and shrunk ready for the needle; every yard guaranteed. Twenty shades to pick from. 54 inches wide.

$3.00 A YARD.

MOHAIR PLAIDS, dust-proof and almost wear-proof. An even two dozen new styles for school dresses will make their initial bow tomorrow, 38 inches wide, yd., 50c.

News of Society—Gossip of Men and Women—Weddings, Parties, Dinners gable leadership of the president, Mrs. Alphonso Bell, the social had for it's object, the raising of funds to beautify the settlement of Bell by the planting of uniform shade trees along the streets and the provision of a public park. Mrs. Eliza Hollenbeck was a liberal patroness of the affair, and contributed toward the decorations and assisted in many other ways.

Pretty Girl is Feted.

Miss Maribel Tucker of Chicago has been the guest of Miss Anne Gates of West Thirty-sixth street for some time past, and during her visit has been graciously entertained. Thursday her hostess gave a jolly box party at the Belasco for her, after which the guests enjoyed a luncheon at Christopher's. The table was decked with a pleasing arrangement of white roses and great airy bows of satin ribbon, while pink shaded candelabra added much to the beauty of the effect. Places were marked with dainty hand-painted cards tied with pink ribbons. The fair guest of honor was toasted royally, but proved herself equal to the occasion by responding with:

"Here's to a bower of roses,
Each rose a drop of dew,
Each drop of dew,
A kiss, my dear, for you."

It was particularly apropos to the rose garden of girls present who included: Mrs. A. R. Smith, Miss Sadie Scovell, Miss Gertrude Bennett and Miss Maude Evans.

Miss Gertrude Bennett of South Alvarado street entertained on Wednesday afternoon with a luncheon for the same visitor. The table was graced with a cluster of pink roses and pink crepe paper formed an effective canopy, while pink shaded candelabra cast a softened glow over the scene. Hand-painted cards marked the places, which were laid for Miss Leila Von Ache, Miss Marian Porter, Miss Sadie Scovell, Miss Tucker and Miss Anne Gates.

MRS. E. J. RHOADES, whose untiring efforts made the lawn fete given at Bell last evening a grand success.

Society Interested.

Miss Grace Adele Freebey, who is to leave soon for the East to study music, is to give a farewell concert on the evening of October 4, and society women are much interested in the affair, as Miss Freebey is a talented pianist with a great ambition which will doubtless land her many triumphs in the near future. Women who are acting as patronesses for the affair are: Mrs. William John Scholl, Mrs. E. W. Gilmore, Mrs. E. L. Doheny, Mme. Ida Hancock, Mrs. George Allen Hancock, Miss Marie Mullen, Mrs. Motley Flint, Mrs. Cameron Erskine Thom, Mrs. Harry Andrews, Mrs. George A. Dobinson, Mrs. A. B. McCutcheon, Miss Chapman, Mrs. W. W. Neuer, Mrs. Rosalind Green Peasley, Mrs. Robert Wankowski and Mrs. Marion Welch.

Entertains Church Choir.

Miss Belle Martin of No. 165 Commonwealth avenue had as her guests on Friday evening members of the First M. E. Church choir, of which she is a member. Music and games formed the amusement for the evening, and those present were: Mr. and Mrs. J. B. Poulin, Mr. and Mrs. E. K. Green, Mr. and Mrs. H. H. Whitehead, Mesdames Showalter, Clark, Kellam, Raymond and Misses Ada Showalter, Leonia Kellam, June Nutting, Deckel, Gastrem, Peyro, Kerruish, and Messrs. Barnhart, Locks, Fulton, Charles Lamb and Anderson.

To Wed in Redlands.

Miss Amie Langworthy and Edward Alphonso Henry, whose engagement was recently announced, have chosen to be married at Redlands on Monday, a week from tomorrow.

Miss Gertrude Bowler of San Diego will serve as maid of honor, and Livingstone Henry, a brother of the groom, is to be best man. Miss Mildred Cox of Riverside, a cousin of the groom, is to act as flower girl. The ceremony is to take place at the home of Miss Langworthy's aunt and uncle, Mr. and Mrs. Eli Plummer of No. 248 Cajon street, and will be performed by Rev. Bruce of the Redlands Methodist Church. Miss Langworthy is a daughter of Mrs. Augusta Cox Langworthy and a niece of Mrs. George Hazard of this city.

Invitations Issued.

Invitations have been issued for the marriage of Miss Mabel Cronkhite, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Nelson Cronkhite of West Sixth street, to B. H. Miller of Buffalo, the ceremony to take place in the First Baptist Church on September 28.

Summering on Coast.

Mrs. D. Hambleton and Miss Anna Rhea Hambleton, who have been spending the summer with Mrs. A. O. Goodell of No. 2124 Central avenue, left on Saturday morning for the Grand Cañon of Arizona, from where they will continue their journey to their home in Atchison, Kan. Miss Hambleton is a talented girl and delighted Los Angeles people with her sweet voice.

Entertain Suttons.

Col. and Mrs. W. F. Seymour and their daughter Miss Merita Seymour have recently returned from Mexico and are occupying their home at Redondo. They are entertaining over Sunday, Miss May Sutton, the champion tennis player and her three sisters from Pasadena. Miss Seymour is also a tennis enthusiast and the set of girls enjoy each other immensely.

Spends Summer in South.

Miss Willodean Stirling of No. 1441 Orange Grove avenue, South Pasadena, is spending the summer in Atlanta, Ga., with friends. She has been visiting friends and relatives in the South and East for nearly a year but will return to her home about October 1. Miss Stirling has been the recipient of many social pleasures during her prolonged visit in her old home, which she has not visited since a little girl.

Wedding and Engagement.

This evening at 8 o'clock a pretty little wedding is to be solemnized in Burbank Hall, Miss Sadie Shapero becoming the bride of Simon Lewis, the ceremony being performed by Rev. Werner. The bride is to be attended by Misses Anna Weiner and Miss Fanny Strauss and Max Shapero and Morris Price will act as groomsmen.

After the wedding a feature of interest will be the announcement of the engagement of the brother of the bride, Max Shapero and Miss Anna Weiner, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Maurice Weiner of No. 1421 Los Angeles street. Miss Weiner and Mr. Shapero have chosen October 29, as their wedding date.

From Three Months' Trip.

Mr. and Mrs. C. B. Woodhead of Buena Vista street, returned recently with their four daughters from an extended Northern trip. They first visited Yellowstone Park and from there went to British Columbia and Alaska coming home by way of Portland, Seattle and Tacoma. They also visited San Francisco and Stanford and last week spent the time in their ranch at San Jacinto, where they had as guests Misses Sarah Patton, Mabel Poindexter and Pearl King.

Return Home.

Mr. and Mrs. L. J. Christopher have returned from a pleasant outing of three weeks, two of which were spent at Lake Tahoe, where Mrs. Christopher broke the record, catching more fish than any woman on the lake. Mr. Christopher did not have the good luck of his wife and had not a single bite. From Lake Tahoe they went to San Francisco, where they spent a week. Accompanying them on their trip was Father Beaudry of the Plaza Church.

For Mrs. Crawford.

Mrs. W. Charles Crawford of Sydney, Australia, who is visiting her mother, Mrs. Hugh J. Crawford of No. 1837 West Twenty-first street, was guest of honor on Friday evening at a whist party given by Mrs. Susie Chaffey of No. 1729 West Twenty-fifth street. A silver cologne bottle and framed picture were awarded as first prizes and score cards were ornamented with sketches of Dutch girls. The guests included: Mr. and Mrs. Hugh J. Crawford, Mr. and Mrs. Burwell A. Holmes, Mr. and Mrs. John Pawley, Mr. and Mrs. T. W. Crooke, Mr. and Mrs. Harry Thomas, Mrs. T. W. McCormick, Mrs. Percy Ross, Miss Mary Holmes, Miss Gladys Pawley, Mr. Daniels and Andrew Rose.

Next Wednesday evening Mr. and Mrs. R. K. Wilson of Lake street will entertain with a whist party for this same fair visitor and Thursday afternoon Miss Mary Holmes of No. 1118 South Grand avenue will be hostess at a similar party.

Hear Band Music.

Paul de Longpré entertained a party of friends on Thursday evening with a trip to Venice to hear the first rendition by Arend's fine band of the artist's march "Up San Juan Hill," and his descriptive piece the "Tic Tac of the Hill." The party went in two parlor cars and Mr. de Longpré was overwhelmed with an ovation from his friends. A party of friends of Mrs. Oliver P. Posey also went down on a private car to hear the first rendition of her newest ballad "Katy Dear."

To Elsinore Springs.

Mrs. Charles R. Drake accompanied by her three daughters, Misses Elizabeth and Pinita Drake and Miss Pearl Seeley, left the first of the week for Elsinore Springs to spend a few weeks.

At Portland Cathedral.

At the Portland Cathedral recently Miss Josephine Marie Daly, daughter of Mrs. Elizabeth Daly of this city, and Oscar Henry Regensberg of Chicago, were married, with Rev. McDivitt officiating.

Return from Trip.

Capt. and Mrs. T. W. T. Richards of No. 1939 South Union avenue, has returned, after a delightful northern trip, including Portland, Seattle, Tacoma, San Francisco and other points of interest along the way. Misses Eleanor and May Richards and Masters William and Jack Deman sons of Mr. and Mrs. W. H. Deman of Ellendale Place, accompanied the captain on his tour.

For Visitor.

Miss Sigler of No. 2800 Manitou avenue entertained on Friday afternoon in honor of Mrs. Shirley Christy, a musician of Phoenix, Ariz., who is a visitor here. The home was made attractive with flowers and greenery, while musical games and piano selections by Mrs. Christy added much to the pleasures of the afternoon. Mrs. Thomas Sloane and Miss Esterbrook also delighted the guests with vocal solos. Later refreshments were served and the afternoon was a most enjoyable one. Mrs. Christy is an accomplished musician and much admired in Arizona society for her talents and charm. She will remain in the city several weeks longer before returning to her home.

At Idyllwild.

Among recent arrivals at Idyllwild are Col. W. Dwight Wiman and family of Santa Barbara; Mrs. L. M. Stewart and Miss Grace McNeil of Pasadena, Rev. Arthur Evans and Mrs. Evans of Hollywood, Mr. and Mrs. W. W. Orcutt, Los Angeles; Mrs. A. J. Sherman, San Diego; Mr. and Mrs. E. P. Bryan, Miss Bryan and Miss Minnie Bryan, Los Angeles; Mr. and Mrs. W. E. Barnhart, Pasadena; Mr. and Mrs. G. L. Johnson, San Bernardino; Mr. and Mrs. M. F. Curtis of Pasadena; Mrs. C. C. Clarke, Altadena; Mr. and Mrs. C. J. Kubach, Los Angeles; Mrs. Henderson, Riverside; Mr. and Mrs. B. Beverly, Ocean Park; Dr. D. S. McCarthy, Los Angeles; Mr. J. T. Hanlon, Los Angeles; Miss Mary Crawford, Redlands; Miss Laura Waters, Imperial; Mr. and Mrs. L. Serrurier, Pasadena; Mrs. H. H. Partridge, Redlands; Mr. and Mrs. Frand Griffith, Los Angeles; Mr. S. C. Torrance and family, Los Angeles; Mr. W. A. Strong and Mr. Allen Hancock Los Angeles; Mr. and Mrs. I. Milbank and Master Lee Borden Milbank, Los Angeles.

Popular Girl to Wed.

Mr. and Mrs. George E. Loomis have issued invitations for the marriage of their daughter, Miss Mayme Loomis to William G. Howell, to be celebrated at the family residence on Washington street on Friday evening, September 29, at 8 o'clock.

Pretty Girls Visitors.

Miss Irma Gordon and Miss Willie Trow Foster of New Albany, Indiana, two pretty society girls of that place, are the guests of Mr. and Mrs. William Lacey of No. 1109 West Ninth street. They expect to remain through the winter with Mrs. Lacy and will doubtless be the objects of much social informality.

Philolethea Club.

As a preliminary to its sixth season of dances, the Philolethea Club entertained its own members Monday evening. Kramer's Hall was the scene of the gayety, but the crowd would hardly be recognized as that of a "Phil" dance, as there were more than one hundred square feet of floor space per couple. The object, aside from a good time, was to shake off any restiness that might have been acquired by the members during vacation. In this it was successful. When the dancers heard the airs that are to be popular this season played by Willey's Orchestra, they began to look forward to a pleasant winter. The Philolethea Club's season will open in earnest on the 13th of October.

New Secretary Arrives.

The members of the Young Woman's Christian Association are congratulating themselves on the arrival of a new secretary, in the person of Miss Grace Maxwell, a splendid young woman from Duluth, Minn. Miss Maxwell has had much experience and will doubtless prove an efficient worker. She is staying with her mother, Mrs. J. P. Maxwell, of No. 517 Bixel street, and is a sister of Mrs. Leon V. Shaw and Miss Beatrice Maxwell of this city.

MRS. SHIRLEY CHRISTY, a prominent musician and society woman of Phoen'x, Ariz., who is a visitor here.

On Friday the Y.W.C.A. enjoyed a jolly rally all day and the rooms were bright with gay yellow blossoms, while each member wore golden butterflies of tissue paper adorning her light gown. In the evening a reunion of the Bible study teachers was held and these bright girls discussed plans for making the study interesting and for giving originality to the work.

Kindergarten Party.

Mrs. James W. Creede of No. 455 East Twenty-eighth street entertained on Tuesday afternoon with a kindergarten party in honor of the sixth birthday of her little daughter, Muriel. The house was decorated throughout with flowers and ferns and the dining room, where dainty refreshments were served, was especially pretty in red and green. Each small guest received a tiny fan as a token of the occasion, and Mrs. O. T. Montgomery and Miss Elmendorf assisted the hostess in entertaining the small folk. Those present were: Lucile Helping, Ruth and Edith McIntosh, Hazel Montgomery, Marguerite Bell, Lucile Johnson, Muriel Creede, Helen Pritchard, Helen Hoening, Rollie Wallace, Harry Johnson, Llewellyn Pritchard, Eben Evans, Percy and Wallace Keith, Woolfred Keith and Warren Creede.

Musicians Return.

The Misses Grace Jeanette Smith and Jessie F. Smith, two prominent young musicians of this city, who have been delighting the Long Beach people with their talent through the summer, have returned home again, where they will receive their friends at No. 416 West Second street.

Visits Aunt.

Mrs. Emma A. Summers of California street has as her guest her niece, a pretty bright-eyed girl from Tennessee, with a soft Southern accent which is irresistible. She is Miss Mayme Clements of Trenton, Tenn., who expects to spend the summer in California with her aunt.

Return from Trip.

Mrs. Fred J. Osborne and Miss Florence Osborne of No. 1051 South Flower street have just returned from an enjoyable outing of two months. While away they have visited Portland, San Francisca., San José and other points of interest along the Coast.

Groom for Pueblo.

A quiet home wedding took place on Tuesday at the residence of the bride's parents, Mr. and Mrs. George Arthur Grant, No. 652 Lucas avenue, where Walter Ellison Bailey and Miss Nellie Grant were united. The groom came from Pueblo, Colo., where he holds a responsible position with an electric company. For several years the bride was a popular teacher and supervisor of arithmetic in the public schools of Pueblo. The officiating minister, Rev. John C. Hay, pastor of Hollywood Christian Church, is an old frined of the family. Mr. and Mrs. Bailey will be at home to their wide circle of friends in Pueblo after November 1.

NOTES AND PERSONALS.

Mr. and Mrs. Frederick Flint have gone to Long Beach for a month's stay in their summer cottage.

Mrs. H. W. Foster of No. 912 East Twenty-eighth street has returned home from an extended eastern trip, having visited all the large eastern cities.

Miss Emma Faulkner of No. 720 West Thirtieth street has returned from a stay of three weeks at Shasta Springs and other resorts in the northern part of the State.

Mr. and Mrs. Leon F. Moss started on an eastern tour last Thursday evening by the Santa Fé Limited. They expect to be absent several weeks, during which time they will visit all the principal cities of the East.

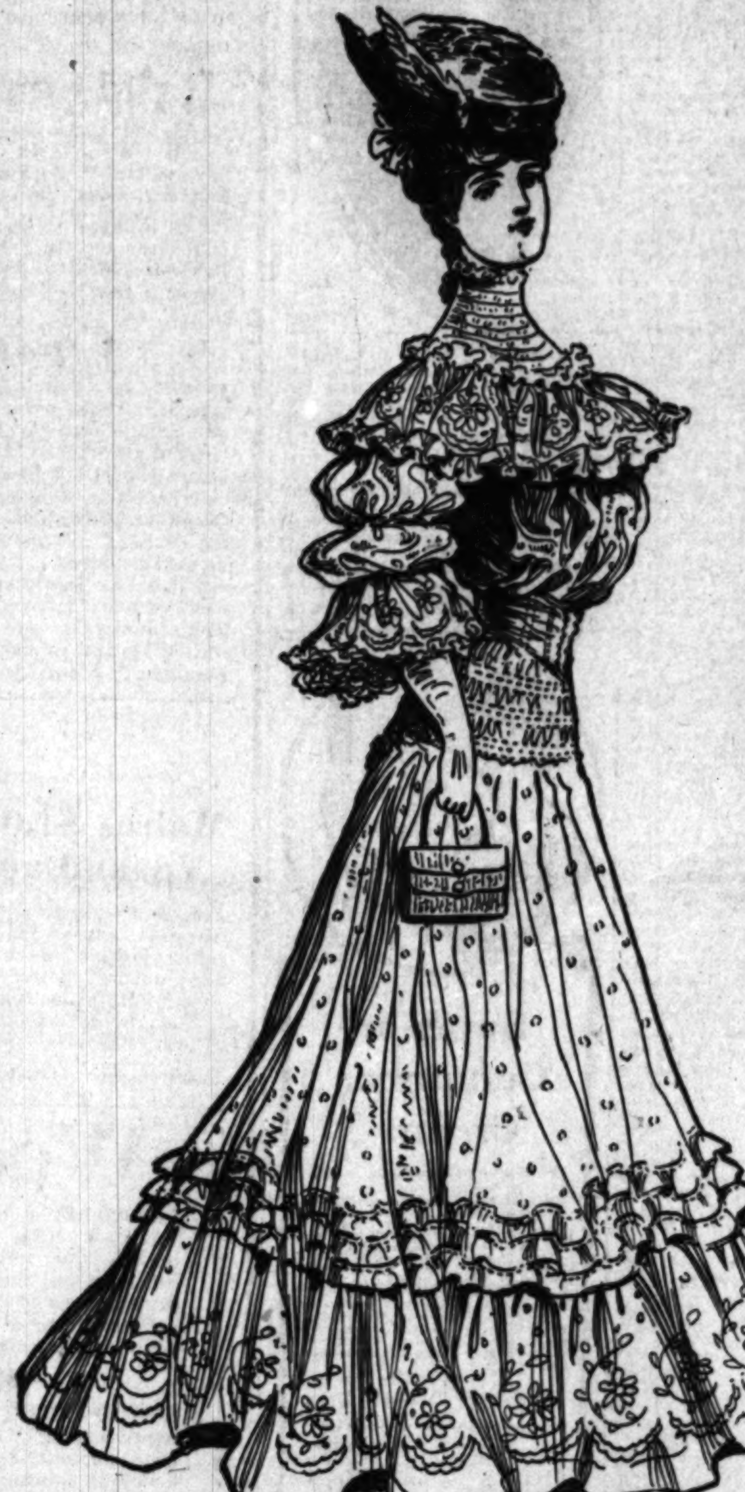
The Debut of Paris Robes



The Paris Cloak and Suit House proudly takes Pre-eminence by its imposing Autumn display of Women's Costumes. We challenge comparison for elegance, quality and worth. OUR FASHION SHOW OPENS FORMALLY ON MONDAY morning, continues Monday evening, concludes on Tuesday. Flowers, palms, music and illumination will greet the ladies of Los Angeles, who are bidden to our opening.

Souvenirs To every purchaser of a New Fall Fashion Suit or Coat at the Paris Opening, will be presented a handsome Patent Leather or Russian Leather Pocketbook, in black or choice of four colors to match the gown. This valuable offering was selected expressly for this function by our Mr. Goldberg, upon his recent visit to New York, and is bestowed with his compliments to his women customers. The accompanying illustration depicts the souvenir as well as sketches one of the Paris House's superb and striking novelties for the Fall and Winter Season.

Invites Admiration

The most fastidious, the most critical, the most difficult to please will genuinely admire and unstintingly praise our Fall Fashion Exposition. We proffer for inspection the creme de la creme of high art in Paris, London and New York tailoring. Our demi-costumes impressively evince the conceptions of a master designer, elaborated by the trained hand of the skillful craftsman. Our advance models betoken the royal favor of Queen Fashion, and are to be studied as masterpieces of art.

Our Exclusive Models

The Paris Cloak and Suit House is not confined to conventionalities. It dares to innovate. Our Evening Costumes are not duplicated on the Coast. Our Opera Cloaks are distinctively elegant. Our Coats are universally "good form."

A Word About Our Values

Visitors on our opening days will find it to their profit to be first to choose our rare particular novelties for wear, while we shall be gainers by having The Paris garments early displayed to appreciative public gaze. Superior materials, make and fit need no premium. Our souvenirs are merely the compliments of the season to our many friends.

While adding greatly to top-notch excellencies we have not overlooked the staple and conventional every-day wearables.

"High Quality, High Art; but not High Cost," is our motto.

Millinery Opening

Millinery opening next Thursday, Friday and Saturday—and it will be a showing worth coming many miles to see.

The greatly increased space that our Millinery Department will be occupying at that time will permit a much more extensive showing than we have ever before been able to make.

And, needless to say, we will have a stock that will do justice to the magnificent appointments now nearing completion.

Fashionable Autumn Apparel

The new season's Suits, Costumes and Coats have a spontaneity and youthfulness of make which gives to each an individuality that must impress you on your first viewing. The perfection of fabric and ideal touches of fashion evinced in our fall apparel will undoubtedly afford you considerable satisfaction.

And you cannot help being impressed with the great varieties shown in moderately priced garments as well as the extremely rich sorts for which this house is famous throughout the southwest. All of our Broadway window frontage will be given over tomorrow to a display of elegant Evening Gowns, Opera Wraps, Evening Coats and Waists—unquestionably the most magnificent garments ever displayed in this section.

But the Window display can only HINT of the wealth of outer apparel this recently-enlarged Suit Department now contains.

Evening Coats $25 to $250 34-inch coats of white broadcloth, lined throughout with white satin and elaborately trimmed with silk braid for $25.

Then, by easy price-steps, up to $250—which gets a magnificent three-quarter length coat of champagne broadcloth, lined with white satin and profusely trimmed with rich pineapple lace, appliqued and set in; front and Dolman sleeves edged with maline ruche.

Art Goods

No mid-summer dullness in this Art Department of ours—the steady streams of new things that have been pouring in on us for weeks past have kept business going at the Christmas-time pitch, almost. And, speaking of Christmas, it's not a bit too early to begin gift-gathering—dozens of far-sighted people around here every day, choosing gifts "while it can be done leisurely, and get it off the mind," as they say.

A word today of some pictures and pillow tops that just came in.

Many beautiful pictures in 7x9-inch frames of one-inch gilt moulding and with gilt mat—specially priced at	35c
Poster Pictures—"The Yachting Girl," "The Hunting Girl," "The Driving Girl" and various equally popular subjects prettily tinted and suitably framed, at	50c
New Pillow Tops—some stamped, some finished—scroll designs in shaded greens and black; violets on shaded backgrounds; new arrangements in both double and single roses; conventional designs in appliques and for heavy silk embroidery—and many other new patterns, at	65c
Clean-up of odd pillow covers at a mere fraction of their former prices: Excellent materials, stamped in both floral and conventional designs; well tinted—requiring very little work to make a very pretty pillow. 50c and 65c values at	12½c

Dress Shields

25c to 40c Values 15c

Dress shields of the best quality stockinet have an established value all over the United States—25c to 40c a pair.

It is only by some very unusual happenings in the wholesale market that we were able to get twenty gross of them at a price that lets us sell them at fifteen cents a pair.

Sizes 1, 2, 3, 4 and 5.

(Notion Dept. Left Aisle)

Insertions

35c to 75c Values 25c

Found an importer who was overstocked with 3 to 6-inch insertions.

Took six thousand six hundred yards of them at practically half regular wholesale rates.

Tomorrow the whole collection goes on sale at twenty-five cents a yard, although most of them are well worth 50c to 75c. All made on high-grade cloths—cambrics, Swiss and nainsook; all daintily worked, many in the English eyelet designs now so much in demand for shirt waist fronts.

3 to 6-inch widths, 25c a yd.

(Main Floor, Rear of Right Aisle)

Evening Gowns $50 to $250 Evening dress of blue crepe de chine, with taffeta silk drop; yoke and cuff of rich lace, $50.

Dozens of them in reseda green, light blue, tans, invisible checks, white and champagne, at $67.50, $75, $100 and so on up to $250, which gets a wondrously beautiful creation of white taffeta, elaborately embroidered by hand, embellished with wide panels of fine lace and made over white taffeta and chiffon.

Luxurious opera capes at $125 to $250.

Linens

With an almost unlimited outlet, and the ability to take advantage of every buying chance where spot cash is the main consideration, it would be strange if we didn't often pick up big lots of staple linens at less than usual prices. This shows how such purchases benefit you:

72-inch satin damask of good weight and excellent quality, in scroll and neat figured patterns, $1.25 grade at	$1.00
The $1.75 grade of satin damask in 72-inch width—variety of handsome patterns—yard	$1.35
23-inch Irish linen napkins in various handsome floral designs, reduced from $3 a doz. to	$2.25
Full-sized bed spreads in Marseilles patterns, neatly hemmed, reduced from $1.35 to	$1.10
18-inch checked glass linen toweling in both red and blue-and-red borders, the 12½c quality at, yard	10c
18-inch damask crash—a splendid linen for roller towels, reduced from 17c a yd. to	12½c
23x45-inch bleached Turkish towels of good weight, neatly hemmed, 35c quality	25c
19x40-inch hemstitched huck towels with jacquard borders and allover figures, reduced from 35c to	25c

Upholstery

Rare beauty at slight cost

Coziness—even an appearance of elegance—isn't necessarily costly. The perfection of modern color printing makes it possible to imitate many of the extremely rich imported fabrics so closely that many people who come for the costly originals finally choose the inexpensive copies.

NEW CURTAIN MADRAS—soft, serviceable and really beautiful fabrics in plain cream grounds, self figured, and art designs in rich colorings—50c to $1.50 a yard.
NEW ARBOR CLOTH—A crisp, beautiful fabric with handsome floral designs in red, blue, green, yellow, etc., suitable for bed draperies as well as curtains; easily laundered; yd. wide	25c
NEW DRAPERY NETS—Fancy meshes in white, Arabian and green; heavy and rich in effect; very durable, yd.	50c
NEW TAPESTRY CRETONNES—Soft tan grounds with Art and floral designs; many colors; yard wide	25c

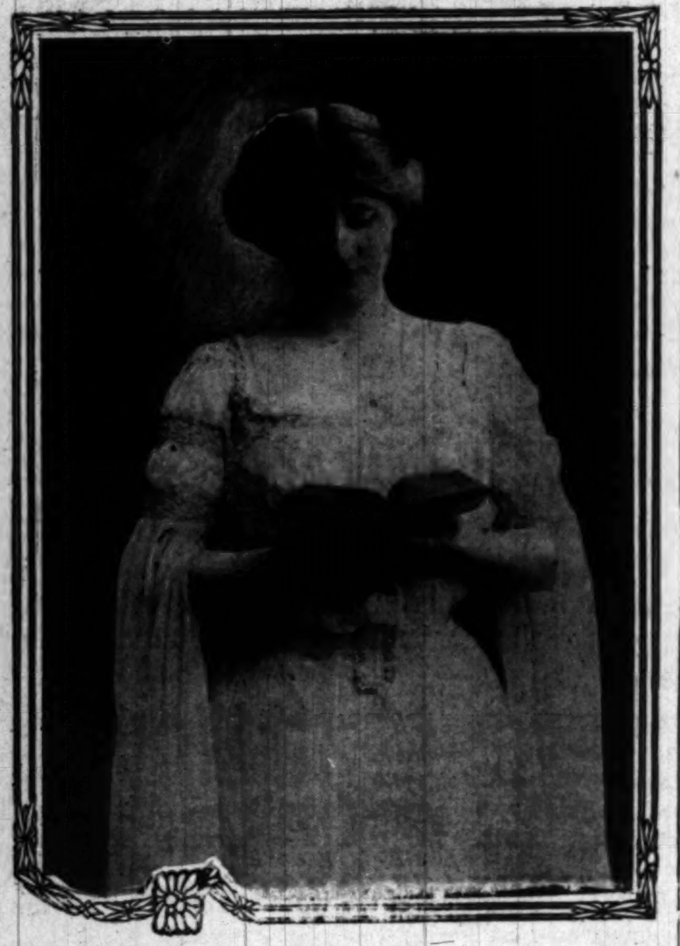
PUBLIC STILL DOTES ON MARY ANDERSON.

[STAFF CORRESPONDENCE OF THE TIMES.]



The latest portrait of Mary Anderson.

LONDON, August 26.—That Mary Anderson, as an affectionate public still calls Madame Antonio de Navarro, has lost little of her popularity since her retirement from the stage years ago, has been shown by the hearty congratulations that have been showered upon her from all quarters on the birth of a daughter last week. And the photograph of her here reproduced, which was taken recently, shows, too, that she still retains most of the good looks which long procured for her pictures a bigger sale than those of any other actress. She leads the life that most conduces to the preservation of youthful charms. In the Old-World village of Broadway, Worcestershire, she has a delightful home, in the midst of a colony of literary and artistic celebrities, and there she spends most of her time. If she cared for that sort of thing her social triumphs might be as conspicuous as those she achieved on the stage. But the gay world of fashion, for which less favored women make bankrupts of themselves physically and pecuniarily, has no attractions for her.

It is now over fifteen years since she retired from the stage, and "in spite of all temptations" she has remained true to her resolution not to return to it again. What the resolution has cost her in cold cash represents a sum so enormous that it would challenge credibility. After she had been off the stage for several years, she was offered a salary of [illegible]000 a week for a thirty weeks' [illegible] in America, but she declined it. There is little doubt that if she should choose to act again, any time within the next ten years, she could pick up a fortune within a few months, for, fickle where most of its favorites are concerned, the public has always been true to Mary Anderson. But it is not likely she will ever do it. Though she cannot be induced to use her gifts to make money for herself—of which she has all she needs—she has no such scruples where the cause of charity is concerned. True, she never acts or recites now, but since her retirement she has studied singing, for she discovered herself to be the possessor of a magnificent contralto voice many years ago. This gift she uses freely not only for the delight of her friends but to assist those who are in need.

THE PEACE TREATY AND "CENTRAL" GIRL.

Negotiations at Portsmouth Made the Young Woman of International Importance—How the President Followed the Course of Events.

[SPECIAL CORRESPONDENCE OF THE TIMES.]

PORTSMOUTH (N. H.) Sept. 16 1905.—"If the conference of Portsmouth had occurred three-quarters of a century ago," declared an English newspaper correspondent, shortly after he had flashed across the seas word that the treaty of peace between Russia and Japan had been signed, "the negotiations would never have been brought to a successful conclusion. Why? Simply because it is very improbable that the envoys of Russia and Japan could have agreed of themselves, and if President Roosevelt had been compelled to depend on postal facilities he could not have kept sufficiently in touch with the negotiators to smooth over the rough places, offer conciliatory suggestions at critical points when the conference seemed about to come to an abrupt termination, and finally to bring it to a triumphant conclusion."

Here the girl at "Central" looms up as a figure of international importance. How many times she connected the wires between Portsmouth and Oyster Bay, so that the President could get in detail the latest news of the conference from Assistant Secretary of State Peirce and issue his own instructions and suggestions for the conference, will probably never be known. Certainly "Central" will not tell. But could the historian of future years summon to his aid the details of those telephonic conferences, his work would probably run through more editions than the most popular of modern novels.

Modern telephonic methods, as evidenced by the facility with which the news of the peace conference was spread, affords a striking contrast with methods of circulating the news in vogue not so many decades ago. In the War of 1812 Jackson fought the battle of New Orleans four days after the peace had been agreed on in Paris, and it was several weeks thereafter before the American and British armies in the field knew that the war was over. Two minutes after the Treaty of Portsmouth was signed on the afternoon of September 5, President Roosevelt, in Oyster Bay, almost four hundred miles away by railroad, was informed of the fact over the long distance telephone, and before midnight the news had been flashed to the remotest corners of the earth.

By means of the telephone, Secretary Peirce was able to act as eyes and ears for President Roosevelt during the conference. Through Mr. Peirce the President knew, even before the envoys themselves (because he was in the confidence of both sides) when success began to crown his efforts and the tide was setting irresistibly for peace. During those latter days of August, when even to the watchful correspondents at Portsmouth the outlook was very black indeed, the President, in distant Oyster Bay, was so close to the heart of the situation that he merely awaited the glad tidings.

The crowd of correspondents representing newspapers printed in every considerable language on the globe were seated in the Hotel Wentworth, shortly after noon on August 29 gloomily discussing what the envoys might be doing in the navy yard and predicting a speedy and disastrous break-up of the conference, when the telephone bell jingled. One of the correspondents went to the receiver listlessly, and others scarcely deigned to interrupt their conversation.

"Hello!" said a voice, "Mr. Korostovetz, the Russian Secretary, wishes to speak to a correspondent."

"We are all here, Mr. Korostovetz," replied the correspondent. Then, turning to his colleagues, he said: "Mr. Korostovetz will make a statement."

Daily, Mr. Korostovetz had telephoned the "report of the session" and daily the "report" had proved merely a polite generality, of no significance. Pads and paper appeared slowly. No one hoped for anything important, but in an instant the correspondents were scribbling like mad in over a score of languages. This is what the correspondent at the telephone repeated from Mr. Korostovetz's dictation:

"In the session of the morning of August 29 the conference arrived at a complete accord on all questions and decided to proceed to the elaboration of a treaty. The conference then adjourned until 3 o'clock in the afternoon."

In a minute that bulletin was being flashed around the world. President Roosevelt had already been informed and Secretary Peirce telephoned him the details. It is an odd fact that Oyster Bay knew of the peace long before the sleepy little village of Kittery that clusters about the navy yard where the envoys met.

The telephone was of further service in facilitating intercourse between the envoys of the warring nations. In the Hotel Wentworth, in Newcastle, where the envoys were housed, Baron Komura and the Japanese party had rooms on the second floor above the ballroom, while Mr. Witte and the Russians had their suite in the hotel annex. Communication between the two parties was necessary, but paying calls involved all sorts of delicate questions of courtesy precedence, and sending oral or written messages was a clumsy method, involving all sorts of possibilities for misunderstandings. The telephone solved the problem in simple American fashion. Of course there were instruments in both suites, and all the envoys or the secretaries had to do when they had an appointment to arrange, or other business to talk over, was simply to jingle the little bell. A tremendous amount of bowing and scraping and red tape was thus dispensed with.

The importance of the telephone at the conference led to humorous complications, too. One day some of the correspondents were loitering by a newspaper stand when Baron Rosen, the Russian envoy, stepped into a telephone booth close at hand, carelessly leaving the door ajar. Of course none of the correspondents were eavesdroppers, but everyone who had seen Baron Rosen enter the booth suddenly found business to take him over to that newspaper stand, and all were on the tiptoe of excitement when the Baron called up a number in far away New York. Then they heard him say:

"Hello! Is this Blank's cigar store? I am Baron Rosen at Portsmouth. Yes, Rosen. I want to know how soon those 2000 cigarettes I ordered several days ago will arrive."

The crowd of correspondents melted away quickly, and there was a twinkle in the Baron's eye as he left the booth.

By telephoning some 340 miles for cigarettes Baron Rosen demonstrated that he has been Russian Ambassador long enough to become pretty thoroughly Americanized. The telephone is too much of a luxury abroad for any real foreigner to think of using the instrument for ordinary long distance business, and it is only here in America that we take the wonders of the telephone as a matter of course. Probably Alexander Graham Bell had never better cause to be satisfied with his invention as a servant of humanity than when the Peace of Portsmouth was successfully concluded.

The Greeley Campaign.

"Those of us who went to the Liberal Republican convention in Cincinnati in 1872, though we were the warm personal friends of Horace Greeley, had not the remotest intention of nominating him for President," said Col. Archie M. Bliss, former Congressman from Brooklyn, at the Arlington. "In fact, his nomination was a surprise, for the leaders of the Liberal movement had decided to nominate either Charles Francis Adams or David Davis of Illinois.

"The idea of the New Yorkers was to give Mr. Greeley a complimentary vote, but once his name was broached his boom began to spread like wildfire, and there was a stampede of delegates to him that was irresistible. I well remember that Schurz, who presided over the convention, was deeply chagrined at the turn of affairs, and that he was reluctant to put the motion to make Greeley's selection unanimous.

"The present generation knows how miserable a failure the campaign was, and that the grand old editor of the Tribune died of a broken heart; but there are thousands who do not know that if the election had been held in August, Horace Greeley would in all probability have been President of the United States. It looked at that time as though he were going to make a whirlwind sweep of the country, and the Regular Republicans were scared out of their wits. I remember how my now deceased friend, ex-Sheriff Al Daggett, with whom I had made a bet of $2000 on the issue of the election, came to me and offered $1000 to be released. I told him no; that Mr. Greeley was a sure winner, and I wanted the $2000. The fates willed otherwise, and I was the one who had to pay."—[Washington Post.

THE AUTOPIANO!

This wonderful instrument is the combination of a high grade piano with a perfected inside player, making one instrument no larger than an ordinary piano. The keyboard of the piano has not been changed, and can be played at any time in the ordinary manner. There exists absolutely nothing musically beyond its reach.

Danderine

Grew This Hair

AND WE CAN

PROVE IT.

Little Frances Marie Knowlton is the daughter of Dr. E. W. Knowlton, the discoverer of this great hair-growing remedy, and her beautiful hair was grown wholly by the use of this great tonic.

This little girl had no more hair than the average child before using Danderine, while now she has the longest and most beautiful head of golden hair ever possessed by a child of her age in the world.

Danderine makes the scalp healthy and fertile and keeps it so. It is the greatest scalp fertilizer and therefore the greatest hair-producing remedy ever discovered. It is a natural food and a wholesome medicine for both the hair and scalp. Even a 25c. bottle of it will put more genuine life in your hair than a gallon of any other hair tonic ever made.

year, when I was in out to find the birthplace of the discoverer of my country. It's in the old part of the town, you know, buried among the narrow, measly little streets. I asked a shopkeeper about it, but he looked blank and shook his head. 'Cristofo Colombo?' No, he had never heard of such a person; he was sure there was no one in Genoa by that name. And this was within a stone's throw of the huge monument erected to Columbus. Such crass ignorance seemed impossible, incredible—but it was true."

"I've known," the Rambler began.

"Wait!" Lucius interrupted. "I haven't finished yet. Hearken to the rest of my weird story. That evening, as I was telling of my adventure to my amused friends, the landlord of the small hostelry at which we were stopping listened to it all at a respectful distance. Though we were laughing uproariously about it, he missed the point of the joke entirely. Presently he came up and modestly suggested that perhaps he could help me out in my search for the house of Colombo. He had never heard of Cristofo Colombo, and didn't believe there was any such man in Genoa, but he knew of a Pasquale Colombo who lived a short distance up the street. Might Pasquale be the man I was looking for?"

The Rambler smiled, but he made no other comment.

"Well, do you believe this unbelievable story?" Lucius demanded.

"Certainly. Why not? I've met English-speaking people, people who could read and write, who never heard of Shakespeare—though, to be sure, it was not in Stratford, but alas! in America."

PROMINENT PERSONS.

Rev. S. Sarasola, of the Belen College Observatory, Havana, Cuba, is visiting Georgetown College, Washington.

Mrs. Phoebe Hearst, widow of Senator Hearst, of California, has sold her interest in the big Chihuahua ranch, in Mexico.

A telephone has been installed in the Papal apartments in the Vatican. Pius X did not take kindly to this innovation at first, but has found it entirely necessary.

John W. Alexander is to receive $175,000 for his mural paintings for the Carnegie Institute at Pittsburgh. They are to be finished before Founder's Day, November 5, 1906.

A. S. Barnes, of Elkins, W. Va., is, in point of service, the oldest railway postal clerk in the service of this government. He was born in Connellsville, Pa., and has served under every President since Lincoln.

Sir Patrick Manson, physician and medical adviser to the English colonial office, has arrived in San Francisco, where he is to deliver a series of lectures on tropical diseases before the Lane Hospital.

William Pinkney Whyte, ex-Governor of Maryland, is now 81 years of age, and able both mentally and physically. He has been Controller of the Treasury, Attorney-General, Governor, United States Senator, and Mayor of Baltimore.

Evans Holbrook, a successful lawyer in Chicago, is to become instructor in the law department of the University of Michigan from which institution he was expelled as a student several years ago for kidnaping the toastmaster of his freshman class.

It is an ancient custom of the House of Lords to preserve duly "docketed" places in the cloakroom for young peers awaiting their coming of age. There is a place reserved for the baby Marquis of Donegal against the arrival of his twenty-first birthday.

The Grand Duchess Olga of Russia is known as the "The Princess of Peace." She is the Czar's youngest sister, and is said to have influenced him considerably in the recent peace negotiations. She is twenty-four years old, and was married four years ago to Prince Peter, Duke of Oldenburg, a distant cousin.

President Loubet will be the first Chief of the Third Republic to retire under normal conditions at the completion of his term. Thiers resigned, so did MacMahon, and, though M. Grévy completed one term, he had to quit office before the expiration of his second. Carnot was murdered. Casimir-Perier left the Elysée in disgust, and Félix Faure's career was cut short by his sudden death.

Prof. George Trumbull Ladd, recently invited by the Imperial Education Society to help the cause of education in Japan, has for years been known as the champion of Japan among American university professors, having made two important lecture trips to the island empire, and having brought to this country a considerable number of Japanese students and teachers, of whom Yale has had the great majority.

Although bred a Quaker, Mrs. Hetty Green says it does not matter to her what the denomination is as long as the attendants keep the commandments. "When I went to Quaker school," she says, "they used to make us eat at the next meal whatever we had left on our plates. The directors said that if the rich girls did not learn to economise there would be no money left with which to educate the poor girls. My Quaker simplicity is the reason folks call me 'mean.'"

A French lady, Mlle. Morel of Lyons, has been one of the members of the first party to climb Mount Cervin this year. The ascent was made from Breuil, and the descent to Zermatt, and lasted from 8 a.m. on July 20 to 1:30 p.m. on July 21. From the Italian cabin to the summit the difficulties were very considerable, owing to snow covering the ridges and rendering it impossible to use the cords. The destruction during the winter of the rope ladder under the Italian summit caused the passage to require great exertion. Two hours were required to pass the Tyndall Peak.

IN THE BIG INDUSTRIES.

Stock Raising in Mexico.

Amid general prosperity, the cattle business in Mexico is receiving a large measure of attention. Conditions this year have been among the best ever known. Stock have done well in almost every part of the country. There is a steady improvement in the quality of the herds. Many of the American colonists are going into the cattle business, and have brought down fine animals with them to breed with the average Mexican stock. The great question now is the opening of a trans-Atlantic trade. Mexico is in a position to supply the markets of the world an enormous number of cattle every year. Her ranges are not at present anywhere near fully stocked. But to compete with the producers of other lands heavier cattle must be raised. The movement among breeders is now steadily in this direction. Packing-house industries are also likely to be established in the near future.

British West Indian Cotton.

The experimental work being carried on in the British West Indies with a view to the establishment of a cotton-growing industry on a commercial scale, is favored by the circumstance that this class of cultivation is not new to the islands. Therefore extremely rapid progress has been made. Thus the area under cotton during the season 1904-5 is estimated at 14,000 acres, as compared with 4000 acres in 1903, and only 400 acres in 1902. Soil, climate, and labor conditions are alike favorable, and a very fine staple is being produced. Of course, after all, the available acreage is but limited. But the West Indies promise to be the first place in the British colonial empire where the United States will meet with anything like appreciable competition. Our present position is evidenced by the fact that of the 2,775,000 tons of cotton grown all over the world, this country's share is 2,217,000. To show Great Britain's dependence on us for the raw material it is only necessary to state that her annual consumption is no less than 811,000 tons.

Perfume from Pepper.

Tabasco pepper beans are being put to a new use. It has been found that an entirely new perfume of a very delightful odor can be extracted from them, and it is expected that this article will eventually have a high commercial value. Furthermore an oil is being obtained from the peppers that is believed to have valuable medicinal properties. Tabasco pepper is mainly grown in Mexico. Nearly the whole of the shipments come first to the United States, whence the condiment is distributed all over the world.

Lighting up the Alps.

Advices from the Grindelwald, Switzerland, say that much interest has been taken in the working of the searchlight just established at the Eigerwand station of the new Jungfrau Railway. It is one of the most powerful lights in the world, being $5,000,000 nominal candle power. Every evening the immense beam is swung about the heavens, and distant peaks are one after another illuminated in the most startling fashion. Occasionally the light is turned down into the village, and then the hotel gardens stand out as clear in every detail as if in broad sunlight. The device succeeds very well in attracting the attention of all visitors to the railway and the new station just opened up at Eismeer; every day the little electric trains going up in the tunnel are crowded. A form of suspended railway is under construction up the side of the Wetterhorn.

The Useful Fan Motor.

Although the uses of small motors are legion, says the Electric World and Engineer, scarcely a week goes by in which some new application is not made by progressive consumers of electricity. The fan motor is no exception, and the energetic efforts of central station and supply men long ago turned this convenient device to good account regardless of the season of the year. The use of the fan motor in keeping window panes clear from frost is now an old story, and the up-to-date photographer discovered not long ago that the process of drying plates can often be cut from several hours to twenty or thirty minutes by the use of the device as an evaporation accelerator. At the Cape Cod naval wireless telegraph station the Leyden jar chamber containing the spark gap is fitted with a 65-volt fan motor which extracts the oxidized air from the apparatus to prevent excessive oxidation, and in the lecture tables of the most modern chemical laboratories found in educational institutions are installed gratings through which the fumes of chlorine and other irritating gases are drawn by fan motors at the other end of the connecting ducts. Autopsy tables are readily ventilated in the same general way. The Italian fruit dealer has now taken up the electric fan for out-of-door work, and with a few ribbon steamers attached it serves a most useful purpose in keeping flies, other insects and dust away from the fruitstand, at a cost of probably not over $2 per month in the warmest weather.

MEN AND THINGS OVER THE SEAS.

Scientists in the Jungle.

One striking sign of the ever growing smallness of the world is afforded by the spectacle of the British association, the great representative organization of scientific men in the United Kingdom, holding its annual meeting this year at the Zambesi Falls. Papers were read at Cape Town and other South African cities, but the final destination of the big party of learned travelers was the mighty cataract that surpasses both in length and in height America's own beloved Niagara. Was there present at the gathering the shade of Livingstone, the first white man to gaze upon "the smoke that sounds," as the falls are picturesquely called by the natives? Cecil Rhodes died without beholding this greatest of natural wonders in the domain that came under the spell of his magnetic influence. But that the soul of the great empire builder goes marching on is shown by the fact that the British Association arrived at the falls in a train de luxe, equipped with cars containing dining-room, kitchen, bathroom, bedrooms, lavatories, storeroom, etc., and crossed the Zambesi River on the new suspension bridge, after traversing over 1600 miles of the southern stretch of the Cape to Cairo Railway. But the members of the party did not stray far from the railway tracks. There are still lions around!

A Corner in Forest Trees.

Publishers are taking to the woods, not in the sense of making holiday or seeking safety from irate authors dissatisfied over their royalties. They are out after wood pulp for the manufacture of paper, and are cornering all supplies of the necessary raw material in sight. Recently the Harmsworth Brothers, England's most enterprising newspaper men, acquired a great tract of timber in Newfoundland. Now the book publishers have been following this example, a London group, with a capital behind them of $5,000,000, having purchased a million and a half acres of pulp lands in the same colony.

Justice to Gen. Cronje.

A little story is told in the columns of a London journal about General Cronje, the doughty old warrior who was captured by the British at Paardeberg, and who last year became known personally to Americans through his association with the Boer war spectacle at the St. Louis World's Fair. There was a good deal of difference of opinion over the propriety of a national hero on the field of war taking part in a public show, and turning the incidents of a distinguished, if finally unfortunate, career, to meretricious account. On the whole it may be said that public opinion condemned General Cronje for the part he played. The truth, however, now comes out. When Cronje returned after his two years' captivity in St. Helena, there was no welcome for him among the Boer leaders. In his joy of homecoming he had fraternized—peace being now declared—with his brother, who had lent the weight of his influence on the British side to end the unhappy war. This act sealed Cronje's fate so far as his former brother officers was concerned. He was ignored, refused all help to restore his ruined farm, openly insulted by having the cold shoulder of contempt turned to him in public. Only then did he entertain the proposal to come to the United States. The venture with which he identified himself happily proved a financial success, and the old lion of the veldt will have all his simple wants provided for during the rest of his days. The real reason why he has made no move to return to South Africa is now revealed. Cronje himself has never spoken one word upon the subject of his humiliation, but, to put him right at last before the world, his comrade in the Boer spectacle, Captain Lewis of the Canadian Scouts, formerly his enemy in war, has let the world know the truth about "this simple-minded, religious, patriotic, but sadly misunderstood old man."

Argentina's Capital.

The population of Buenos Ayres has reached the respectable total of one million. The city fathers are to celebrate the event by a gala evening at the opera, illuminations and decorations in the streets, laying the foundation stone of a city monument, and by voting six and a half million dollars for city improvements. Less enthusiasm is exhibited in an editorial in one of the great dailies, which draws attention to the proportion of city to that of rural population. Thus, New York has a population equal to 5 per cent. of the total national one; that of Berlin is 4 per cent.; Paris encloses 10 per cent. of the total French population, while the city of Buenos Ayres has within its walls no less than 20 per cent. of the total Argentine population, the remainder being spread over an area of 715,000,000 acres, or one-third of the total area of the United States. "This is not an occasion for rejoicing," says the editor, "but one for sackcloth and ashes." Nevertheless, the gay and careless citizens of Buenos Ayres, proud of their beautiful city, make festive preparations to celebrate the event.

Pax Brittannica.

After twenty-nine months spent in Persia, Afghanistan and Beluchistan a party of British officers have returned to India. They have been engaged on what is known as the Seistan Arbitration Commission, appointed to settle a frontier dispute between Persia and Afghanistan. Seistan is the province of Persia that lies nearest to Afghanistan. The task of demarcating the frontier line definitely, and marking it with permanent boundary pillars of stone, each one visible from its neighbor, was amicably accomplished. The commission has brought back a vast amount of information, (together with a splendid collection of photographs) about a strange and unfamiliar corner of the Orient. Incidentally, part of its work was to improve the trade route through Baluchistan between India and Southern Persia, a distance of 368 miles from frontier to frontier. This has now been done, in the sense both of road building and insuring the safety of travelers. In the latter work, so successful was the commission in securing the guarantees of local chiefs that now any solitary individual, European or Oriental, can traverse the route without hindrance, molestation or danger of any kind. Yet the country from time immemorial has been one of brigandage, tribal fighting and fierce religious fanaticism, so that every caravan up to now has had to travel under armed escort.

PEOPLE OF THE COAST.

C. L. Chrisman, the greatest bean grower of Ventura county, having 3000 acres of lima beans under cultivation, has been attending the great fair at Portland.

A. J. Pillsbury, secretary of the State Board of Examiners, is to take up the work of investigating public institutions in other States, to bring better methods to California.

George Storkman of Lake county is puzzling himself to know where a certain goose came from that he killed on the lake last week. A large nugget of gold was found in its crop.

Four Wilson sisters met at the Lewis and Clark Exposition after a separation of forty-two years. They were Mrs. Mary Clemens, Mrs. Jane Hoffman, Mrs. E. Boomers and Mrs. F. M. Fritz.

Henry J. Crocker, president of the California Raisin Growers' Association, has attended an important convention of the growers at Fresno and signed the pact which ensures fair prices for another year.

L. P. Prichard and family have returned to Pasadena from an extended eastern trip. He states that never in his experience has he seen so many people who announce their intention to come to Pasadena.

R. H. Lachmund of Stanford University was unanimously elected president of the senior class, being the only candidate nominated for the position. He registered from Clinton, Iowa. He has been prominent in university theatricals.

Dr. W. B. McGill, who for sixteen years has been a Methodist medical missionary to Korea, has arrived at Redlands, where he is accompanied by his wife and children. He criticizes the overbearing attitude of Japanese officials at Seoul.

President David Starr Jordan of the Stanford University has returned from an absence of three months in the East and in Europe. The duties of the presidency have been fulfilled by Vice-President John Casper Cranner, head of the department of geology and mining.

Charles Templeton Crocker, son of the late Charles Frederick Crocker, has come into possession of his portion of his father's estate, amounting to the snug sum of $5,000,000. He is a grandson of Charles Crocker, who with C. P. Huntington, Leland Stanford and Mark Hopkins built the Central Pacific Railroad.

"I beg your pardon," the clerk replied. "The 15-cent ones are on the other counter."—[New York World.

A Tip from the Bench.

"When Judge McCay was on the bench for the northern district of Georgia, the attorneyship of which the President has offered Representative Carter Tate," said a Georgia representative, "a young lawyer secured the attention of the judge and told him that he wished a postponement of a case in which he was to appear for the defendant. The case was one of simple moonshining, but the lawyer contended that it would take several hours for the argument.

"'I can understand all you will have to say in an hour's time,' said the judge.

"'I am satisfied I shall take fully eight hours in my argument,' contended the lawyer.

"'Very well, have your own way; but it will take the prisoner about three years to tell why he employed you.'"—[Philadelphia Ledger.

Just Like Sunshine.

A laugh is just like sunshine,
It freshens all the day;
It tips the peak of life with light,
And drives the clouds away;
The soul grows glad that hears it,
And feels its courage strong—
A laugh is just like sunshine
For cheering folks along.

A laugh is just like music,
It lingers in the heart,
And where its melody is heard
The ills of life depart;
And happy thoughts come crowding
Its joyful notes to greet—
A laugh is just like music
For making living sweet!

What the Toys Said.

The Hobby Horse said,
As he shook his head:
"It's a long, long way to go
O'er the white snow's foam
To the Little Boy's Home;
But I hear the tin horns blow,
And must race away till I'm out o' breath
To the Little Boy who will ride me to death!"

And the Toy Drum said:
"I've a hardened head,
And away on my sticks I'll go
From this icy dome
To the Little Boy's home.
I can beat my way through the snow!
Away! away! till I'm out of breath,
To the Little Boy who will beat me to death!"

And the Toy Doll said,
As her gold-crowned head
Shone over the wintry snow:
"To the Little Girl
Of the golden curls
In a fairy coach I'll go;
Far, far away, till I'm out o' breath,
To the Little Girl who will kiss me to death!"

But the Elephant said:
"If that way I'm led,
And they treat you all so bad,
I tell you now
That there'll be a row,
And they'll wish they never had!
For I'll pack them all in my trunk, you see,
And lock it, and throw away the key!"

Let Me Keep My Dream.

Pray, you, my master, let me keep my dream.
Of all sweet things have I not been bereft,
Of every youth, of very happiness?
Why should you covet this one fairing left?
Nay, grant me this. What slave could ask for less?
Pray, you, my master, let me keep my dream.

Pray, you, my master, leave to me this thing:
I, who was rich one day, today am poor
Beyond men's envying, save for this,
This dream for whose glad sake I still endure;
All else you filched in that one Judas kiss.
Pray, you, my master, leave me this thing.

Pray you, my master, let me keep my dream.
Oh, Love, I gave you so much, so much—
Desire for joy, yea, and desire for tears—
Leave me this one dear solace in my touch,
This little lamp to light the desolate years.
Pray you, my master, let me keep my dream.

Farewell.

Oh, drowsily the breezes lingered over lane and lea,
And wayward moonbeams, fairy-fingered, hushed the restless sea,
When through the meadows, dim with shadows, came my love to me.

A dainty ditty he was singing—Oh, I loved him well!
And all the world went idly swinging where the echoes fell,
While soft, serene, by hill and dene there throbbed an evening bell.

Oh, wistfully the winds went sailing o'er the sobbing sea,
And cloud-wrack swift with moonlight trailing worked its wizardry,
When far away, as lovers may, went forth my love from me.

CURRENT COMMENT.

MARTIN B. MADDEN, the Chicago labor boss and exemplar of the slugging tactics that have made the Windy City a stench in the nostrils of every honest workman, has lost control of the Chicago Federation of Labor. He was defeated for president at the recent semi-annual election by Charles Dold and the faction which has been struggling to accomplish the overthrow of the infamous thug leader. Dold was elected president; all the committees were made up of anti-Madden men and control was swept completely from Madden's hands.

The overthrow of Madden means that a skull-cracking department will not be maintained by the Chicago Federation of Labor during the next six months, or that it is proposed to pursue a policy of concealment which will make it difficult to trace the "Chicago method" to its source. The election of Dold is not to be accepted as a proof of regeneration in high places in labor circles, but rather as a sure sign that the leaders saw the disruption of local unionism and their own finish if the Madden policy of open crime and assassination were to be continued. The routing of Madden is nominally in the interest of common decency, but an organization that invites and receives into membership bands of degenerates such as the Franklin Union of Pressfeeders, and just after that gang had made a record for diabolical crime and brutality, cares nothing for common decency. What is more, Madden was perhaps less to blame for the admission of the pressfeeders than Dold, who was at the time one of the strong men of the federation. There is little to choose between Dold and Madden. One is a hypocrite and the other an honest scoundrel.

Imagine Mayor Schmitz of San Francisco riding behind an "unfair" band and after his own union had refused to countenance the affair! Yet this was what he did in the parade of the Native Sons at Sacramento on Admission Day. Stockton Parlor had employed the boys' band of that city to play in the parade which gave mortal offense to the members of the fifteen union bands which were also to take part. Of course the Parlor ought to have known better than to employ the boys when the unionists were to play, but because it overlooked the "insult" and Marshal Gallagher refused to recognize it, the union bands fell out of line just before the parade started. It must have been gall and wormwood for Schmitz, the late president of the striking union, to listen to the gallant, non-union boys play stirring and patriotic numbers. With the union bands eliminated these numbers had a meaning and the commemoration significance; but had Schmitz been ordered out of the carriage and told to join his malcontent union, where his heart was, it would have gained in sincerity.

The strike of the Seattle brewery workers, begun May 1, has been settled under a compromise which is a practical defeat of the strikers. Generally the terms of the compromise are:

The brewery companies will reëmploy their former employés whenever vacancies exist under good business conditions, but will retain their non-union employés, or such as have proved capable. Wages remain the same. Eight hours will constitute a day's labor, this clause being inserted at the request of the smaller brewing companies.

It will be remembered that the strikers and their leaders made the usual boasts and threats at the beginning of the strike: They were strong enough to enforce their demands; they were amply provided with funds, and their boycott would destroy the business in Rainier beer. Moreover, they would put the brewing companies out of business if they persisted in refusing the demands. As it transpired the strikers very soon developed weakness both because they were not a unit and the promised strike funds did not materialize—as usual. The boycott did not boycott and a few days before the strike was called off the Federal court at San Francisco put a quietus upon it by issuing an injunction forbidding the boycott of Rainier beer. The only thing left to do was to get back to work on any terms the employers were disposed to grant.

According to a New York dispatch which appeared in the Examiner on Friday President Mitchell of the United Mine Workers, was told the other day of a desperate attempt being made by the coal trust to have the law which safeguards the lives of the 150,000 miners in the anthracite region set aside, that on April 1 next, the operators may be able to tell the miners to quit work, if they want to, and then fill their places with untried and inexperienced men from the immigrant ships that arrive in this country.

No affidavit is attached to the dispatch, and unless we can get our information from a more reliable source, it will be the part of wisdom to discount it. As to that part of the dispatch which says that the operators may tell the miners to quit work and then fill their places with untried and inexperienced men, that is surely the undoubted right of the operators. The mere fact that the miners are in a union does not give them a proprietary interest in the mines, and if they are concerned about the mine property because of the fear that the mines may be worked by untried and inexperienced men, that must be news to everybody. The whole story is probably out of whole cloth and given publicity to create sympathy for the Mitchellites.

SAN FRANCISCO.

BOYS PLAYED LIKE MEN.

Stockton Band Only One in Sacramento Parade.

The Unionists Sulked Because of Its Presence.

And Refused to Take Part in Patriotic Affair.

[FROM OUR OWN CORRESPONDENT.]

SAN FRANCISCO, Sept. 15.—The Musicians' Union ran into a snag when it attempted to break up the Native Sons' parade at Sacramento on Admission Day by its arbitrary rules regarding the employment of none but union bands for parade purposes. The trouble started over the appearance of the Stockton parlor with a band composed of boys not members of the union. For a number of years this boys' band has been a well known feature of celebrations in Northern and Central California. The boys organized when they were not more than twelve years of age, and their average ages is now not over sixteen or seventeen, with possibly one or two exceptions. By constant practice they have reached a proficiency that causes their services to be in demand and they are employed to play at Santa Cruz for a time during the summer season. Few of them are eligible to become members of the union, owing to their age.

The parade was scheduled to start promptly at 10:30 o'clock and a few moments before that hour Musician Wetzel of a local band notified Grand Marshal John H. Skelton that the boys' band of Stockton would have to come out of the parade, as it was a non-union band. For a moment the grand marshal did not appreciate the situation, it seemed so absurd to him, but went ahead with his preparations to move 10,000 men and women, with their innumerable floats, drum corps and vehicles.

Finally, however, the insistence of Wetzel, abetted by Joe Madison, a walking delegate of the San Francisco Musicians' Union, impressed it on Skelton's mind, and what he said then regarding unions in general scorched and burned. But the walking delegate stood firm—either that band of boys would come out of the parade or he would call out every one of the union bands.

WALKING DELEGATE OBDURATE.

"But this is not a political parade; it is a patriotic, State celebration in which every citizen of the State is interested; politics or labor-unionism has nothing to do with it," urged the grand marshal. But Madison stood firm. After further extended argument the grand marshal sent for Grand President J. L. Gallager, who added his entreaties to those of Skelton, but Madison was insistent. The entire situation was gone over again and again, but Madison maintained his position thinking that the grand marshal would give into the bluff, but the delegate made a huge mistake, for Skelton is a man who can't be bluffed. At this moment Senator C. M. Belshaw came up from the Contra Costa line—smiling Charley Belshaw, who always has oil with which to smooth troubled waters, and this is how he did it: "Stay with it, Skelton; don't you give an inch. If the union bands refuse to parade, go ahead," and the Senator from Contra Costa moved up alongside the grand marshal, all the smile gone from his face.

"That's right; go ahead. Sacramento is with you, Jack," shouted an official from the Sacramento parlor. Skelton waved his baton, fifteen union bands tucked their instruments under their arms and went up town, while the Stockton boys' band moved to the head of the parade and struck up a lively march; and how those boys did play, until their faces were as red as their coats, and then some more.

A HORNY HAND SHOT OUT.

As the parade was passing along J street a man standing on the curb hissed. Near him stood a big husky rancher from San Joaquin, and the sound of the hiss had not reached the center of the street when a big horny hand shot out, catching the hisser in the face, sent him against the ropes. Stockton parlor had heard the hiss and saw the instant reprimand. For an instant Stockton parlor wavered and marked time while it waited, muscles tense and ready for a spring; then it smiled and passed on. The hisser had vanished in the crowd.

The parade was a huge success even without the fifteen disgruntled bands most of which were from San Francisco. The monetary loss to the strikers included the wages they would have earned, their transportation to Sacramento and return and their hotel bills They advanced this money out of their own pockets with the expectation of having it refunded by the parade committee which would have been the case had the bands lived up to their agreement.

After the parade was finished Grand Marshal Stockton was surrounded by a large crowd of overjoyed citizens and congratulated on the firm stand he had tacken against the disgraceful actions of the union.

"I never had the slightest idea of dismissing the Stockton band from the parade," said Grand Marshal Skelton. "I only delayed my decision in the hope of having a harmonious and successful celebration. Stockton parlor was the guest of the city of Sacramento, had been invited here, and was I, on such argument as was offered, going to tell that parlor that it or any feature of its organization, was objectionable? Not me. From the very first I had decided to go over the route of the parade if I had to do it at the head of Stockton parlor only."

FLAUNT THEIR INDECENCIES.

There is nothing which gives a better insight into the disgraceful class of varmints which comprises the present union labor government of San Francisco than the vile "shows" which now flaunt their indecencies in the first and second blocks of Market street. The location of these pitfalls has a similar significance. It means that the harpies and vultures of unionism and Schmitzism, licensed to prey upon the unwary and the inexperienced, have received permission to spread their nets and expose their filthy attractions at the very gates of the city, where they cannot fail to catch the visitor who lacks the experience to avoid the unspeakable things of city life. Schmitzism must be getting its share of the proceeds or these detestable enterprises would not have been able to stay in business twenty-four hours. By private complaint and published denunciation the police have been fully informed of the character and purpose of the disgusting exhibitions at 35 and 110 Market street, even if they were deaf to the hoarse cries of the "barkers," who shout at the doors and blind to the signs that tell of the rottenness within. For more than a month one of these concerns has been running full blast and now the prosperous proprietor has ventured to open another a little way up the street. Business of this kind must be good, and moreover the "rake off" which goes to Schmitzism's treasurer must be substantial, for not a step has been taken by the police to suppress the evil. There is no grand jury in session now, so the union administration has little to fear. It does not need to skulk in dark corners or wear a mask when it goes abroad on its tours of collection. The lid is off—has been thrown away. The time for the clean-up is at hand. Everything, anything, goes, from which corruption can squeeze a dirty dollar. The "shows" in lower Market street by which nearly all the visitors to San Francisco must walk or ride, are only signs and symptoms of the disease that has cankered the vitals of the mother city of the Pacific Coast. Four years, almost, San Francisco has been nauseated by the union labor regime and the pollution is so complete that it festers on her face as she smiles welcome to the stranger passing in through her gates.

As an example of the desperate straits in which the union labor party finds itself with regard to its voting strength for the coming election, the action of the Milk Wagon Drivers' Union in passing a resolution requiring every member of foreign birth to become a citizen of the United States and register in time for the coming election is plain. Members of foreign birth who have not been in this country long enough to become voters (and there are many) must declare their intention of becoming citizens. Failure to comply with the terms of the resolution will subject the derelict to expulsion from the union.

LABOR DAY ONLY LABOR UNION DAY.

LABOR UNIONS NOT ONE PER CENT. OF THE TOILERS.

Some of Which Stand for Industrial Tyranny Instead of Industrial Respectability, and Fight Their Brother Workmen Instead of Capital—Significance of Day Partly Lost.

It should add zest to the celebration of Labor Day that it is an American institution. If a person should leave New York and travel around the globe to San Francisco he would not come to a single land in which the dignity of labor was acknowledged or in which labor was not considered in some respects a disgrace.

It should be a matter of pride to this country that we have a Labor Day and labor demonstrations, with something like an apotheosis of labor, showing our scorn for European snobbery and teaching a valuable lesson to European dullness. It must eventually impress the wearers of coronets that by honoring honest toil we are rapidly becoming their financial and political masters.

We only wish that our Labor day were more of a labor day than it is. At present it might more properly be called Labor Union day, and as the labor unions of the country do not contain 1 per cent. of its toilers the significance of the day and of the parade is to a great extent lost. There are not near so many honest toilers in the parade as look down on it from the windows as it passes along the streets.

The significance of the parade is still further marred by the fact that some of the unions represented stand for industrial tyranny instead of industrial respectability. While pretending to be fighting capital they are really fighting their brother workmen. Their hands are red with the blood of men just as good as they are and far more industrious. They are opposed to honest competition and in favor of getting employment by means of the slung-shot and the revolver.

This phase of the American labor union we confidently believe to be transient. From the beginning it was not so. The older labor unions of this country are highly respectable bodies, seeking to further the interests of their members by good workmanship and good faith. It is only some of the newer unions that have become the enemies of fair play and of social order, and as they have signally failed in establishing the rule of force we can but hope and believe that they will now try the better way.

Labor day will never be the inspiring occasion that it ought to be until the labor unions march in the same column with non-union laborers. Any brotherhood of labor which has a clenched fist for honest labor can never impress to any great extent the American mind.

Judge Wants a Judgess.

The county judge in Bristol, England, said the other day: "If there were a county court judges in Bristol as well as a county court judge, one of the greatest troubles of my life would pass away. I feel convinced that if there were some lady sitting in my place, in a wig or without one, she would not be taken in so freely, so copiously and so hopelessly as I am by the ladies."—[New York Tribune.

CLOSED SHOP FOR THE UNION.

Its Advocates Small Per Cent. of Consumers.

They Would Deprive Others of Right to Create.

Latter Should Refuse to Consume the Products.

Writing on the closed shop John T. Hancock says: Only members of organized labor can get work in closed shops. Such agreements are reached through contract between employer and employé. It is not a forced condition by union labor. It is an agreement, a contract, and like every other contract, has two parties thereto. Both parties to the closed shop contract are producers.

Unless the products of the closed shop are consumed by those not parties to the contract, the producers, employer and employé, of the closed shop would soon quit business, for the advocates of the closed shop idea is a very small per cent. of the consumers on whom all producers must depend if they continue in business.

If employer and employé agree that no one else shall produce but themselves, it is only justice that those who are excluded from the right to produce should refuse to consume the products of those who would deprive others of the right to create needed articles under the law of supply and demand.

The closed shop refuses to recognize the right of the youths of this country to enter business pursuits of any character.

A young man leaves the country for the city to learn the mercantile business. The Retail Clerks' Union says no. The door is closed. There are members on the waiting list, and as union men they are entitled to positions first. The question of merit, morals, ambition has nothing to do with the case. The employer and employé's agreement for the closed shop closes the door to all who are not parties to the contract and who cannot show a union card.

There is no special skill demanded for a retail clerk. The young man who is closed out probably has more skill, more experience than one closed in—but one is a member of the union, the other only an independent American, who refuses to become a monopolist; who refuses to allow others to say how he shall work, when he shall work, whom he shall work for, how much he shall earn, when he shall begin, when he shall quit. He refuses to surrender his independence, join the union, violate right, defy the law, support criminals.

The young man wants to be a carpenter. He cannot learn the trade. Apprentices are limited, There are many on the waiting list. The Carpenters' Union refuses to let him learn the trade. He cannot become a skilled carpenter, because he cannot begin as an apprentice. He cannot work by the day, save his money, become a builder, grow into a contractor and follow the business to a success. The closed shop contract closes the door to his career, prevents him from acquiring skill. Deprives him of the opportunity to succeed. His ancestors may have aided in establishing and defending this country and its institutions. To him opportunity is denied.

A man comes in through "Castle Garden." He can saw a plank. He can drive a nail. He can push a plane. He cannot read, write nor speak the language of the land. He will work at any price, under any conditions. He joins the union. He advocates the closed shop. He does not understand nor respect law. He pays his dues. A servant by nature he bows to the master, his union. Should the product of such conditions be purchased by this people?

So it goes with the painters, plumbers, plasterers, bricklayers, teamsters, hod carriers, street car conductors, store employés, factory employés, skilled and unskilled workmen; genteel mechanics, sweat-shop slaves; foreman of high grade labor, garbage gatherers, all carrying the union card, all demanding the exclusive right to work. All fighting for the closed shop. All requiring the use of the union label on their products.

The closed shop represents a far greater monopoly than the Standard Oil Company. The union labor label is more expensive to labor than the beef combine. The closed shop is more tyrannical than the ante-bellum slave-driver.

Human life is not safe when contending against the closed shop. Human happiness is destroyed by the closed shop. Human liberty is denied by the closed shop. The Constitution of the nation, the law of the land, is defied by the closed shop.

When purchasing products to pay for and consume see if they bear the union label. If they do, let them alone. That label is the key locking the door of the closed shop. Closing opportunity to our young men. Let the closed shop contracting parties consume the closed shop products.

The Brotherhood of Locomotive Engineers is one of the oldest labor unions. Railroad engineers must be of the highest order of skill, of good morals, of manly character. They do not try to force the closed shop. They do not refuse to work with others not members of their brotherhood. They do not intimidate, brutally beat, cruelly murder men who are engineers and who do not wish to belong to their brotherhood.

They believe in live and let live. They rely upon their merit, skill, worth, for employment. They are not closed shop advocates today, strikers tomorrow, strike-breakers soon. They do not advocate violence to property or life. They do not believe in monopoly of labor. They know what the principles of unionism mean. They know and practice its beneficial powers. They do not defy law. They know that the government is necessary and in governing their brotherhood aid in governing the land. They do not need a label to brand their work. Think of these things and remember that the closed shop is created by employer as well as employé. Think of what the evil of the closed shop is doing. Think of the greater evil it will do, if you aid it to grow by using the product of the closed shop. Union labor is all right. Monopoly of labor is all wrong.

PRESUMPTION OF TRADE-UNIONISM.

IS THE WHOLE THING WHEN A STRIKE IS DECLARED.

The Leader Supplants the President, Governor, Mayor and Chief of Police, and His "Executive Orders" Take Place of Constitutions and Laws.

Father Phelan, editor of the Western Watchman, has this to say on union of lawlessness during strikes:

"We have a cool and methodical way of declaring war on government and laws in this country. A number of men drop their tools, assemble in a hall and discuss 'grievances.' When the last man has spoken the question of a strike is submitted to a vote, and if carried in the affirmative, the presiding officer is empowered to announce to the world that war is on. From that time on, or until the strike is declared off, as it was declared on, and by the same people, the chairman of that strike meeting supplants President, Governor, Mayor and Chief of Police; and his 'executive orders,' take the place of constitutions and laws and ordinances; the old men and their wives, the young men and their sweethearts, the small boy and the smaller girl, begin 'getting ready;' purchase weapons, arrange hours of duty and 'zones of war;' form in platoons on prominent street corners, and drill in parks and public grounds. The public are duly warned of danger in the pursuit of their daily avocations, and all men who, like the three Hebrew children, refuse to obey the orders of the 'chairman' are slugged, shot or carved into ribbons, just as they happen to fall into the hands of male or female hyenas. The police are told 'to take care,' and the officers of the courts are warned that they hold their offices by the favor of 'the people,' and that the 'will of the people' is the sovereign law. The streets are deserted; business paralyzed; the inhabitants of the city are thrown into a panic, and unless Federal troops soon appear on the scene and Gatling guns lumber along the principal thoroughfares, life and liberty are insecure. The papers talk of peace and compromise; and some of small circulation may even speak about the unwisdom of violence. The mob is only urged on to excess by the rout of the guardians of the law and the exponents of public opinion.

"These papers have yet on sale the numbers in which the conduct of the anarchists in Russia was applauded, and the attempts at revolution were defended, on the very principles now invoked by the Chicago strikers. This is getting to be an infernal country, for in it no longer 'order,' but industrial 'horror' reigns. The first duty of a government is to its citizens; and the first right of the citizen is protection; protection of life, liberty and happiness. Our national and State governments protect us when we do not need protection; when we need it they, in the most cowardly way, abandon us to the mercy of the unions.

"These men who are setting law at defiance in Chicago should be taught the lesson that their fellows in anarchy have been taught in France, Germany and Belgium. They have not yet learned that strike riots have been eliminated from the programme of the unions in those countries. We shall not speak of Russia, for there there may have been some cause for popular violence; but in every country in the world, where the people participate in the government, the striker who takes up arms is considered a murderer, or madman, and he is treated as such. We have had all the labor riots in this country we propose to stand; and this reign of terror in Chicago will be a 'short, sharp and,' we hope, 'a decisive action.' Democracy does not mean mob rule; the 'government of the people, for the people and by the people' does not mean a 'government of unions, for unions and by unions,' and the sooner the latter find that out the better for all concerned.

"We have no faith in the police. The courts are oftentimes secretly in sympathy with the strikers. The militia are often in league with the rioters. The only sure protection of law and order is the presence of regulars. One regiment of artillery rolling along Wabash avenue will bring those howling rioters to their senses. Those ugly-frowning field pieces have no pity on 'down-trodden' workmen and 'suffering' seamstresses, when they treat the public with impromptu showers of brickbats. Those stolid gunners do not look into the faces of the men who are howling in front of them. Cannon balls make a ready passage for people and wagons through the obstructed streets, and make the thoughts of the most violent readily turn to home. The day of the riot here is passed, and the size of the throng no longer relieves its members of the character of rowdies. We are tired of strikes and unions, and closed shops, and workingmen's tyranny; and the sooner the last named realize that they have reached the dead-line the better."

HEARST FORCES ARE DIVIDED.

His $500,000 Organization is Near Dissolution.

Leaders of Three Factions Prepare for War.

Proposed Banquet to Bryan Brings a Crisis.

Factional strife threatens with destruction the organization which William Randolph Hearst built up in Illinois at a cost of $500,000. Already the Hearst lieutenants in the State are divided into three cliques and open warfare between these factions is certain to begin within a few weeks.

For some time there have been bickerings between the leaders of the three bands of Hearst followers, but an open rupture between them has been prevented, says a report in the Chicago Chronicle. Now matters have been brought to a crisis by the announcement that the Jefferson club is to give a banquet, to William J. Bryan on September 12.

The Jefferson Club was organized for the purpose of aiding the candidacy of William Randolph Hearst for the Democratic Presidential nomination. The men who were behind it were James O'Shaughnessy, secretary of the Hearst league and confidential adviser of Mayor Dunne, and Clarence S. Darrow. While not officers of the club, they still control it.

That these men should arrange for a banquet to Colonel Bryan with the hardly concealed purpose of booming him for the Democratic nomination in 1908 has seemed surprising to other of the Hearst leaders. A. M. Lawrence, who managed Hearst's campaign in Illinois two years ago, is much disturbed by the plans for the Bryan banquet. He and O'Shaughnessy have been at outs for some time but now a break between them is certain. Both claim to be the head of the local Hearst machine and the dispute between them can only be settled when their employer returns from Europe.

While O'Shaughnessy and Lawrence are whetting their knives and preparing for war another faction of Hearst men is looking on with the same enjoyment as the woman who encouraged both her husband and the bear. This faction is composed of the Hearst leaders down the State. It is headed by Millard F. Dunlap of Jacksonville, who managed the Hearst campaign outside of Cook county two years ago.

The breach between Dunlap and the two other leaders dates from the Democratic State convention in 1904. Dunlap did not approve of the alliance between Lawrence and O'Shaughnessy and the Hopkins-Sullivan forces. He voiced his disapproval openly, declaring that the two other leaders were betraying their candidate.

To this Lawrence and O'Shaughnessy retorted by declaring that Dunlap was less of a Hearst man than a Bryan man and that he was more in-

State committee than of WORKERS' PAGE---How the Government is Caring for the Salmon Industry.

Future of the Salmon Industry.

TO BE INFLUENCED BY THE CONCLUSIONS REACHED AT A JOINT CONFERENCE OF AMERICAN AND CANADIAN EXPERTS.

[SPECIALLY CONTRIBUTED TO THE TIMES.]

THE future of the salmon fishing and canning industry in the Pacific Northwest is likely to be very vitally affected by the conclusions reached as a result of the conference this summer between American and Canadian experts, acting for their respective governments. The international fishing question in the salmon district of the western coast has fortunately not engendered the bitter feeling which has from time to time developed between Yankee and Dominion interests on the Great Lakes and on the North Atlantic fishing grounds. On the other hand, a goodly proportion of the people affected show a disposition to take the sensible view and make common cause in behalf of the permanency of the industry.

Artificial Hatching.

The great aim of the negotiations now in progress between the United States and our neighbors to the north is to devise some scheme of harmonious coöperation in the artificial propagation of the salmon. Herein lies the secret of continued prosperity in an activity which engages the attention of tens of thousands of persons and yields a product which is worth more than $15,000,000 annually.

Few people believe that there is serious danger of an alarming depletion of the salmon supply any more than they fear an exhaustion of the supply of coal or iron ore but [illegible] time it is useless to ignore the signs that indicate changing conditions. The most significant of these is the great decrease in the number of salmon frequenting the headwaters of the rivers, notably the Columbia, the home of the highest priced salmon. Years ago the fish were found in the headwaters in great abundance, but there has been a gradual but steady decrease until now the number reaching the interior streams is comparatively small.

Various theories have been advanced as to the reason for this disappearance, among the explanations being the settlement of the interior country—with the consequent use of the streams for mining, milling and other purposes—and overfishing in the lower rivers. However in this case the effect is more important than the cause. Whatever may be the root of the trouble, each successive year brings the necessity of relying more largely upon artificial propagation to keep up the supply of fish.

Coöperation With Canada.

Ample provision has been made for this. The States of Oregon and Washington and the United States government all maintain large hatcheries in the "salmon belt," the State of Washington alone liberating from its nineteen hatcheries not less than forty million spawn each year. However, fish experts believe that the salmon fisheries will ere long be yet more largely dependent upon State and national governmental aid to stimulate the supply, and to this end coöperation is proposed with the Canadian powers who are working to the same end. Moreover, the peculiar habits of the salmon and the great distances they travel make it especially desirable that there should be an international law governing the catching of the fish, etc., or at least that the American and Canadian laws should be identical in intent just as the two nations have coöperated to an extent regarding sealing.

Location of Fish Traps.

Another new factor which has an important bearing upon the salmon fishing industry is the lately inaugurated policy of the Engineer Corps of the United States Army in regulating in a systematic manner the construction of the fixed trap-nets or fish traps which are used in certain of the fishing districts of the northwest, notably in Puget Sound. It is well known that Uncle Sam looks with anything but a kindly eye upon these immense traps that capture the fish in such numbers, but since the question of their license to exist rests wholly with the State concerned, he has no power to interfere on that score. The Federal government is taking a hand in the matter in another sphere entirely—namely on the liability of the big traps to prove obstructions to navigation.

Danger to Navigation.

When it is explained that the supports of these fish traps are usually poles of fir from seventy to one hundred feet in length and a foot and a half in diameter, connected by means of continuous wire cable fully one-half an inch in diameter, and that the nets stretched between these poles set in the bottom of the ocean are quite as often of wire as of cordage netting, it will be appreciated that the traps are capable of playing havoc with any vessels or steamers that might collide with them. The War Department now seeks to guard against such mishaps by exercising a strict supervision over the construction and location of the traps.

Strict Regulations Enforced.

Formerly the Northwestern fishermen, like those of the New Jersey coast, where may be found the only rivals of the big traps on the Pacific, were wont to place the traps wherever they chose and at varying distances from shore. In some instances several traps—each with a series of enclosures capable of accommodating fifty thousand fish—were built [illegible], forming a barrier half a mile or more in length. Under the new conditions the traps must be built a certain distance from shore and out of the line of navigation. Not only must an officer of the Engineer Corps approve the location of a trap, but the War Department must approve the plans for construction, and the work of erecting the trap must be done under the supervision of the army officer having jurisdiction in the district.

Value of the Salmon Catch.

Although the position of the salmon industry as one of the sources of the prosperity and marvelous development of the Pacific Northwest is generally recognized, few persons realize the importance of this activity to the people of the country at large. The salmon each year attains a greater prominence as our leading food fish. It is now so far in the lead that the cod and the sardines of the New England coast can scarce be considered competitors. In canned salmon alone the average annual pack approximates fifty million fish valued at more than $12,000,000.

The Royal Chinook, the largest and most famous of the salmon family is still king of the tribe—a distinction due quite as much to richness and delicacy of flavor as to size—but it is noticeable that many of the packers are bending every effort to convincing the public, the public that buys salmon in gaily ornamented tins in the grocery stores—that the red salmon or sockeye is quite the equal of the Royal Chinook in every way. The candid fisherman will confess, however, that the flesh of the red salmon is drier than that of the king of the clan, and somewhat inferior in flavor.

Fish for China.

Just here it may be noted in passing that the threatened Chinese boycott of American products may affect one branch of the salmon industry, since the packers sell in the Celestial Kingdom as well as in Japan each year great quantities of humpback salmon in tins. The humpback is an inferior grade of salmon, but it is so cheap that it can be shipped half around the world, and yet be sold at a price which brings it within the reach of the poorer classes in the Orient. The humpback is declared to be quite as nutritive as the more expensive grades, but is lacking in flavor.

This Year's Good Harvest.

The salmon fishermen are expecting a very heavy aggregate catch this year, and the indications are that their hopes will be realized. The anticipation of a generous run of fish throughout the present summer was based upon the oft-verified rule which calls for an exceptionally light catch during the year of a Presidential election, and an exceptionally heavy catch during the year when the President is inaugurated. In accordance with the unwritten law last year's crop was distressingly light, and apparently this year's harvest will be as much above the average as its predecessor was below. Many visitors to the salmon country—and there are hosts of them this year, thanks to the Lewis and Clark Exposition—are prone to look upon this belief in the rotation of light and heavy catches as merely a fisherman's superstition, but as a matter of fact there is a scientific explanation of the lean and fat years in the well known custom of the salmon to go out into deep water when they are one year old, remaining at sea for three years ere they return to the rivers in the waters or the vicinity of which most of the fishing is done.

Reports to date indicate a preponderance of medium size fish with a comparatively small proportion of the special prizes such as Royal Chinooks weighing from forty, to sixty pounds each. This abundance of the smaller fish is good news to the canners, since it means that there have been plenty of fish to keep the plants in full operation. When the larger fish predominate in the market the canners face a problem, since the cold storage men are eager to secure these fish, and inasmuch as they pay uniformly higher prices than the canneries they are usually succesful.

Machinery Ousts Hand Labor.

It requires pretty careful management to provide a perpetual supply of fish for a big cannery capable of handling anywhere from 100,000 to 150,000 fish per day; cleaning them in machines each of which has a capacity of forty-five fish per minute; closing the cans by means of apparatus which handles 125 cans a minute; and varnishing the tins by means of a battery of four electric-motor driven machines each of which can handle 50,000 cans per day. Apropos it may be mentioned that each year finds a fresh displacement of manual labor by machinery in the salmon packing industry and the up-to-date cannery is coming to resemble a manufacturing plant far more than a big cooking and tinning establishment. A big force of hands—the number may reach three hundred in a large cannery during the rush intervals in July and August—is employed to pack the salmon into the cans, and manual labor is depended upon to place the filled cans in the retorts where the fish are cooked for an hour in a temperature of 200 degrees. But it seems that almost every other operation can now be entrusted to the tireless mechanical workers.

The salmon industry probably constitutes the most picturesque of our commercial fisheries. It would be difficult to conceive of a more beautiful picture than that presented by the thousands of fishing boats, sails spread, putting out to sea from Astoria—the center of the industry—in Oregon—on a summer evening. Night may fill their boats with the richest of all food fish, or a sudden storm may drive them so far out to sea as to cause apprehension for their safety. Equally interesting is the employment of horses for hauling the seine at the bar of the Columbia River, while travelers from all parts of the world gaze in wonderment upon the unique fish wheels of the Columbia Rapids, which, with dip nets attached to the blades, continue day and night to scoop up the fish with each revolution of the wheel, enabling the owner to gain a livelihood with less effort than any other fisherman on earth.

WALDON FAWCETT.

Trouble in Birdland.

"The birds are beginning to take their leave," observed a woman who is more or less intimately acquainted with birds, "and I'm always sorry to have them go. They've been uncommonly neighborly this year, but they've also been unusually careless, or ambitious for their young or lazy; I can't pass accurate judgment on them because much of their conversation is unintelligible. I'm certain of this, however: I've never before been witness to so many accidents in the bird family. Every other day there has been a commotion in our neighborhood due to the fact that some fledgling has fluttered down from the tree ahead of time and can't get back. That means a chatter and clatter and fuss in which the whole feathered tribe participates. The parents flap around heart-broken and the other members of the congress scold and give advice by turns. Even the cold-blooded English sparrows take a hand—or a claw—in the powwow. You can't do anything to help them out, except stand guard and keep off the cats, and some of these mishaps have upset me more than I've been willing to confess. Either the nests have been too shallow or the young ones have been urged to leave home before they can fly, or the old ones have tired of housekeeping and miscalculated the ability of their offspring to take care of themselves. Whatever the cause there's been something decidedly out of kilter this summer with the rearing of broods among the leaves."—[Providence Journal.

HINTS FROM OUR CONSULS.

New Facts About Wheat Rust.

Consul-General Guenther, of Frankfort, reports that according to German papers the most important work with reference to the rust of cereals has been done by Erikson within the last few years, but that also in the United States important investigations have been made. Formerly the capability of the summer spores of wheat rust for propagating the disease had been considered as slight. This view must be changed because these spores are not as short lived as had been supposed. Bolley, of the London College in New Dakota, has established the fact that the red "summer spore" of many-colored rust fungi keep even over winter. They even resist the dryness and the sunshine of midsummer as well as the cold of winter in the tissues of the wheat plant. This makes it possible that the spores are carried for miles by the wind and accounts for the rapidity with which rust infection spreads over large areas. Bolley investigated the vitality of spores from week to week and from month to month in different modes of keeping wheat and other straw affected with rust and has found proof that even dry fall winds and the severest winter frost do not kill the red spores. They even retain their vitality upon dead leaves, dead straw, and the partially dead leaves of living cereal plants or grasses. This fact, says Mr. Bolley in the weekly journal, Science," will be of the greatest importance with reference to further investigations of the wheat rust.

It may be that the going over of the rust to the barberry plant will be considered as heretofore as a physiological necessity for the preservation of the fungi, but it can not any more be deemed as the exclusive means of propagation, which would have to be repeated annually before the rust could again attack the cereals.

Neglect in Egypt.

Although the United States imports from Egypt products to the value of $8,000,000 annually, our share in the goods Egypt imports is quite insignificant—less than one-half of 1 per cent. of the total trade. Commenting on this failure, really brought about by neglect of opportunities, a well-informed correspondent writes to the Bureau of Manufactures:

"American goods in Egypt are popular and are looked upon as reliable in quality. There are numerous importers who would like to handle them if they could do so on the same terms and with the same facilities offered by European manufacturers and exporters. Americans do not send salesmen to exhibit goods; they sell only for cash or on such short time that the goods must be paid for almost on the day of arrival. There are no banking facilities for direct trade, and no transportation facilities except by way of Europe. The consequence is the importer has no assurance as to the date on which goods ordered from the United States will reach him. These adverse conditions have discouraged those who have attempted to do business in the United States. Receiving no encouragement from the United States, the Egyptian merchants buy from Europeans, who send salesmen to their ports, give them the credit they require, see that banking and shipping facilities are supplied, and in some case send the goods to dealers to be sold on commission. I was informed of numerous cases in which goods purporting to be American were brought from Europe, and that many of these were cheap imitations of American manufactures. These counterfeit articles could be readily detected if American manufacturers had agents here as traveling salesmen or if their products were consigned direct to local dealers."

Trade of Turkey.

Vice-Consul Ojalvo sends an interesting and instructive report concerning the trade of Turkey. In part he says:

"The sales in American agricultural machines and implements have suffered somewhat from Russian competition, but the American Singer sewing machines still maintain the position of a monopoly in all the markets of the Orient. This company's main office at Constantinople directs its business in Egypt, the Balkan States, and all of Turkey. The Singer Company has a well-organized sales system which extends to the smallest place and adapts itself fully to the wants and wishes of the consumers. Its mode of selling on installment payments is very popular. Belgian goods are noted for their cheapness and poor quality. Austria-Hungary has made strenuous efforts to extend its trade in this market and did well here last year. France is holding its trade fairly well excepting in silk goods, which had to give way to the more progressive Italian silk manufactures. Of late the Italian silver jewelery and bijoutry articles have become a successful and energetic competitors of the German manufacturers (Pforzheim) in that line. The latter had better look sharp so as not to lose her foothold here. England's trade with Turkey has remained rather passive for some time, but is picking up again. As before, English staples, like the T cloth, army cloth, fine yarns, cheap pocket handkerchiefs, still dominate in Turkish markets. Germany is working slowly but surely ahead in textiles against Italy, Austria, and England, and competes successfully with the latter and with Belgium in the sale of small iron ware."

Germany in India.

A letter received by the Bureau of Manufacturers from an American gentleman in Italy describes an interview with an Italian trade commissioner who recently returned from a tour of investigation in the Orient. The Italian commissioner expressed the belief that the United States, with proper effort, could materially increase its sales of cotton goods, manufactures of iron and steel, railway supplies, boots and shoes, mineral oil, etc., in India. To do this, however, the opinion was expressed that manufacturers and merchants should associate themselves and send a representative to India to exhibit samples and solicit orders from dealers there. While a considerable share of the importation is now in the hands of English houses, the people, he thought, would not hesitate to buy from the United States if the goods were shipped direct and prices and terms were satisfactory. The Germans are making rapid gains in their exports to India, which may be attributed to their persistence in preparing goods in form to suit the local markets. He further said that a part of the growth of German trade in the Orient is due to the fact that a good and reliable steamship service to that part of the world has been established by the Germans and greatly strengthened in recent years. While he thought that regular lines between the United States and India would be almost necessary to the development of any considerable export trade to that country, he suggested that the Italian steamship company now operating a line between Italy and India, with the assistance of the Italian government, could perhaps extend its service to the United States, so as to give a direct line from New York to India, touching at Italy en route.

New Process of Galvanization.

According to Consul-General Guenther, of Frankfort, the eGrman papers report that Mr. Cowper Coles, an Englishman, has invented a new process of galvanization, and has recently demonstrated the same with samples of iron, copper, aluminum, and other metals. The objects to be galvanized are simply heated to 260 degrees in a bath of zinc vapor, the duration of which depends upon the desired thickness of the coating, but which is always short. After heating the objects are thoroughly coated with a layer of zinc, which on the surface has formed an alloy with the other metal by penetrating into it to a considerable depth. A copper rod can in this way be almost entirely transformed into brass, while the temperature employed remains far below the melting point of both metals. A great advantage of the process lies in the evenness of the coating, which is so perfect that such zinc-galvanized screws and bolts afterwards fit perfectly into the nuts, while with other methods they have to be polished. It is also very convenient that the objects to be galvanized have not first to be cleaned. The retorts in which the heating takes place are of iron, and are heated from the outside. Another peculiar advantage is that the zinc does not adhere to the walls of the retort, but that these, after months of use, are entirely clean. The explanation for this is that the walls of the retort are heated most, so that no zinc vapor condenses on them. Experiments to use the process with metals other than zinc have been so far made with copper and antimony, and have been partly successful, but not to a degree to make them of practical use.

HUMANITY'S HUNGERS.

Prof. Earl Barnes Tells What They are and When They Appear.

[London Express.]—Professor Earl Barnes lectured to the Kensington school-teachers on "Human Hungers" at the Froebel Institute last night.

He gave the following list of "human hungers" and the ages at which they can first be noticed:—

Hunger for food and drink—Infancy.
Hunger for action—Infancy.
Hunger for knowledge—Infancy.
Hunger for companionship—Six weeks.
Hunger for property—Two years.
Hunger for self-aggradizement—Five years.
Hunger for beauty—Two years.
Hunger for reasoning—Seven years.
Hunger for worship—Thirteen years.
Hunger for righteousness—Fifteen years.

The natural desire for food and drink is strongest, said the professor, at birth. After twenty the appetite should it not be misused, becomes less and less, till at seventy a man or woman ought only to require one small meal a day.

The "hunger" for property is very strong at about fifteen—the "collecting" age, when boys will amass anything, from stamps to beetles. When all other "hungers" fail, the "property hunger" still exists, and a man is most likely to be a miser when he is nearest his grave.

The "hunger" for beauty—that is, the real "beauty hunger," which means the admiration of art for art's sake—is the most uncommon of all.

No child can be said to have the "reason hunger" till he or she asks how it is that Santa Claus manages to get down a narrow chimney with a bag of toys. Then "reason" is beginning to dawn. This is quite different from the "hunger" for knowledge, which is mere curiosity.

"Hungers" must be kept as neccessities, or they will become vices. The "action hunger" is liable to develop into globe-trotting, the "property hunger" into meanness, and the "food and drink" hunger into gluttony and drunkenness.

On the other hand, "hungers" must be developed sufficientlly. If, for example, self-aggrandizement is not advanced enough, it becomes apathy. In short, we must keep our "hungers" at the happy medium.

DEVELOPMENT OF THE SOUTHWEST

THE MARCH OF PROGRESS AND MATERIAL GROWTH IN THE LAND OF SUNSHINE.

A Notable Invention.

A ROLLER bearing that works without the use of lubricants and yet without developing heat might seem to be an unattainable ideal. This claim, however, is put forward for a new Los Angeles invention named the "Allen" type of roller bearing, which is to be handled by the Anti-Friction Journal Box Company of this city. A number of tests in the presence of experts have been made on street cars and with other classes of vehicles.

Big Order for Gems.

Says the San Diego Sun: "An order has been placed by a Chicago firm with a gem company of this city which will keep twenty-five gem cutters busy for the rest of this year. This order was placed with the San Diego concern, owned by K. C. Neylor, after an inspection of the different specimens of cutting on exhibition at the Portland exposition. Seldom are orders as large as this one ever placed with one firm. It is for 25,000 carats of the Alaska garnet. The San Diego county gems were greatly admired by the representatives of the Chicago people, but they are making a specialty of the garnet. A feature flattering to the San Diego is that this order was placed here, while the fact is well known that Chicago has the largest number of cutting factories in the world."

Importing Date Palms.

B. G. Johnson, superintendent of the government date farm at Mecca, will leave shortly for the Persian Gulf for the purpose of securing cuttings of the date palm for propogation at the date farm near the Salton Sea. Johnson has already 700 thriving trees and has demonstrated to the satisfaction of the agricultural department at Washington that the date industry can be made a profitable adjunct of California's fruit industry. These trees do not grow from grafts or buds but must be propagated from the suckers that spring from the parent tree. A single tree does not yield more than a dozen suckers during its life time. Hence Johnson expects to visit Persia and make his own selection of plants. He thinks that in a few years the importation of these young date trees will be of commercial importance, as the trees at the government station are too few to supply the demand.—[Anaheim Gazette.

A Mustard Harvest.

From the most reliable sources that the Lampoc Record can reach, the mustard crop for that district this year is placed at close to 21,000 sacks. There were about 1400 acres planted to mustard, which would make the average very close to fifteen bags an acre. Figuring each bag at ninety pounds, this would make 1,890,000 pounds. Several people contracted at $3, but some have sold at as high at $4.30 per hundred, and the price now is about $4.17 to $4.20. Taking a very conservative estimate at $3.50 per hundred, that would give the valley an income of over $66,000 for mustard alone this year.

Imperial Valley for Hogs.

The Imperial Valley is rapidly taking its place as one of the leading hog producing sections of California, says the Brawley News. In the month of July twenty-five cars of fattened hogs were shipped to the Los Angeles market, where there is always a good demand, and a car will bring from $600 to $900. At eighty-five hogs to a car, which is a sufficient number of 175 pound hogs in the summer time, there were thus 2175 shipped from the valley in the course of a single month. There is nothing easier than raising hogs in the Imperial Valley. Kept on green alfalfa they grow rapidly and at little cost to the producer. The dairymen feed them skimmed milk, in addition to the green feed, but most of the growers feed the hogs nothing but alfalfa until a few weeks before marketing, when they are given grain.

A Decidedly Valuable Los Angeles Invention

Attention is called to an invention by a Los Angeles gentleman, which appears to be destined to become a leader in its class and make rich men of its owners and promoters. In the almost frenzied condition of real estate speculation in this section, there is danger of overlooking the more generally distributed advantages of industrials. It is a fact recognized by mechanical experts and others capable of judging, that we are in the morning of a distinct roller bearing age, and before it is yet high noon we shall witness such a general acknowledgement of the superiority and necessity of this class of bearing as to make it universally used, with one particular type as leader, since the different kinds thus far developed reveal too many mechanical defects to secure the distinction of leadership.

THE ANTI-FRICTION JOURNAL BOX COMPANY of this city has been organized for the purpose of promoting the "Allen" type of roller-bearing which forms the subject of these comments. The bearing in question is an unqualified demonstration of the theory of "anti-friction," and it strikes one as embodying all the virtues of its predecessors, together with many which must remain peculiarly its own, and proves that anti-friction is not a myth set up for the purpose of selling bearings.

Predictions are based on its superiority and on its striking characteristics which are simplicity and few parts. There are but fifteen parts to the bearing, and it is adjustable to any axle or wheel. The question of friction is absolutely eliminated, and the low cost of its manufacture must prove a powerful attraction to the trade, since it will not be necessary to purchase other co-relative parts to a vehicle in order to use the bearing.

The company have by a series of service tests on heavy and light vehicles, shafting, automobiles, buggies, and high speed trolley wheels of the street car service here in the city, established its title to leadership, and they have carried it far beyond the experimental stage and are now preparing to inaugurate an aggressive campaign in the manufacturing zone. A syndicate of eastern capitalists have requested all manufacturing rights east of the Mississippi, and the company's business manager, W. H. Sheasby, starts for Buffalo in the near future to close the negotiations with the syndicate for the errection of two large facories,, one in Buffalo and one in Chicago from which the trade will be supplied. It is the intention of the parent company to operate on the royalty basis, and on the most conservative estimate those having the foresight to secure some of the shares can not fail of handsome returns.

The installation of these bearings in machinery and vehicles guarantees a saving of from 30 to 70 per cent. of the energy and the insistence by manufacturing interests that operating costs shall be held down to the minimum guarantees the ready absorption by the trade of anything which will secure this end. When we reflect that there are over three and a half billion bearings in the United States it will readily be seen that the estimate of prospective returns is within reason. It might be said in this connection that good industrials are among the best-known form of investments, since out of the six billions of dollars which represent the manufacturing capital in the United States, more than two thirds or over $4,000,000,000 is based on patents and the incomes of American pantentees and their share holders far exceeds the total value of all the diamond, gold and silver mines in the world each year. While these figures seem startling they are a correct representation of our wonderful commercial history and they represent the silent forces which make for our astonishing progress as a leader of nations, and explains the foundation of the fortunes of the Vanderbilts, and the Morgans, and the Carnegies of our time.

The history of commercial evolution is marked by epochs and mile stones which stand out clear as pace setters in commercial activity, and but brief inspection of the "Allen" bearing is needed to convince one that an epoch in roller-bearing history is marked by its advent, since its every feature is based on the highest standard of mechanical science, as is convincingly shown by its performance of 5000 revolutions per minute without oil or heat thus proving that anti-fraction is an accomplished fact with all its tremendous advantages to our commercial life. The latest feat was performed on the 11th inst., on the Santa Monica line between Los Angeles and Santa Monica under high speed, under the inspection of a party of capitalists and experts who were the guests of the "Anti-friction Journal Box Company." The test was made for the purpose of determining the practicability of the carbon brush contact theory, regarding which electrical experts have entertained varying opinions, yet which is of importance to this company as they use no lubricant on their bearings and wished to test the carbon contact to determine their ability to do away with the lubrication of a contact washer which is necessary unless the carbon theory proves practical. On the day mentioned, the trolley made three round trips between Los Angeles and Santa Monica, and proved the correctness of a carbon contact in such pronounced degree that those who have doubted must change their views. The experts of the road in question expressed themselves as of the opinion that the roller bearing trolley with the carbon contact represents one of the most important steps in trolley car improvement of recent years. It is now the purpose of the company to equip a street car, including the journals and the motor bearings, it will require from 12 to 14 bearings to each car, and the saving in power to the street car companies will constitute such a material advantage on the credit side of the ledger as to guarantee their universal adoption.

Among the guests comprising the party mentioned on the 11th, were: Mr. F. E. Knapp, a noted trolley expert from the east; Mr. Richard Grauch, of Los Angeles; Edward J. Andrade, Mexican Consul for Los Angeles; Enrique de la Sierra, Chancellor of the Mexican Consulate of Los Angeles; also representatives from Bradstreet's, and the Chamber of Commerce together with fifteen local and eastern capitalists who have been watching the progress of the bearing in question, and wished to witness the active demonstrations of what has always been thought a mechanical impossibility, viz, anti-fraction. The recent tests and demonstrations of this company have established beyond dispute that with the peculiar combination of simplicity and true mechanical science of the "Allen" bearing, this will be the universally accepted type.

The Story of "Crystal Rock"

A Natural Lithia

Water

Containing Minerals NOT Combined by Nature in Any Other Water In the World.

As told to me by E. P. McCue, original owner of the well and President of the Company.

"CROWQUILL"

I started to dig this well on my place on the 20th day of November, 1902.

It was complete in April, 1903.

I put in a pump that will throw 700 gallons per minute.

I have used the water for two years for irrigation purposes.

I did not know its medicinal values.

Until.

One day when the water was running in the ditch by the road

Mr. V. E. Blodgett, the well-known implement dealer of Santa Ana, Cal., drove by and said:

"That water looks good enough to drink."

"It is as sparkling and clear as any water I ever saw.

"I cannot find any water that agrees with me.

"I believe I will take a drink of it, if you don't mind, and if it doesn't hurt me in fifteen minutes it is all right."

He drank it and CRYSTAL ROCK was discovered!

From the wonderful effects of that drink he came again and again and told his friends of the wonderful water that gave back the health he had not known for 12 years.

More people kept coming every day.

One day before we stopped giving away water at the well I kept track and there were 98 buggies and wagons at the well.

People insisted that I should send it to them regularly at their homes, and I was forced to start in the business of selling CRYSTAL ROCK WATER in May, 1904.

I was advised by physicians and many people who were benefited by its use to have it examined, so I had Dr. Locher of Los Angeles, Cal., analyze it with the following result:

STATEMENT

By Dr. N. H. Morrison, Chief Surgeon Medical Department—Santa Fe. Santa Fe Coast Lines Hospital Association. Office of Chief Surgeon.

Los Angeles, Cal., Sept. 8, 1905.

E. P. McCue, Orange, Cal.

Dear Sir:—In accordance with your request I hand you the following:

Silicates and Silicic Acid	Good for Rheumatism.
Oxide of Alumina	Good for Dyspepsia.
Oxide of Iron	Enriches the blood.
Oxide of Calcium	Good as bone tonic and also neutralizes the acids.
Oxide of Magnesia	Good for the bowels and acids of the stomach.
Oxide of Potassium	Is an alterative
Oxide of Sodium	Is used in Gout and Rheumatism.
Oxide of Lithium	Good for the Kidneys.
Sulphuric Acid	Stimulant to blood and liver.
Carbonic Acid	Acts slightly upon the bowels.
Phosphoric Acid	Stimulant to nerve centers.
Hydro-Iodic Acid	Alterative.
Hydro-Bromic Acid	Stimulates the heart and is a good tonic.
Hydro-Chloric Acid	Stimulates secretions of the stomach and digestion.

Silicic Acid, Lithium, Hydro-Iodic Acid and Hydro-Bromic Acid are probably the most rare, and do not all exist combined in any other water in the world.

Hydro-Chloric Acid makes this Nature's own mineral water for stomach trouble, as the process of digestion cannot be started unless Hydro-Chloric Acid is in the system, thus making this water invaluable in treatment of stomach trouble.

No other well in the world has all the minerals that are combined in the CRYSTAL ROCK WATER.

"Can a million dollars buy the 'Buffalo Lithia Well?'"

"No, sir! It cannot, and a million dollars will not buy the CRYSTAL ROCK WELL either."

Doctors and professional men—railroad and salaried men—this should be a peculiarly attractive investment for YOU!

As a heavy drinker of Crystal Rock Water I will say that it is certainly the finest medicinal water I have ever tested.

I use it in my LABORATORY in preference to any other water, as well as in my home, and I cannot say enough in praise of this splendid water.

One reason I use Crystal Rock Water in our distills and retorts is it leaves no unpleasant sediment, or lime or alcaloids, and yet having the natural life-giving qualities of a perfect water.

I really think it ought to be in every home and HOSPITAL in the United States, as it is a great aid in the sick room, and its delicious taste and sparkling brilliancy adds beauty to any home or banquet table.

It is certainly superior to distilled water, as it has ALL of the life-giving properties that any good water can have and no mineral in excess.

There can be a great lot said about this wonderful water, but to cut a long story short —it is simply perfect. Very truly,

No. 1. DR. N. C. HERON.

It is with a sense of duty to the lovers of pure and healthy mineral waters that I recommend CRYSTAL ROCK mineral springs as furnishing a beverage at once healthful and delicious, corrective and harmless.

The disadvantages so often found with mineral waters in their disproportionate percentage of injurious carbonates of lime, is entirely absent in the CRYSTAL ROCK, where a scrutinous chemical analysis has found only such combinations as have a positive curative effect upon the diseased and disordered tissues and organs of the body.

Having used the water for some time myself I can testify to its good qualities from my own experience, and never fail to recommend its use to my patients in all instances.

With true appreciation, yours,

No. 2. AXEL EMIL GIBSON, D.O.

After using the water in my home as well as in the hospital for all patients, I am fully convinced that it is the best and purest water I have ever seen, or had the pleasure of testing. I use it freely. I recommend it to all my friends. I notice when they use it they stick to it, and in turn recommend it to their friends. All I can say, is, I want everybody that possibly can do so to try it, that is all I could wish for anyone. The water will convince the most skeptical.

Respectfully,

No. 3. (REV.) JOHN WALDO ELLIS (SUPT.)

After a thorough investigation and many practical tests of the Crystal Rock Water of Orange, Cal., I have come to the conclusion there is no better water on the market for table use, or as an aid to the physician in the treatment of the various disorders of the kidneys, liver and digestive organs it is an ideal mineral water. I have never found anything to equal it. In the treatment of fevers it is readily taken, easily retained and markedly assists in the reduction of temperature.

I give this water my cordial indorsement.

No. 4. D. F. ROYER, M.D.

A careful review of the claims made for the Crystal Rock Water of Orange, Cal., as well as a long personal experience in its use on my table as well as in my practice, leads me to heartily indorse this water for table use and for its undoubted value in helping the system eliminate poisons resulting from faulty digestion and constipation. For these purposes I consider it unrivaled.

No. 5. ALFRED J. SCOTT, M.D.

This is to certify that I have tested and tried the use of the Mineral Water which was brought to me from Mr. McCue's well in Orange county, Cal., by Mr. Henry W. Dierker, who visited the place recently. I found it superior to any mineral water I ever used or had used by my patients, who were suffering from diseases of the kidneys, liver and intestines; especially is it beneficial in rheumatism cases, acute or chronic, and I believe entirely curable if used long enough. The bromine in the water acts as a nerve-sedative. Very respectfully,

No. 6. H. ROSE, M.D.

From the analysis which you have submitted to me and from a limited experience with the Crystal Rock Water, I believe that it is a mild laxative and diuretic and that it is of value in rheumatic and bladder affections.

No. 7. C. M. BALL, M.D.

I use Crystal Rock Water in my practice and find it especially beneficial in bowel and kidney troubles. It is also a fine table water. I highly recommend it for these ailments in the sick room.

No. 8. DR. W. H GREEN.

I have been using the Crystal Rock Water for some time and I enjoy it as a table water, finding it very pleasing to the taste. Sincerely yours,

No. 9. R. D. EMERY, D.O.

This is to certify that we have used Crystal Rock Water in our homes for some time and enjoy it very much and have no reason to dispute the claims they make for its use and effect.

No. 10. LLOYD G. VON SCOTOC, M.D.

With reference to Crystal Rock Water, of Orange, I will cheerfully state that I have seen many good results from its use in rheumatic and gouty patients. I have prescribed it frequently.

Its diuretic action is very pronounced, and its absolute tastelessness is another good quality which it possesses. It is absolutely free from any disagreeable mineral taste.

No. 11. DR. MARY NOBLE.

To those who relish a drink of good water. I have used Crystal Rock Water for some months and am very much pleased with it and recommend it to my patients.

Yours truly,

No. 12. DR. LAURA M. LOCKE.

I am using and recommending Crystal Rock Water in my practice and home. I find it excellent for general use and effective in bowel and kidney trouble.

No. 13. W. S. GIBSON, M.D.

For nearly two years I have used the Crystal Rock Water, and am fully convinced it is the best remedy I have ever taken for stomach trouble, which I have had for years, also my general health has been greatly benefited.

No. 14. MIT. PHILLIPS, Druggist.

I have used Crystal Rock Water for a great many of my patients, and can highly recommend it. It is also good for infants who have trouble with indigestion.

No. 15. MRS. LILLIAN BAILEY.

Since your water has come under my observation, six month ago, I have noted beneficial results in different cases. Especially in patients suffering from rheumatism, kidney troubles and constipation. It is a fine diuretic and laxative.

It is a water that one can drink more freely of than ordinary water, having a good pure taste and is in every way a desirable water. I pronounce it equal to any Lithia Water, patients who have been under my care have used, cheerfully recommending it. I am respectfully,

I have at my home an orphan girl 18 years old. She has been afflicted with kidney and bladder trouble in its worst form, it having been pronounced incurable by expert doctors who have examined her. They diagnosed her case as tuberculosis and cystitis of the bladder and kidneys. She was in the hospital at Los Angeles three months, but could not get any relief from the excruciating pains she suffered, without opiates.

About two months ago I heard of the Crystal Rock Water, and since that time she has taken from three to four gallons per week. The severe pains have all left her and now the chances for her recovery are very good in spite of the experts' decision. The use of opiates has been entirely discontinued.

I can highly recommend the water, as it has proved in this case that its healing and medicinal properties are very great, and I now feel that with its continual use, the patient will entirely recover, the effect of the water in the past two months being little short of miraculous.

Thanking you on behalf of the young lady for the interest you have evinced in the case and for supplying the water, I am yours respectfully,

Crystal Rock Water

A Natural Lithia

I can conscientiously recommend Crystal Rock Water for kidney trouble. My little boy six years old had been troubled with kidney trouble ever since he was an infant. He used Crystal Rock Water three months. He is well now and has not used Crystal Rock Water for two months and has not been troubled any more, so I feel I cannot say too much in praise for the cause of his cure. Yours respectfully,

I have had rheumatism in my ankles for 8 years; at times I could scarcely walk or stand on my feet. I have used patent medicines and been treated by many physicians and used elastic silk hose, and in fact everything I could hear of, but nothing gave permanent relief until I began using Crystal Rock Water. About six months use has left me without a trace of my old affliction. I can assure you it is a pleasure to recommend this truly wonderful water. Yours truly,

We came to California for my wife's health, for she was in very poor health and the best doctor in Hiawatha, Kansas, said she had the worst stomach trouble that he ever had a hold of and we employed a doctor here for two and a half years without much benefit. Now she is using Crystal Rock Water for some time and she is very much benefited thereby. In fact she thinks so much of the water that she won't do without it. In regard to myself will say that I have a chronic sore on my leg and have tried blood purifiers, doctors and all kinds of remedies that were recommended to me, but none has done me so much good as Crystal Rock Mineral Water, for the sore is better than it has been for the last three and a half years. It also is an excellent drinking water.
No. 28. FRED BERBERMEYER.

For three years I have been suffering from catarrh of the stomach, and have tried doctors and patent medicines without relief. I have been using the Crystal Rock Water for about three weeks and am much better since I commenced its use. Yours truly,
No. 29. H. W. FORGY.

I have had severe stomach trouble for fifteen months, and could not eat anything without suffering intense pain. I tried doctors and patent medicines without being benefited in the slightest degree. I commenced using your Crystal Rock Water about three months ago and can now eat anything I wish. Yours very truly,
No. 30. MRS. MARSHALL WARREN.

My wife has been a sufferer for several years from chronic constipation. After trying all kinds of medicines she commenced to use the Crystal Rock Water and obtained immediate relief, and I can heartily recommend it above all medicines. Respectfully yours,
No. 31. G. T. SANDERS.

I have been a sufferer from kidney trouble for some time and have been so bad that I could hardly get any rest at night. After using the Crystal Rock Water for three weeks, I am practically cured, as I can now sleep from eight o'clock until daylight without being disturbed.

I can heartily recommend its use to persons afflicted in a like manner. Yours truly,
No. 32. J. Q. HANNAH.

I have had the diabetes for over a year and have been under the care of a physician during that time. There was only a slight improvement during the first six months and my physician advised me to use Crystal Rock Water freely in connection with his treatment. I immediately began to improve and have gained fifteen pounds in weight since I began its use.

I can heartily recommend Crystal Rock Water to all persons afflicted with kidney or bladder troubles. It certainly has done much for me, as I was pronounced incurable. Yours very truly,
No. 33. GEORGINA C. IRVIN.

I have been suffering for two years with diabetes. About eight months ago I began using Crystal Rock Water and I have been greatly benefitted by its use. I can heartily recommend it to all suffering from the same complaint. It is also a very pleasant drinking water. Yours truly,
No. 34. MRS. J. WILLIAMS.

My family consists of my wife, daughter and myself. Six weeks ago we commenced drinking exclusively water from your wells on West Chapman street, Orange, Cal. Each of us was suffering with those distressing symptoms which precede and attend chronic indigestion. Nearly every trace of trouble has disappeared in each case. Your wells will certainly become celebrated if you will let their virtues be known.

Any private inquiries, seeking more specific information, will be gladly answered.
No. 35. SAM'L F. WRIGHT.

Two years ago I had a severe attack of La Grippe, which settled on my kidneys and bladder, and I suffered so much that it was with difficulty I could get into bed. On November 12, 1903, Mr. J. R. Congdon of Santa Ana told me about the Crystal Rock Water and the good it was doing him. I got some of the water and in a few days could feel that I was improving.

Previous to using the water I could not walk a block or ride down town; now I ride all day, eat and sleep well and have gained sixteen pounds in weight. It is really wonderful the good it has done me and I can heartily recommend it to others suffering from a similar complaint. Yours truly,
No. 36. A. F. MORTON.

I have been using the Crystal Rock Water for kidney trouble and constipation, coupled with excess of uric acid. Although I have only used the water for a short time I am very much better and feel that it will entirely cure me. Yours very truly,
No. 37. P H. WALLING.

For the last twenty-five years I have been troubled with constipation in its worst form and for the last fifteen years with bleeding piles. About six months ago I was persuaded by my friends who had been benefited by the use of Crystal Rock Waters to try them for my ailments. I am glad to say that after six months' use of the water that I am completely cured of both ailments and can now eat anything I want without return of the trouble; which I have not been able to do in years. I feel I can not say too much in praise of Crystal Rock Water. Your truly,
No. 38. J. W. RICE.

I wish to express my appreciation for Crystal Rock Water. Having used it in my family for several months. It proved to be not only an excellent drinking water, but has fine medical qualities.

In my case it has been a general tonic and relieved catarrhal irritation in the head. Very truly yours,
No. 39. REV. E. J. MEESE.

During the past few years I have had several spells of La Grippe, resulting each time in nervous prostration and heart weakness, with a long, tedious convalescence. Last month I was taken with a severe attack of La Grippe, with a high fever and the usual trying symptoms. I was advised to drink a glassful once each hour of the Crystal Rock Water. Although I had heard much talk of the water possessing medical virtue, I had no confidence in its benefiting me, but decided to try it for a few hours before sending for my physician. The fever soon diminished, and I rested well. Continued using the water and no medicine. On the third day was able to be up and in a week's time was comparatively well.
No. 40. MRS. M. C. CUDDEBACK.

It is some more than two months since I commenced drinking the Crystal Rock Water, and I believe it has done me more good than all the medicine I have taken. I have had kidney trouble for a number of years, and I believe the water is good for constipation.
No. 41. M. P. HALLADAY.

After using Crystal Rock Water for three months I am cured of muscular rheumatism of many years' standing; also general health greatly improved. Yours truly,
No. 42. C. W. GATES.

I have been using Crystal Rock Water in my home as a drinking water and knowing the medicinal properties, I took it in large quantities, and am agreeably surprised as to the results. I had an extremely acid condition of the system of long standing and this has been largely eliminated as has also my rheumatism.
No. 43. MRS. A. M. TICKNER.

For the past five months my wife and I have been using the Crystal Rock Water and have both benefited by its use, our general health being greatly improved.

We can recommend its use for kidney troubles, and as a drinking water it is, in my opinion, unrivaled; if it is properly corked it is as good as the end of three or four weeks as when received from the well. Yours truly,
No. 44. L. STOLP.

After using the water of the "Crystal Rock Spring" for several months, I am fully satisfied that it is the best and purest water in this vicinity. Also that for stomach, kidney and bladder troubles it possesses qualities of peculiar value. I do not mean that its medicinal value is limited to these, but that its application to these has especially attracted my attention. Yours truly,
No. 45. ALEX. PARKER.

I have been in poor health and have had chronic kidney and bladder trouble and constipation for about 20 years. I can say Crystal Rock Water has been a great blessing to me, and I can cheerfully recommend it to anyone suffering as I have from these ailments. Address or call 415 West Fourth st.
No. 46. B. F. HEMACY.

I take pleasure in recommending Crystal Rock Water to all sufferers from dyspepsia. During my one year's residence in California I have used no other water, and to its effects attribute the fact that I am freer from stomach trouble than for many years, and this after using the most celebrated, as well as high-priced waters of the East. Very truly,
No. 47. MRS. L. C. MUSSELMAN.

This is to certify that Crystal Rock Water cured me of a very acute case of kidney trouble. I had alarming symptoms of Bright's disease, with rheumatism so bad that I was almost helpless; could not put on my shoes. I take pleasure in recommending Crystal Rock Water to all who are like afflicted. After drinking it, other water tastes flat and insipid. Yours truly,
No. 48. LEVINA COBLER.

I have used Crystal Rock Water for the last few months for stomach and kidney troubles and found it of great benefit. I find that after standing for weeks it still keeps that clear and sparkling look. I have no hesitancy in recommending it to anyone as one of the finest waters I have found in California.
No. 49. H. FAIRBANKS.

I wish to contribute a word of praise as regards the Crystal Rock Water. I have used the water for about four months and my general health has been greatly benefited thereby.

To judge from the number of people to be seen daily at the well, it must be, without question, of great benefit to many others. Respectfully yours,
No. 50. JAMES CARVER.

The water came to hand Saturday, and to say that it is the best I have ever used is putting it mildly. It is certainly well named—as it is the clearest water I ever saw. The people of the State should be advised of its good qualities. I believe that when it is put before the public you will be taxed to the utmost to supply the demand. I have tried all of the best mineral waters of the State but never had any to equal the effect of Crystal Rock. It is just splendid. Very truly yours,
No. 51. WM. D. WASSON.

After drinking the water from your remarkable well I can confidently recommend its use to all persons afflicted with any form of kidney or bladder disease, feeling sure that it will afford them the same relief that it has given me. I consider it far superior to the famous "Buffalo Lithia Water." Gratefully yours,
No. 52. E. D. COOKE.

Crystal Rock Water has helped me, and can say I think without it I would soon suffer with my old trouble. I drink it, talk about it, recommend it in my restaurant, and advertise it on my signs. With gratitude to you for introducing it to me, I am, very respectfully,
No. 53. S. D. HALLOCK.

I am glad to learn that you have established a depot for your water in this city, and have pleasure in expressing my appreciation of the quality of the water after using it for a number of months past, having been supplied from Orange, where your well is located. I consider your water about the best of the natural waters I have been able to procure in these parts. Yours truly,
No. 54. G. HOLTERHOFF, JR.

You wrote me two weeks ago that you would have an agency established in this city within a few days. If you have, please let me know at once, as I must have the water if I have to take a pail and go down myself for it. I am entirely out of water and you will do me a favor in replying to this at once. Many of my friends are also anxious to get the water. Please answer immediately and oblige, yours respectfully,

The Elixir of Life.

The gurgling, bubbling sparkling water from the big well at West Orange still continues to belch forth under the pressure of the pumps, and is used mostly for irrigation, but as a beverage of rare medicinal qualities, it is steadily gaining favor. In fact its curative virtues are being continually heralded abroad.

We are informed that a physician in Los Angeles comes down with his big automobile and takes back fifteen gallons of this elixir of life exclusively for typhoid fever patients. Then others who have given this water a fair trial declare that it is good for kidney trouble, and others who have been drinking this water on general principle say that all other water tastes deucedly flat, and in consequence the list of callers at the well with bottles, demijohns, and growlers daily increases.

Time brings many changes, for thirty-three years ago we were on the ground, then the quaint old country home of Senor Don Rodrequez, a stock raiser. Now amid the beautiful and fragrant orange trees heavily laden with golden fruit, may yet be erected a sanatorium of great renown where the halt, the sick and blind may partake of healing waters of the modern Pool of Siloam.

Valuable Water Owned by Local Man.

E. P. McCue, while drilling a well for irrigation purposes on his ranch between Anaheim and Santa Ana recently struck a flow of water which has given abundant evidence of possessing remarkable curative powers.

Scores of people who have drank the water have been cured of stomach trouble and diseases of long standing, while hundreds of people throughout this county and other adjoining counties besiege the McCue ranch every day, bringing with them jugs, pitchers, jars, demijohns, and all kinds of receptacles in which to take away this wonderful healing water.

Mr. McCue is making no effort whatever to advertise the water, as he intends to take up the matter soon of erecting a large sanatorium on his ranch. Although he is giving the water away to people from all parts of the country, Santa Ana doctors state that it is at least worth $1 a gallon.

Many people who have drank the water only for a week or two have been relieved from chronic diseases, especially those of stomach trouble and nervous prostration. Reports of some of the most remarkable cures have reached Mr. McCue, which upon investigation were found to be authentic. One man, a life long sufferer from nervous disease of the stomach, offered Mr. McCue $500 after being cured, but the money was refused. A number of cures have been affected right in this county and around Mr. McCue's home.

The well is located on the corner of the ranch, and the adjoining property, it is stated, could not be purchased for $40,000 today, while before this wonderful water was discovered it could have been purchased for almost a mere song.

Struck Medicine Water.

Special to the Daily News.

ORANGE COUNTY (Cal.) July 19.—Hundreds of people are still flocking to the Crystal Rock spring for the medicinal qualities of the water.

While boring an artesian well an enormous flow of mineral water was struck at a great depth and a test showed its wonderful curative properties. The water has proven such a cure for various ailments that it has been put upon the market under the name of Crystal Rock.

THE SANTA ANA MORNING DISPATCH.

Sunday, July 31, 1904.

Crystal Rock Water.

Editor Dispatch:—It may be of interest to know the favor that has attended the introduction of this most famous drinking and healing water.

For some eight months after the discovery of the medicinal properties of this water, Mr. McCue, the proprietor of this well, invited the public to come and drink and carry off all they wished, without charge. When once the wonderful curative properties and virtues of this water were fully established the proprietor felt that the public would cheerfully compensate him, in part at least, for the great expense in developing this well and furnishing liquid healing to the afflicted. Since he has charged for the water the people continue their visits to the well and cheerfully pay the small sum charged for its use.

From early morn till evening the McCue well is the busiest place in Orange County. Agents getting their supply to carry off to their respective territory and transients to get a supply for medicinal use, tend to make this a veritable bee-hive of industry.

The writer was among those who sought the benefits resulting from this water. He experienced such marked improvement from its use that he thought he had found the fountain of youth, so long sought for in vain. He became interested to learn what it had done for others.

A few days tarrying at the well and being of an inquisitive disposition he soon found that rheumatism, kidney and bladder troubles, constipation and other weaknesses resulting from overtaxed organs and defective digestion, yielded to the free use of this water and made old people feel young again and the lame to walk without crutches and an easy restful feeling to take place of much suffering.

Expert chemists who have analysed it say it has curative properties far surpassing the Buffalo Lithia Water and predict for it a wonderful popularity.

Four leading doctors have certified to its virtues as a remedial agent. One expressing himself thus: "I have found this water superior to any mineral water I have ever used or had used by patients who were suffering from diseases of the kidneys, liver and intestines, especially is it beneficial in rheumatic cures, acute or chronic, and I believe will entirely cure such cases if persistently used for a reasonable time."

W. D. Wasson, editor of the San Francisco Daily News, after using it for some time says: "To says it's the best water I ever used is putting it mildly. It is certainly well named as it is the clearest water I ever saw. The people of the State should be advised of its good qualities. I believe that when it is put before the public you will be taxed to the utmost to supply the demand. I have tried all the best mineral waters of the state but never found any to equal the beneficial effects of Crystal Rock. It is just splendid."

Others living right in our city testify equally as strong as to the good qualities of this as a drinking water but more especially of its virtues as a remedial agent. Abandon drugs and patent medicines and drink this water that the God of nature has provided for the healing of the nations and you will feel new life and vim coming back into your being.

ORANGE NEWS.

Orange, Orange Co. Cal.

August 23, 1905.

The Crystal Rock Water Company was incorporated last week with a capital stock of $200,000, in shares of $1 each.

The directors are: E. P. McCue, Lillian McCue, N. H. Morrison, F. H. Ainsworth, and D. F. Royer.

The directors met for organization on Monday evening, at Orange, and elected the following officers: E. P. McCue, president; N. H. Morrison, vice-president; Lillian McCue, secretary, and D. F. Royer, treasurer. Dr. Morrison, the vice-president, is chief surgeon of the Santa Fe, with headquarters at Los Angeles, and Dr. Ainsworth is chief surgeon of the Southern Pacific at San Francisco. Orange is named as the principal place of business of the company.

The well of the company is located in West Orange, on the property of E. P. McCue. The water has been on the market for about two years and has now a reputation medicinally second to none.

When such medical men as those on the directorate give the water their approval, it stamps it as good.

Will Boom Orange County.

Crystal Rock Water Co. Capitalized for $200,000.

E. P. McCue, owner of the Crystal Rock well at West Orange, informs us that he has succeeded in organizing a stock company capitalized for $200,000 to handle this water on its merits. The proposition promises to be a gigantic sucess financially and will prove to be a wonderful advertisement for this valley.

The water has been analyzed and thoroughly tested until it is known beyond a doubt that it is the most valuable in the United States, and its real simon-pure merits will be spread broad-cast in every state in the union. You know what the famous Carlsbad water in Germany and the Hot Springs of Arkansas, have done for the suffering humanity, but even greater things may be expected of Crystal Rock.

When such conservative and influential men as Dr. N. H. Morrison, of Los Angeles, Chief Surgeon Santa Fe, and Dr. Ainsworth of San Francisco, Chief Surgeon, Southern Pacific Co., permit their names to be associated with this enterprise, it is safe to predict that they were perfectly satisfied with the chemical analysis of the water and its great health giving qualiti—

Millinery and Women's Garments

Among the strongest attractions Price is the Magnet
You all know that Broadway Prices are everlastingly the lowest

This opening sale is unique, inasmuch as we offer all sorts of new and seasonable merchandise at lower prices than will be charged at the end of the season by most stores for the same class of goods. There's no philanthropy connected with our merchandizing. An exceptionally strong and unusually well manned buying organization, coupled with the greatest outlet for merchandise in the Golden West, places us in position to undersell competitors. PRICES EVERLASTINGLY THE LOWEST is no myth, but a well-known and generally recognized fact. For this opening sale we've prepared an unparalleled feast of bargains that will appeal to the thrifty of all classes and both sexes. Not a few leaders picked here and there, but a broad and far-reaching aggregation of attention-compelling values that will provide opportunities for money saving and draw crowds to our store daily. Read every item and come expecting all of these and hundreds more equally strong values, which are not in print. Watch our windows. Changes will be made daily.

The Field of Fresh Literature—What Authors Are Saying, Doing and Writing

NEW BOOKS REVIEWED.

BELLES LETTRES.

A Book of Essays.

STUDIES OF A BOOKLOVER. By Thomas Marc Parrott. James Pott & Co., New York.

It has seldom been the privilege of the critic to have given to him for an estimate a volume so well worthy of criticism. These essays are, as says their author, but studies, mere sketches, bearing the same relation to a finished production as does the varnished and framed canvas of the painter to the hasty note or impression recorded in sketch book or pad. But for the reader these studies have a charm which the more carefully finished production might lack. They have caught the spirit of the moment, they have the strength, the atmosphere, the vitality and withal the freshness of inspiration. There has been no attempt at making the essays present a theory, or even conform to one. There is no necessary connection between the studies—except that which comes from the personality of the author. There has not been observed even the chronological order, for the little volume begins with a study of Matthew Arnold and an essay upon the laureate of Edinburgh holds second place.

The volume might well have been entitled "A Defense of Certain Writers," or "An Appreciation," so optimistic is its tone and so consistently does the author hold up for the reader the best view of the writer. If, as the author says, this book is a record of travels in "the pleasantest of lands—the land of books," the journeying was done when the sun was at his brightest, the season at its fairest. It is not only interesting, but grateful to find such a scholarly and yet enthusiastic discussion of the poetry of Matthew Arnold. Our gratitude may arise from the fact that we have felt, as does Prof. Parrott, that Arnold as a poet is too little known and where known does not receive his due meed of praise, nor his proper assignment of place among the English poets. It was, therefore, with pleasure that we read: "Enough has been said to justify Matthew Arnold's claim to a place among the greater Victorian poets—if hardly the equal of Tennyson or Browning, yet in the same class with them. Indeed it seems by no means improbable that a poet of such grace and purity, of such high artistic ideals and achievements, of such moral dignity and manly fortitude, will come to be recognized more and more clearly with the years that make impartial judgment possible, as one of the great masters in the broad and lovely realm of English poetry."

Descending from the mountain tops, from the atmosphere of scholarship and learning, where we have walked with Arnold, we find ourselves in "old Edinburgh," where during the early years of the eighteenth century there flourished the Pandemonium Club, the Hell Fire Club and the Sulphur Club—showing the reaction from the strict rule of the kirk session. Then comes Edinburgh of the latter half of the century, with more money, more freedom and the rise of what may be called a new school in learning and letters. Robertson, the leader of the liberalist in the church, was president of Edinburgh University, and it was under him that the foundations not only of a new era in the history of the institution were laid but the entire literary atmosphere of the town was changed. His colleagues were David Hume, the philosopher and historian, and Adam Smith, the most profound and original thinker of his day, and around the table of Hume in his little flat at Canongate, to partake of soupe a la reine, or cabbage and beef, or mutton and claret, gathered men whose impress upon literature, philosophy, law and theology has lasted even to this day. Into the midst of this company, from a dirty little alley off High street, came the laureate, Robert Fergusson. His talents quickly won him a membership in the famous Cape Club—that club which enrolled the names of all sorts of men, from the talented painter, Raeburn, to Deacon Brodie, the burglar. Stevenson has called Fergusson a "poor, drunken, vicious boy." Poor and drunken and boy he was, and he died in a madhouse at 24, but of the charge of viciousness he must be exempted. Almost unknown to the world he is, and no monument, even in Edinburgh, keeps his memory green. There is only a tombstone erected by Robert Burns, who, "like the impulsive, generous peasant poet he was," . . . threw himself on his knees and with hot tears in his eyes kissed the sacred earth that covered the mouldering body of his predecessor and master." But another Scotsman has erected for those who are privileged to understand, a monument more lasting and effective than stone or bronze. Stevenson wrote: "I may tell you (because your poet is not dead) something of how I feel. We are three Robins who have touched the Scots' lyre this last century. Well, one is the world's. He did it; he came off; he is forever; but I, and the other, ah! what bonds we have. Born in the same city; both sickly; both vicious; both pestered—one nearly to madness and the other to the madhouse—with a damnatory creed; both seeing the stars and the moon, and wearing shoe leather on the same ancient stones, under the same pends; down the same closes where our common ancestors clashed in their armor, rusty or bright—he died in his acute, painful youth and left the models of the great things that were to come; and the man who came after outlived his green sickness and faintly tried to parody his finished work."

The essay headed "The Autobiography of Milton," by which the author would have us understand all the work of the man, has not the interest of either of the two preceding studies. But that upon the personality of Dr. Johnson, while it gives us nothing to add to our store of actual knowledge, is a charming appreciation of one whom the author believes combined in his person "the noblest qualities of manhood—courage, courtesy, wisdom and love."

"The Frugal Note of Gray" is an interesting study of this poet, of whom it is said: "During his lifetime he condescended to publish exactly a dozen poems, and the barrenness of his productive powers may be measured by the fact that when to these poems there are added all that the diligence of successive editors have been able to collect. . . . the whole occupies something less than two hundred pages in the most elaborate edition of his works." But Prof. Parrott considers that this "petty harvest" is atoned for by the perfection of that which has been given, and that the work of the poet is marred only by the extreme reticence of the man—a reticence which may be accounted for by the fact that the man was born into an age when prose, not poetry, was the fashion, or, and with more reason, because of his scholarly temper, his bad health and his general temperament.

Following this essay come those upon Goldsmith and Scott, and the little excursion into the "pleasantest land" ends with a delightful study of the vitality of Browning. It is, indeed, a pleasure to come upon so sane an article upon this robust poet,

"One who never turned his back, but marched breast forward,
Never doubted clouds would break,
Never dreamed, though right were worsted, wrong would triumph,
Held we fall to rise, are baffled to fight better, sleep to wake."

BIOGRAPHY.

Constantine.

CONSTANTINE THE GREAT. The Reorganization of the Empire and the Triumph of the Church. By John B. Firth. G. P. Putnam's Sons, New York.

In the third century of the Christian era the power of Imperial Rome seemed about to end forever. From every side she was overrun and defeated. But Claudius arose and chose for his helper Diocletian and these two in turn chose Caesars who regained the authority which had been Rome's and held it against the invaders. Of this time and these events our author tells in the first chapter of this book and in the next we read how Diocletian persecuted the Christians and how the outlook for the church was indeed dark. But in the third chapter we are told of the coming of Constantine into power—of Constantine, who was the son of one of the Caesars, Constantius, who had ruled with Diocletian, and who after the abdication of that Emperor entered upon the imperial office, while the son succeeded his father in the command of Gaul, Spain and Britain.

But interesting as is the story of the rise of Constantine to the high position of Emperor, of more vital import is the tale of his connection with the Christian Church. Our historian tells of the turning of the Roman to the religion of Christ and his account is drawn from that of the historian, Eusebius. Constantine, about to enter upon a campaign against superior forces, "thought in his own mind what sort of god he ought to secure as an ally." Then there came into his mind the fact that all his predecessors, who had believed in many gods, had, apparently, been little benefited by their faith, inasmuch as all of them had met disappointment, defeat and death. "The gods at whose altars they had offered rich sacrifice and plenteous libation, had deserted them in their hour of trouble, and had looked on unmoved while they and their families were exterminated from off the face of the earth, scarcely leaving so much as a name or a recollection behind them. . . . Whereas, on the other hand, his father, Constantius, had believed in but one god, and had marvelously prospered throughout his life, helped and protected by this single deity who had showered every blessing upon his head." But the question was, what god should Constantine honor? He asked for a sign and his biographer tells how it came: "The answer came one afternoon, when the sun had just passed its zenith and was beginning to decline. Lifting his eyes the Emperor saw in the heavens, just above the sun, the figure of a cross, a cross of radiant light, and to it was attached the inscription 'Conquer by This.' . . . All that afternoon the Emperor pondered upon the significance of the words, and night fell while he was still asking himself what they could mean. Then, as he slept, Christ appeared to him in a dream, bearing with Him the sign that had flamed in the sky, and bade the sleeper make a copy of it and use it as a talisman whenever he gave battle."

Thus runs the story, and from that time the Emperor Constantine became the protector of the Christians and devoted himself to advancing the welfare of the church. Persecution of the sect was stopped and the adherents of the religion of Christ grew in numbers and strength. But with the growth came dissension within the ranks of the church and it is to Constantine that credit must be given for attempting to bring concord out of discord. It was he who called the Council of Nicaea and who endeavored to reconcile the warring Arians and Athanasians and who presided at the formation of the creeds which have been accepted as embodying the essentials of Christianity. It is the chapters entitled "Constantine and the Donatists," "The Arian Controversy," "The Council of Nicaea," and "Arius and Athanasius," that give clearly and simply, and we may add, fairly, the history of the great hour and events in the life of the church.

Of the last days and death of the Emperor and of his character, we have an interesting account and summary. It will, we think, surprise many to read that the great advocate of Christianity was not baptised unil he was practically upon his death bed. Many have been the attempts to reconcile his life and belief with this fact and no satisfactory conclusion has yet been reached.

We would say in concluding our criticism of this book that it gives in readable form the history of a time which is of the utmost importance in the story of mankind, being as it was a crucial moment in the existence of the empire and in the development of the church. It is a book which should have many readers.

FICTION.

A Story About Children.

THE COMING OF BILLY. By Margaret Westrup. Harper & Bros., New York.

Why does the adult world so enjoy stories about children? And why does it particularly crave those which tell of the naughtiness of the smaller members of the human race? Maiden ladies, whose nerves cannot for an instant tolerate the noisy play of the boy next door and who consider well-meaning, but blundering little girls impertinent minxes, will, when undisturbed by those small neighbors, read with hearty enjoyment of the manifold sins and wickednesses of the hero of a story about children. These same old ladies—no, middle-aged ladies—will even sympathize with the story boy and rejoice with him when he wriggles out of merited punishment. Bachelors, too, with less knowledge of babies than of the chemical composition of high explosives, will chuckle with unmannerly glee over the story of the day of an infant. These interesting facts are well known. The explanation is yet to come, and we await the solution of the question with interest.

In the meantime, we, who are neither elderly maid nor bachelor, are willing to confess that stories about children have for us much charm. We consider our liking to have three factors: We are fond of children, hence what pertains to them interests us: We have recalled to us by these tales remembrances of our own childish days and—shall we confess it? our infantile naughtiness; and thirdly, we are thoroughly convinced that if we would we could produce a book of this nature much more worth while than the specimen in question. We have upon this subject the same conviction that is ours when we listen to our minister's sermon of a Sunday morning. The pity is that we cannot find an editor who coincides with our belief.

In "The Coming of Billy" is given the story of a real boy. Set down in the midst of four maiden aunts, he has an opportunity to exhibit all the qualities that pertain to the genus. But Billy is also a thorough little gentleman, doing his best according to the inner light that is his; sorry, within reason, for his mistakes; ready, like the rest of us, to promise better things for the future. Margaret Westrup has given a life-like picture of the boy of six. Of the other characters in the book, so much cannot be said. The aunts are either exaggerated or drawn too lightly. They are almost caricatures—so overboldly have certain characteristics been recorded, and the work as a whole has been greatly marred by such treatment of the secondary personages. The handling of the same class in "Elizabeth's Children" was much more skillful.

But the book is one that will be enjoyed, and this not only because of the really entertaining performances of Billy and his playmate, Leslie, the gentle little girl, whose meeting with Billy is thus described:

"'You two must make friends,' Mrs. Herrick said. 'Come here, Leslie, and sit beside this little boy.'

"Billy's cheeks burned. He watched with somber eyes the dainty approach of the slim little girl.

"Side by side they sat, in dead silence. Billy's brown eyes traveled stealthily toward his neighbor. A neat little shiny black shoe; higher a long, slim, black leg; higher, soft, white folds of a loose frock, in the lap of which two little white-gloved hands were folded demurely. Billy turned a disgusted back on it all. But presently his eye came round again; it traveled higher this time—silky, brown hair falling in loose curls, so tidy, so silky, that Billy's nose curled derisively. He glanced scornfully at the small grave face beneath the large, white hat. Two gray eyes met his solemnly; the mouth was closed demurely. Slowly, as Billy stared incredulously, the little nose above that mouth crinkled—crinkled into an unmistakable rude grimace. Billy's eyes opened wide; with a sigh of relief he screwed his face into the grimace that used to scare his ayah, then observed, 'Hollo.'

"She bent toward him till the floppy brim of her hat tickled his ear, but Billy bore the tickling without a murmur, for she said: Oh, that's the loveliest I've ever seen! Do it again!"

"After which the road to friendship lay sunny and clear before them."

POETRY.

Helen Hay Whitney.

SONNETS AND SONGS. By Helen Hay Whitney. Harper & Bros., New York.

TOO LATE.

Upon your stone the wine of my desire
Is spilled. Your poppy lips have grown too pale
From fasting. Your white hands will not avail
The cold eyes of your heart to light the fire.
I did not think my prayers could ever tire.
Now, like doomed ships, they flutter without sail,
Lost in a calm which held no rock, no gale—
Now, when your chilly smile bids me aspire!

So, without history, my soul is slain—
Woman of barren love; the wine was red—
Beautiful for your spending. Not again
Will the bud blossom where the frost has sped.
Timid, you dared not hark when angels sang.
All, all is lost, without one saving pang.

This sonnet from the collection of Helen Hay Whitney, the talented daughter of her distinguished father, has not been quoted because it is the best that we have from her pen. It has been given rather because it is typical of the spirit which pervades the poetry of Mrs. Whitney. It is characteristic, too, we may say, of a school of American poetry. Those who are its disciples delight, all of them, although with varying measure of success, in giving expression to the pessimism that is characteristic of the school. Unfortunately, not all who write in this mood are able to deck their sentiments in garments of such beauty and richness as come from the storehouse of Mrs. Whitney.

Mrs. Whitney, too, saves herself from classification with those whose pathos often is bathos, by the versatility of her talent. Although she has, in the main, not departed in the form of her verse from the accepted and often-used models, nevertheless she has shown herself through her verse a woman of deep insight, wide experience and true poetical feeling—and this aside from from may be called the mechanics of verse, that which has to do with the words and phrases, the figures and musical impression produced.

The sonnet seems a form particularly suited to the talent of the author. From the garland that she gives us we can select half a dozen that we feel should be shared with our readers, but we must be content with but one or two blossoms. This, called "To a Woman," is for certain reasons—chiefly, perhaps, aside from several happy combinations of words, because of the idea—one that has not found expression in just this form—quoted in its entirety:

"Take all of me, pour out my life as wine,
To dye your soul's sweet shallows. Violent sin
Blazed me a path, and I have walked therein,
Strong, unashamed. Your timorous hands need mine,
As the white stars their sky, your lips' pale line
Shall blush to roses where my lips have been.
I ask no more. I do not hope to win—
Only to add myself to your design.

"Take all of me. I know your little lies,
Your light dishonor, gentle treacheries.
I know, I lie in torment at your feet,
Shadow to all your sun. Take me and go,
Use my adoring to your honor, sweet
Strength to your weakness—it is better so."

But the sonnet is not the only form of expression that allures the talent of the poet. We have the Song of the Oregon Trail, of which the third verse runs:

"And, oh! I fear, I fear the dead!
I fear their fingers, grasping and pale,
I did not fear the dead last year—
But now the kisses of my dear!
The breast of her, so kind and warm,
Ah, heart! I must not come to harm—
How far the goal! How long the trail!

This breathes a happier note and right glad are we to find it:

"Day that began with a tear,
Will you end with a sigh?
Stay! See the blossoming year,
Laugh up to the sky.
Nay, here's a hope for your fear,
Sweet sorrow—good-by!"

And in the poem which the poet entitles "Fight," is the ringing call to the conflict that finds an echo in the hearts of the young men and women of the twentieth century.

"Fight, though the bulwarks of your faith may fall,
Life become gray and full of weariness,
Love prove a lie and wisdom bitterness—
Fight, for the strife alone avails for all.

"Fight and fight on, exulting in the light,
Standing alert and upright gleefully,
Seizing life's joys and woes courageously,
Man to the end, and master—laugh and fight."

OTHER REVIEWS.

[BY A TIMES REVIEWER.]

THE HISTORY OF NORTH AMERICA. Guy Carleton Lee, Ph. D., General Editor. Volume XI. Canada and British North America. By W. Bennett Munro, LL. B., Ph. D., Instructor in Government in Harvard University; late Instructor in History in Williams College. Printed for subscribers only by George Barrie & Sons, Philadelphia.

"The history of the United States is so interwoven with the history of Canada that every American must possess a working knowledge of the progress made by the Dominion if he would properly understand many of the important phases of the development of the United States. It is, however, from the Canadian and not the American standpoint that the account of the history of the British possessions in North America must be viewed if one is to have a correct estimate of the reciprocal influences exerted by the United States of America and the Dominion of Canada and a fair judgment of the policies and achievements of these two great governments."

So speaks the general editor of this series of volumes, Prof. Guy Carleton Lee of Johns Hopkins University. The author of this Canadian volume is himself a Canadian "to whom his country is a great and important unit in the sum of American progress." He himself says of his work that it "makes no claim to originality either as regards the matter which it contains or as regards the method of presentation. The greater part of the source materials in the field of Canadian history have been so well worked over by careful investigators that it seemed needless to glean where they had garnered. . . . "Still," he adds, "I have not hesitated to go to the sources whenever the necessity of so doing appeared."

The reader who accepts these words of the author regarding the book's lack of originality will be happily disappointed in his reading of it. The logical method of presentation, at least, the sequence and connection of events make an exceptional impression upon the reader's mind—and herein is the pith of history writing, surely. It is no common achievement to condense the history of the Canadian provinces into one volume and make of it at once so complete, so philosophical and at the same time so readable a work. Prof. Munro's later chapters on recent development of Canada, the Alaskan and Newfoundland disputes, etc., are especially able and interesting.

The volume carries the history of the country from the early discoveries and settlements and the rule of commercial companies through the periods of earlier conflict and development, the effects of union and confederation, down to the present day. Prof. Munro looks forward with optimistic expectation to the future development of Canada on independent lines. "The child of two great nations," he says, "the Dominion may now be said to have won herself a place among the nations of the world."

United States, 1809-1837.

THE HISTORY OF NORTH AMERICA. Guy Carleton Lee, Ph. D., editor. Vol. XII. The Growth of the Nation. By R. T. Stevenson, Ph. D., Professor of History in Ohio Wesleyan University. George Barrie & Sons, Philadelphia.

This volume takes up the history of the United States where the earlier volume by Prof. Moran on the Constitution, leaves it. The political development of the country especially interests the author, and this is studied minutely and admirably at all points of its evolution and in its various phases. The result is a work possibly somewhat heavy to the average reader, but absorbing to those to whom history is something more than a mere chain of events. A splendid summing up of the general intellectual evolution of the period follows and completes the study of the political development.

MISCELLANEOUS BOOKS.

On Marriage.

MARRIAGE. By Jane Dearborn Mills. The Nunc Licet Press, Philadelphia. (Price 50 cents.)

It is a pity that the idea of marriage is so continually degraded by the vulgarity of the average view, which either avoids the subject or debases it in speech. Long ago the race was robbed of its heritage of naturalness and beauty in this relation, and so completely defrauded of it that the serious-minded, who look deeper than the common religious cant or the commoner evil jest, must e'en, for the most part, like Cordelia keep silence for very shame and fear. One of these serious-minded ones has, however, broken this rule of silence in a manner to be respected and admired; not after the pattern of those pseudo-reformers who are but moral perverts and degenerates seeking every opportunity to discourse on forbidden themes, but naturally, without hysteria or cant, in praise of the spiritual desirability of love with honor. The book is written by a woman, yet certainly a woman of exceptional brain and exceptional purity of mind, since it contains both much practical common sense and even as much ideality. It deserves a much wider circulation than Dr. Felix Adler's recent strained and hectic dissertation on the same subject.

An Uplifting Book.

FOR EACH DAY A PRAYER. Selected and arranged by Elizabeth Hamill Davis. Dodge Publishing Company, New York. (Price $1.25.)

Here is a book that is worth owning, for both its literary and its spiritual beauty. It is made up of 365 "prayers" in prose and verse—including supplications like Newman's "Lead, Kindly Light," Tennyson's "Crossing the Bar," Whittier's "Thy Will Be Done" and the beautiful old hymns that all of us love, Christian and unbeliever alike—"Rock of Ages," "Jesus, Lover of My Soul," "Nearer, My God to Thee," etc. Among the names of the author from whose work the selections are taken are John Quincy Adams, Louisa M. Alcott, Michael Angelo, Henry Ward Beecher, Stopford Brooke, Phillips Brooks, Elizabeth Barrett Browning, Robert Browning, Burns, Calvin, Alice Cary, William Cowper, Dante, King David (psalms,) Dryden, George Eliot, Emerson, Epictetus, Canon Farrar, Fenelon, Frederick the Great, Richard Watson Gilder, Frances Ridley Havergal, John Hay, Mrs. Hemans, George Herbert, J. G. Holland, Oliver Wendell Holmes, Saxe Holm, William Dean Howells, Jean Ingelow, Stonewall Jackson, Dr. Johnson, Thomas A. Kempis, Kipling, Sidney Lanier, Longfellow, Luther, George MacDonald, Ian Maclaren, James Montgomery, Thomas Moore, Dinah Maria Mulock, Theodore Parker, Alexander Pope, Adelaide Procter, Christina G. Rosetti, Margaret Sangster, Rev. Charles M. Sheldon, Sir Phillip Sidney, Robert Southey, Anne Steele, Robert Louis Stevenson, Bayard Taylor, Jeremy Taylor, Augustus M. Toplady, Archbishop Trench, Bishop Tuttle, Henry Van Dyke, Rev. John H. Vincent, Charles Wesley, Archbishop Whateley, with those of other famous men and women. The book is one of the most desirable and really valuable among those following the calendar form.

The Beauty Doctor.

THE FOUNTAIN OF YOUTH. By Grace Peckham Murray, M. D. Frederick A. Stokes Company, New York.

Those who are wont to read the beaty columns in the Sunday newspapers will find this book very much to their taste. It gives detailed directions for washing the face, for steaming and massaging, training the eyebrows, correcting protruding ears and badly shaped nose, for brushing the teeth, correcting the fatty chin, for shampooing and singeing and otherwise caring for the hair, for manicuring, removing wrinkles, etc., etc. It appears as sensible as most of such books of directions—better, indeed, than the majority. Parts of it show the point of view of the trained physician, and are excellent.

Civil War Memoirs.

RECOLLECTIONS OF A CONFEDERATE STAFF OFFICER. By Gen. G. Moxley Sorrel. Neale Publishing Company, Washington.

This book, with commendatory introduction by John W. Daniel, contains some excellent descriptive material and much valuable and interesting anecdote regarding eminent men of the time. It follows the war from the battle of Manassas to its end, and is well written throughout. Senator Daniel says of it in his introduction: "This volume will be useful to the historian in giving him an insight to the very image and body of the times. It will carry him to the general's headquarters and from there to the picket-line; from the kitchen campfire and baking-oven to the hospital and ordnance wagon; from the devices of the commissary and quarter-master to the trenches in the battlefield; from the long march to the marshalled battle line; from the anxieties of the rear-guard of the retreat to the stern array of the charging columns. He will find some graphic accounts of leading characters, such as Longstreet, Ewell, D. H. Hill, A. P. Hill, Jeb Stuart, Early, Anderson, Mahone, Van Dorn, Polk, Bragg, and many others who shone in the lists of the great tourney. The private soldier is justly recognized, and appears in his true light all along the line, of which he was the enduring figure. Lee, great and incomparable, shines, as he always does, in the endearing majesty of his matchless character and genius."

NEW MAGAZINES.

The September Out West has a remarkable leader on the work of Luther Burbank. Honoria R. P. Tuomey, the author of the article, writes of Mr. Burbank's early life and in detail of some of his most interesting experiments. F. N. Fletcher concludes his sketch of Sacajawea, the Indian woman who acted as guide on the Lewis and Clark expedition. President Joseph F. Smith of the Church of Latter Day Saints contributes an article which he entitles "The Truth About Mormonism." The issue is notable for its fine illustrations.

Margaret Collier Graham has a short story in this month's Atlantic—"The Face of the Poor."

The Western Journal of Education for September has an article by J. A. McLaughry on the important question of "Ethical Training in Schools." "Education for Efficiency," by William H. Maxwell; "The Problem of School Extension," by Robert H. Lane; and "The Greatest Work of the High School," by Milton E. Blanchard, are other valuable papers. This periodical is steadily enlarging its sphere and represents the most progressive educational spirit of the country.

The Whittier boys and girls may justly be proud of their Camp Banning magazine number. It contains interesting matter and is very artistically put together.

The September Four Track News attracts the attention particularly by an article claiming that the achievements of engineers add fascination to the Niagara region. The article is entitled "Harnessed, But Not Hushed."

William Allen White has written for the October Reader an article on the fight in Kansas against the Standard Oil Company. The article, under the title, "The Kansas Conscience," is written in the style that is peculiarly Mr. White's.

"Shall the University Become a Business Corporation?" is a pressing question which is very ably discussed by President Henry S. Pritchett of the Massachusetts Institute of Technology in the September Atlantic. Standing, as he does, at the head of one of the greatest technical schools of the United States, which is widely known as a model of executive perfection, President Pritchett's wise and moderate plea for better balanced coöperation between the intellectual and the business powers of the university will attract wide attention.

From the artistic viewpoint, as well as that of fashion the October Delineator keeps the high standard it has attained as a woman's magazine. Many pages are given to the styles of the month, additional space being devoted to the New York and Paris fashions, set forth by Helen Berkeley-Loyd and Edouard La Fountaine; and the literary side, household topics and special feature are on an unusual plane of excellence. Of widespread interest to parents, teachers and all who lead or follow in educational lines is an exceptional article, "Education for Life Through Living," by William H. Maxwell, Superintendent of New York City Schools; N. Hudson Moore writes interestingly of old desks and secretaries, giving the hall-marks that enable the amateur to place them correctly; Allan Sutherland tells the history of "Onward, Christian Soldiers," the hymn that is the inspiration of the young; Clifton Johnson takes the reader across the wild coast of Devon into the wilder country that was Lorna Doone's. Mr. Paine's story, "The Lucky-Piece," and the third installment of Miss Winslow's "At Spinster Farm," furnish interesting reading of a lighter character. The marketing of milk is a vital public question in that it deals with the health, and consequently the life of the child. In this issue of the Delineator Mary Hinman Abel discusses the milk question in various phases. The title of another article "Club Women and the Food Question," shows something of how the campaign instituted in the interest of pure food has spread.

THE PSYCHOLOGY OF IT.

"There seems often to be such a lack of reasonable human motive in the activities of men commanding large fortunes, and manipulating financial enterprises and movements, that the curiosity of the ordinary mortal is aroused.

"The ordinary mortal is, perhaps, engaged in the common struggle of mankind to earn his own and his family's three meals a day, with something to spare for the condiments of life, including his fun, fads and altruisms, as well as a bit over for sickness and old age. He looks with atonishment and perplexity upon the group of old men who, on the crumbling brink of their grave, are still straining their brains, frames and consciences in the frantic accumulation of unnecessary millions.

"One of these persistent accumulators, who was also a congenial miser, was asked once by a friend of ours why he kept on thus unreasonably piling up [illegible] millions upon millions. 'You can't eat them or drink them, you have no reason to pile up more for your [illegible]—why do you work so hard in your old age gathering them together?' said our friend. The old miser retorted: 'Did you play marbles when you were a boy?' 'Yes.' 'Did you keep on winning them?' 'Yes.' 'Could you eat them or drink them?' 'No.' 'Why did you do it?' 'For the fun of the game.' 'That's why I do it!' triumphantly cried the old fellow; 'that's why I do it!'

"The fun of the game" accounts for a good deal. But there is another phase of the matter which continues to puzzle. How is it that supposedly "honorable men"—often men not without a certain chivalry, even, and who would be far from being classed by their acquaintances as among the depredators and degenerates—do things in their function and capacity of financiers which shock the conscience of the average [illegible] citizen. Is it that the command of great amounts of money, whether inherited or acquired, has somewhat the same psychological effect upon the individual as the being born into or being taken into a legalized aristocracy? Does it set the individual apart as belonging, as by right, to a caste, an order, a privileged class, to such an extent that it gets to be thought a [illegible] offense to stretch the laws of [illegible] a bit in the maintenance of one's [illegible] in this caste, or to increase [illegible] holdings and importance therein? Has not the reader—whom we suppose to belong to the natural order of human beings—noticed something in the mind of the very successful business man that sets him apart? The old [illegible] that the gods help those who help themselves has often a new and [illegible] meaning in the mind of [illegible].

"[illegible] and brilliant as are his [illegible], often his success is so prodigious as to astonish even himself, and [illegible] settles upon his consciousness a sense of the beneficence, to himself, of the unseen, mysterious powers. The gods have helped him, indeed; his God has helped him. He [illegible] exceptionally successful person, belongs to this peculiar caste of the [illegible] preposterously rich, by "divine right." In the division of profits [illegible] these be too anxiously and [illegible] considered by him who, as [illegible] shown no signs of belonging to this aristocracy of worldly [illegible] earthly wealth! He un[illegible], of course, that those who [illegible] unable to this success of [illegible] taken into account. But [illegible] mortal—well, the ordinary [illegible] take care of himself, even [illegible] favorite of the divine powers in the relation to the ordinary [illegible] of a sworn and confidential trustee.

"But there are signs that the ordinary mortal is beginning to take care of himself. It would seem to be high time."—[Editorial in September Century.

INDUSTRIAL PROGRESS IN JAPAN.

The Japanese are quartered on a narrow, very mountainous group of islands, having an area one-third less than the British Isles and about equal to that of California, of which only 15 per cent. is capable of cultivation. The dense population of from [illegible] to 50,000,000, all dependent upon the products of the field and the [illegible] waters, carry on their outdoor work by many an ancient method. The struggle for existence has not been an easy one. Yet with all this they are contented and happy, for the [illegible] has not been characterized by [illegible] and intense strain under which we labor. In this respect they [illegible] in their day and generation [illegible] are.

In considering Japan's progress it is well to remember that there are at least two viewpoints. One is the Japanese, and if we judge by their notions, the advancement during the time covered by the last half of Marquis Ito's public life alone is little less than marvelous. This is the point of view persistently put forward by them and [illegible] seen in newspapers. On the other hand, from the outlook of a foreigner who has lived in Japan and knows the average as well as the exceptional conditions, they still have a long way to go in their industries and [illegible] to attain the eminence [illegible] popularly given credit for having already reached.

[illegible] progresses. Her shipbuilding [illegible] also. So do her other industries. Were it possible, a hasty glance at a few other lines of Japanese industry would be of interest as showing in a general way the past and existing state and the present state of affairs. This comparison of industries should give the relative standing and position of shipbuilding as compared with the improvement and present standing of other industries and enterprises. It would also emphasize by evidence the fact that Japan's industrial growth has not been in shipbuilding alone, but that her growth has been along all lines, and, further, that shipbuilding has only been keeping pace with the national [illegible].

[illegible] only state that in coal, [illegible], and other mining she is using up-to-date appliances with good results. In the matter of electric railways, her urban and interurban lines are well equipped and [illegible]. Her steam railroads have been extended and improved, and the [illegible] and shops are in good [illegible]. The postal system is a credit to the nation. The telegraphs and telephones are efficiently conducted at half or less of what we must pay in this country. Cotton spinning and weaving mills are successful. Electric-light and power [illegible] operated some by steam and some by water, are starting up in all the [illegible] places. Gas plants are [illegible], and the large cities are already supplied with excellent waterworks. And so on through the whole list of enterprises there is progress and [illegible].—[Charles Albertson, in the Engineering Magazine for September.

CHEAPER TO KILL THAN TO SAVE.

[illegible] for September 2 shows to what extent the American railroad [illegible] disregard human life when it [illegible].

[illegible] disasters are seldom missing from the newspaper press. The supply is kept up in generous degree by [illegible]. The grade crossing has the merit of being as perilous as it [illegible], but there are plenty of [illegible] as full of danger and as free from any excusing need. During the first three months of this year there were 1787 collisions and 1321 derailments. It is reckoned that in the State of New York, where there is a law for the gradual abolition of grade crossings, an end will come, under this beneficent legislation, when 800 years have passed and 100,000 more individuals have been slain. The block system of signalling, which is in full force in Great Britain and several countries on the continent, is almost universally held to be far safer than any merely human agency, and one of the principal causes of safety abroad. The quality and type of car used in America is also frequently much below what it would be under efficient supervision by the State, and there are a score of undisputed ways in which the excessive danger accompanying American railway travel could be diminished. The only obstacle is the expense to the roads, which find it cheaper to pay what they must for the lives destroyed, after fighting in the courts and compromising with relatives, who have not time, money, or evidence enough for successful legal controversy. Great Britain and Ireland, transporting over a billion passengers, outside of suburban service, to our 750,000, killed twenty-five persons in 1904 to our 4000, and injured 769 to our 50,000. Railroads in Great Britain are not so free as they are with us to conduct their own business as they deem best.

[COUNTRY LIFE.]

THE TEXTURE OF THE SOIL.

Land is in good heart or good texture when it is in the right physical condition for growing crops, says Country Life in America for September. This means that it possesses the qualities expressed by such common farm words as mellow, loose, friable, porous, easy to work; and is not hard, cloddy, lumpy, leachy. It is not concerned with the mere richness of the soil in plant food, but it is concerned with the way in which that plant food is served to the growing crops. It does not mean the amount of water that a soil contains, but it does mean the facility with which that water is presented to the crop. Good texture means that the machinery of the soil is well oiled and in running order; not that there is plenty of raw material—plant food—in it out of which a profitable crop can be manufactured. I know of no better way of expressing it than in the language of the farm: The texture of the soil is the way it "works up." Everybody who has handled soil at all knows exactly what is meant by that.

WASTE IN PUBLIC PRINTING.

The waste in federal printing may be summed up as comprised in two general classes: such as occurs from various causes in the conduct of the printing plant itself; such as results in publishing pamphlets and volumes either really not needed at all, or, if needed, issued too expensively or in too large numbers. Of these two classes of waste, that existing in the plant is purely a business matter, and can be remedied to some extent by following more closely the best commercial methods. That occuring in connection with the character and amount of product can probably be met permanently only by some form of supervision dealing especially with the three questions which should be considered with every proposed publication: the question of publishing at all, the question of economy in mechanical presentation and the question of restricting the size of the edition so as not to exceed the number of copies required by a wise distribution. Distribution, indeed, forms a perplexing problem by itself. The commercial publisher catering to a definite demand avoids dead stock by reprinting. With federal publications the tendency is toward only one edition and that a liberal one. Herein is the possibility of serious waste; people are always to be found who will accept any kind of a book if it costs nothing. Therefore distribution is limited solely by the number of copies Congress or government officials are willing to issue. The object of most federal publications could be attained at a very small part of the present cost if they were sent free only to libraries and public institutions, and certain important newspapers which agree to review them, and sold for a nominal sum to all others. Such a policy would be a radical departure from present procedure—especially in the case of Congress, for little by little senators and representatives have become distributing centers and official book agents for literature on all subjects.—[W. S. Rossiter, in the September Atlantic.

[FOUR TRACK NEWS.]

AMONG THE MOORS.

No visitor to Morocco has ever asked himself what he was to do for entertainment. There is sport of every kind, from wild-boar hunting down to quail shooting; and further south one may even shoot panthers and hyenas. The lion does not begin until the Atlas Mountains are reached. Horses may be hired in Tangier for about a dollar and a half a day, including an American saddle; and for the ladies there are always comfortable mules provided, with any number of Arab and slave servants.

The slave market, by the way, is no longer one of the "sights" of Tangier, since Christian influence lon gago abolished it. This does not mean, however, that the slave trade is not carried on.

Indeed the traveler "in the know" may frequently see an old Arab merchant leading around a negro boy and girl by the ears from door to door, and he will learn that these are all that remain of an enormous slave caravan, obtained by Arab raiders as far south as the Tiger and mysterious Timbuctoo, in Central Africa.—[William G. FitzGerald, in Four Track News for September.

WOMEN IN NEWSPAPER WORK.

Miss Helen Winslow makes a bitter protest against newspaper work for women in a recent magazine article. She recounts her experience, first as an "all-round" worker upon a newspaper, then as the owner and publisher of a paper. She worked from the time she crept jaded from her bed till she dropped exhausted into it for a too brief rest, and she makes the confession that she is "a squeezed lemon."

"I am worn out," she writes. "My brain is fagged. When I walk along a country road today I see no visions. The babbling brooks, the singing birds, the blue skies above have no message for me. My head aches. There is no poetry left in me. I dropped it somewhere in those dusty, musty newspaper offices when I went home after midnight. . . . Human nature is no longer interesting to me. . . . I have seen too much of it. . . . 'But you have had your day,' says a younger newspaper woman. 'Why grumble now?' Because it was not the day I wanted, and I only meant to make it the stepping stone to something better. . . . I have done desultory work so long I cannot take up anything more thorough. I have been a hack too many years. I cannot be a race horse now. . . . Let the young woman who has ambitions of a literary nature shun the newspaper office as she would any other hurtful thing."

It seems hardly fair for Miss Winslow to attribute to the newspaper office that which should, in justice, be set at the door of life itself. Our visions fade with the years; we are all a little tired, and the poetry that once sang in us has been lost somewhere along the dusty road. We all know a good deal more than is comfortable about human nature—our own human nature in particular—and there are others besides Miss Winslow who have lost the message that the dawn sends; some men in the counting-house, some women over the kitchen range. Vast ambitions have been lost before now in a receptacle no larger than the darning basket or the scrubbing pail; and splendid interpretations of life have been obscured, as in an indecipherable palimpsest, under the ledger accounts.

Life's lessons are severe, and it is no more possible to sustain the exhilaration of adolescence than it is to keep, all the day through, the glory of the sunrise. We wear out here and there, doing this or that, and the inevitableness of disillusion makes us unite in prayer for patience and for pluck. Other virtues may come along in the train, but they are incidental and accessorial.

It is very easy to say to young women not to go into the newspaper office, but it happens that thousands of young women must earn their bread. So the times demand; so present conditions dictate. In factories and shops, offices and studios, nurseries and kitchens, they must do their work. They are not paid so well as men, it is true, and since they cannot vote, and since Mr. Cleveland insinuates that they never will and never ought to vote, it is possible that they will always be obliged to content themselves with a salary which, in its meagerness, practically accuses them of semi-inefficiency—an accusation deserved in a good percentage of cases. But why fume and fret? By the way are to be found many pleasures, many friends, much love, the mystic joy of living! When old age comes with penalties, there is at least a hope of peace.

The only resemblance that life offers to a vaudeville performance is that it is continuous; but the "stunts" are, not infrequently, pure tragedy, or worse still, dull monologue, in which one hears only the sound of one's own voice and gets no answer anywhere. But what of that? The curtain falls at last! And the man or woman does not live who would not have felt aggrieved to have had no entrance ticket to the show, no role upon the stage! The most wretched of us may well condole with those denuded ghosts who drift about us, waiting for a physical tenement in which to dwell.—[The Reader for September.

[WORLD'S WORK.]

KOMURA STORIES.

Baron Komura's fellow-townsman, Jihei Hashiguchi, tells some interesting new stories of the envoy in the September World's Work. After the Chinese-Japanese War, Komura was appointed civil Governor of the Liao Tung Peninsula. One day a Japanese who had not known him before called upon him. He expected to see a man of heroic expression. When he rang the bell he was ushered in by a man whom he thought might be a servant of the house. He intimated that he wished to see Mr. Komura. "Mr. Komura is now engaged. Kindly take a chair in the parlor and wait a few minutes," answered the man, who ushered the visitor into the parlor and then departed. A few minutes later the same man reëntered and said: "What can I do for you, sir?" the visitor was very much offended and said in a rather angry tone: "I said I wanted to see Mr. Komura." The man who stood before him said: "I am Mr. Komura."

Komura prefers a derby to a silk hat, to which he has an insuperable aversion. During his stay in America as a student, he often visited New York City. As a government-sent student it was proper that he should wear a frock coat and a silk hat whenever he went out on the street. One day, wishing to have a Japanese dish, he went out to buy some meat. The butcher gave it to him in a paper package. As the Baron did not want to carry it in his hand on the street, he put it under the high hat on his head. Forth he went on Broadway toward his boarding-house, with an air of perfect unconcern; suddenly the wind rose and knocked the hat off his head, simultaneously causing the meat to be dropped on the sidewalk, to the great amusement of a young lady who was passing by.

While he was yet a minor official in the Department of Foreign Affairs, the Baron's salary was anything but enough to meet expenses. His father had contracted a debt amounting to several thousands of dollars through his business failure. This debt the Baron took upon himself to pay out of his scanty salary in monthly instalments.

On every pay day the creditors of Kwampei Komura, who were many, came to his son's house and demanded payment. They would leave very little to the Baron each month, but the Baron made no protest and calmly met the situation.

ROOT AND THE PRESIDENCY.

Is Mr. Root to be the next President? It is possible—even probable. Despite his own belief that the Presidency is not for him, the country may be wiser than he. Nothing is more likely than that he may be made the Republican nominee. It all depends upon whether the Republican party concludes to be radical or conservative. Most observers think the political future of the United States will disclose two well differentiated parties, no matter what names they bear—a conservative party and a radical party. Last year the Republicans were the conservatives, with a radical candidate, and the Democrats were the radicals, with a conservative figurehead. Of course, the radical candidate won. What will happen the first time the two parties name leaders in harmony with their tendencies, no one knows. As shrewd a guess as one could make, perhaps, would be that, as the Presidential campaign rolls along, it will be found that there is something like alternation or rotation between the two general ideas—radicalism triumphing now, conservatism then. If the forces of conservatism obtain control within the Republican party, it will name a man unlike Theodore Roosevelt and more like Elihu Root. Many think that Root is the coming man. He is likely to have the support of the business element, the "solid people," the men of substance who are weary of experimentation. If the corporations plump too enthusiastically for him, on the theory that he made them a good lawyer and may make them a good President, they will kill all his prospects. On the other hand, the progressive elements of the Republican party, which, after all, must form a large part of the constituency of any political organization in a country like ours, may obtain the mastery. If they can be induced to take Roosevelt at his word when he says he will not accept another nomination—which they may not be willing to do, under any circumstances—then they will demand another Roosevelt, if another Roosevelt can be found—a La Follette, for example.

Since Mr. Root accepted the Secretaryship of State, it has been a favorite theory with many observers that he would not have returned to public life without some sort of understanding with President Roosevelt as to 1908. Men who guess at things, and, of course, often guess wildly, were sure that Root was to be "the administration candidate" three years hence. They were as sure of this as they were, a few days earlier, that Taft was to enjoy the same favor. The fact is—and I know whereof I speak—that there was neither an understanding between President Roosevelt and Mr. Root as to the latter's political future, beyond the State Department, nor even the thought of such a thing. Moreover, it is almost an insult to President Roosevelt to say that he would set out to dictate to his party whom his successor should be. The President said bluntly to one of his visitors, not long ago, that he hoped people knew him well enough to know that he was incapable of such a thing. He added, with his usual frankness, that he should keep his hands off, absolutely, as to the next Presidency. The field is open. It is the party's business, and the party's alone, not his.—[Walter Wellman, in "Success Magazine."

STANDARD OIL TRICKS.

I. E. Knapp of Chanute had gone into the Chanute field in 1899, and had found a market for his oil with the Omaha and Kansas City gas companies. He transported the oil to these concerns in tank cars of his own, each of which held about 7500 gallons of oil, and he had enlarged his market until he had twenty cars in transit. The railroad charged him ten cents per one hundred pounds from Chanute to both Omaha and Kansas City, and they counted the weight 6.4 pounds per gallon. They also allowed Mr. Knapp three-fourths of a cent rental per mile for the use of his tank cars. The price at which Mr. Knapp sold his product was not brought out in the testimony in which the above facts were developed, but presumably it was a reasonable one, for this arrangement went on with apparent profit to Mr. Knapp until May, 1902, when suddenly he was informed that henceforth the weight of crude oil would be reckoned at 7.4 pounds per gallon. It was equivalent to an advance of $7.50 per carload. This change came two weeks after Mr. Knapp had signed a years' contract with the gas companies he was supplying. But while the freight on crude oil had been raised $7.50 a car by this new weight classification, the freight on the products of crude oil remained unchanged. That is, the Standard was able to ship gas-oil, a product of crude, from Neodesha at the old weight of 6.4 pounds a gallon.

Of course, Mr. Knapp and his agents protested loudly. They pointed out the anomaly—the injustice. They did not hesitate to call it manipulation. The railroad agents were evidently ashamed of the tricky business. They admitted it an arbitrary classification—admitted it was not general, even on their own roads. They did succeed even in getting it reversed, but for only a very short time, when back it went and the Kansas agents, goaded by Mr. Knapp to still further protest, were told by their superior officers that they were tired of the correspondence, that the rate was fixed and it was unnecessary to discuss the matter. For eleven months Mr. Knapp had to fulfill his contracts at this disadvantage. Independence at an expense of $7.50 a car may mean bankruptcy. Whether it did or did not, Mr. Knapp felt it was too costly, and, in May, 1903, he turned over his crude oil to the Standard; and henceforth that concern filled the contracts of the Omaha and Kansas City gas works. Thus the very small breeze of competition which was freshening the air of Chanute was stilled! Mr. Knapp's twenty cars were side-tracked, and in March last, 1905, they still stood idle at Chanute.

What had the Standard Oil Company to do with this manipulation? One who knows the history of the Standard Oil Company will not ask that question. That is why its history is useful today! What happened to Mr. Knapp happened to scores of Pennsylvania refiners and shippers back in the '70's and '80's, and left hundreds of tank cars side-tracked, as his were.—[Ida M. Tarbell, in September McClure's.

[WORLD TODAY.]

OLD SETTLERS OF OREGON.

The old settlers went from one to another, all talking at once, shaking hands and laughing like a lot of schoolboys. Many of them had been on isolated ranches all these years, and during this trip to the fair had received a constant ovation from comrades and fellow-pioneers who had settled in cities. A finer looking group of old men I never saw. Some were well up toward ninety and all had passed the seventieth milestone. With few exceptions their teeth were sound, their walk was brisk and steady, and they bore the general appearance, physically, of the average easterner of 60. We went on to join the "women folks," who had gone on ahead. We found them equally alive to the pleasures of doing the fair and renewing old acquaintances. One bright-eyed little woman, wearing a badge that proclaimed her at least 80 years old, was gazing lovingly at an old plains wagon which bore the legend, "One of the first wagons to enter the Willamette Valley." A middle-aged woman was beside her.

"I came in with it," said the little lady, proudly, "and her a babe in arms," pointing to the middle-aged woman. "Many's the time I've carried that basket to gather brush for a fire."

"And what was I doing, ma, about that time?" laughingly asked the daughter.

"Oh, you was a-tumblin' around in the sage."—[Anne Shannon Monroe, in The World Today, for September.

[HARPER'S BAZAR.]

"GERMS" IN FRANCE.

If we have to do violence to our ideals of system in traveling in France, arrived a la campagne, down goes another even dearer American god—the deadly bacillus. The French distinguish between la campagne and la vraie campagne. This difference they will variously explain to you, making a great point in favor of the latter that it permits one to go without starch in his collar, but, myself, as matter of fact developed by experience, I should say that the chief distinction of life a la vraie campagne is the superior degree of contempt here displayed for our best-authenticated germ theories. In the United States I have lived next door to a Boston women doctor who required me to fumigate, if not to boil, my innocent little children before allowing them to play in her back yard with her little children; during the same epoch of my life, I have labored diligently for the higher education of servants and of husbands—our two most invincible, native enemies of hygiene in the home; especially have I taken pains about the milk supply, incurring thereby the ingratitude, not to say inhumanity, of mankind. Well do I remember arriving one summer in the country in New Jersey, and while the baby screamed for food I was patiently making a perfectly scientific investigation of the only milk to be had in the place.

"But have the cows been registered?" I thought to ask just as the baby was about to begin snatching away the bottle before it was everlastingly too late.

"Registered? Oh, thunder!" groaned the mere father, who would feed his child any kind of unverified milk, just to stop its crying. "Registered? What next?"

Whereupon the sympathetic man farmer put in: "Registered? Why bless you, missus, every one of them cows is old enough to vote; and living so near to Philadelphia, of course they have been registered in half a dozen precincts."

Yet behold me now a la vraie campagne in France, where the universally approved source of my milk supply is a cow which, stabled I have never had the courage to find out exactly where, is milked at my front gate twice a day while we wait, the cow and the milking being personally conducted by an old woman who, it is safe to say, has never had a bath in her whole, long, venerable life.—[Harper's Bazar.

DO ANIMALS REASON?

One thing, by way of suggestion, should be mentioned here. In forming a judgment of animal reasoning, it is well to remember that we have but one psychology. The general idea seems to be that we should seek a special psychology, distinct from our own, in order to understand the animals. Nothing could be more erroneous or misleading. So far as we can see, the laws of mind are as constant as the laws of physics and chemistry, which apply equally well to the oil wells and to the light from Arcturus and the Pleiades. We know a little, a very little, of our own psychology, and that is the only measure we possess to lay upon the life of any creature. All thought except my own is strange to me; I am never sure of it, but can only infer and then estimate it from the actions of the animal under observation. Whether the animal be a man or a bear, I am under the same necessity to watch his actions, and then infer his mental process from what goes on in my own head under similar circumstances. To one who judges animals in this rational way there is no doubt of their reasoning. The only problem lies in the quality and amount of that reason, and in the origin and cause of that whole process of history which stretches like a wide sea between us and the animal kingdom.—[W. J. Long, in Harper's for September.

[PUBLIC OPINION.]

THE NEW CANUCK YANKEE.

"The boys was growin' up," said an Iowa farmer who had located in Manitoba. "Our farm down in Iowy was gett'n small and land there was too high-priced for me to buy more. I wanted to keep the boys with me, so I reckon'd I'd look around. I found as good land here as back in the old State, and for a tenth the price. We're all here now. It was kin' a hard to leave the Stars and Stripes, but call it what you will, it's all America. I can't see much difference. The laws is about the same, and the people is about the same, except that we from the 'States' seem to have a little more push."

This from the pen of Jackson Tinker, who has just brought back with him from his trip in the Northwest some interesting material for Public Opinion. Mr. Tinker says in the issue of August 26: "Nature is an attractive sweetheart, and never was there more persistent or venturesome wooer than the Yankee pioneer. 'Where there is money to be made,' said a wit, 'there you'll find a Yankee.' Fifty thousand of them are immigrating into Canada this year, making nearly 200,000 who have found new homes there within the last six years. If, as Canadians boast with pardonable pride, their last 'new West,' 'Prince Rupert's Land of Other Days,' shall become the 'Breadbasket of the World,' a Yankee trading stamp should be placed on many a loaf of bread. Yankee invasion from Uncle Sam's western and northwestern States has become a potent factor in the remarkable agricultural and industrial awakening which Canada in her western provinces is experiencing. On many a homestead in the vast wheat belt stretching northward a thousand miles from the United States boundary, the Yankee settler from Nebraska, Iowa, Kansas, or the Dakotas is at toil, making two blades of wheat grow where none grew before. The railroads have been the real pioneers in the 'new West.' They are the town builders, the first public building usually in every small settlement being the railroad station, which, in many cases, is followed by a hotel, also built and operated by the railroad."

[LESLIE'S WEEKLY.]

WHAT SHAKERS BELIEVE.

It was just one hundred and thirty years ago this August that Ann Lee of Manchester, England, fleeing from persecution in that country because of her religious views, landed on the New England Coast. Ann Lee was a leader of a new school of religious thinkers and devotees, whose origin is traceable to the example and influence of the exiled Camisards, known in England as the French Prophets, but later and more distinctively as the "Shaking Quakers," so called from a certain feature of their religious ceremonies. The cardinal points in the belief and practice of this new religious body were simplicity of life, communism, and celibacy. "They (the Shakers) hold," says one of their leading authorities, "that a virgin life is fundamental to organized communism, as the private family relationship necessarily requires its own centers of affection and moneyed interests, while a united inheritance requires the renunciation of these. They freely admit that the private family is necessary and must always exist—the seed-garden of the human race; but they also recognize that higher nature which makes communistic association as great a necessity—the harvest field of the race." They expressly emphasize the fact that they do not condemn marriage as ungodly, but only hold that the celibate life is the right life for those who would be the teachers and founders of a new and nobler order of humanity—the pioneers in the human brotherhood that it is to be. They forbid the use of swine's flesh and all intoxicants. Industry, frugality, charity and unostentation in dress and manners are enjoined upon all their followers. The government in Shaker communities is dual, "sisters" and "brothers" acting in united capacities, their chief counselors or leaders being known as elders and eldresses, who hold parental rule each over the members of their own sex—[Leslie's Weekly.

[OUTLOOK.]

ALL BORN THE SAME DAY!

The assistant secretary of the National Child Labor Committee has just been making for the Outlook a thorough examination of conditions as to child labor in a typical mining town. He says:

"Eight large coal mines and a silk mill compete with the seven school buildings of the borough for the lives of the children. The child labor law of Pennsylvania forbids the employment of boys in the coal mines under the age of sixteen, or in the breakers or about the mines under the age of fourteen years. The obvious way to discover whether the law is obeyed is to examine the employment certificates in the office of the coal companies, and study the recorded ages of the children employed. Such an examination will reveal certain facts, but not the fact we are seeking. It will show that nearly all the boys employed were born between the first and fifteenth of May (the time of the year at which occurs the greatest exodus from the schoolroom to the breaker) and that all who begin work in any given year are just fourteen years old! The breaker boss of a large coal company said to me: 'It's awful queer how all these kids were born on the same day.'

"A visit to the home of the boys for the purpose of translating the mechanical falsehood of the employment certificates into the varied terms of human life offers little reward. The parents, schooled to the situation, will corroborate without blush the oath they have taken before the officer of the law and advance their children from one to five years toward maturity, while the boys themselves, sophisticated by environment, will almost invariably reply to the question of age—'fourteen goin' on fifteen.'"

[COUNTRY CALENDAR.]

TO "PREVENT MOSQUITOES."

Henry Beach Needham writes in the Country Calendar for September: "Because of the serious and often fatal injury it inflicts on man, the most dangerous animal known is the mosquito. Compared with the evil done by the insect pest, the cobra's death-tool is small. This venomous serpent is found only in hot countries, particularly in India, while mosquitoes know no favorite land or clime—unless it be Jersey. Arctic explorers complain of them. In Alaska, it is recorded by a scientist that 'mosquitoes existed in countless millions, driving us to the verge of suicide or insanity.' A traveler on the north shore of Lake Superior, when the snow was several feet deep, and the ice on the lake five feet in thickness, relates that 'mosquitoes appeared in swarms, literally blackening the banks of snow in sheltered places.'

"As to the best methods to employ in ridding a country place, or any other region, of mosquitoes, the directions furnished by Dr. L. O. Howard, the government entomologist, who has been a careful student of the problem since 1867, are of great value:

"'Altogether, the most satisfactory ways of fighting mosquitoes are those which result in the destruction of the larvae or the abolition of their breeding places. In not every locality are these measures feasible, but in many places there is absolutely no necessity for the mosquito annoyance. The three main preventive measures are the draining of breeding places, the introduction of small fish into fishless breeding places, and the treatment of such pools with kerosene. These are three alternatives, any one of which will be efficacious and any one of which may be used where there are reasons against the trial of the others.

"'The quantity of kerosene to be practically used, as shown by the writer's experiments, is approximately one ounce to fifteen square feet of water surface, and ordinarily the application need not be renewed for one month. . . . On ponds of any size the quickest and most perfect method of forming a film of kerosene will be to spray the oil over the surface of the water.'"

VALUE OF MOTOR BOATS.

The auto-boat, although only a plaything, is not without its uses. If it were not for the fads that rich men have, many of the pieces of machinery used in trade and commerce would never have been developed. The money a wealthy man spends for these playthings, enables the designer and inventor to devote their time to the development of the machine. At first the toy is costly, but by constant experimenting it is perfected, and then it is found it can be used for other things; so the gas engine has been developed until it is the most popular motor for boats of small size, not only for pleasure craft, but for vessels used in commerce, and now is being taken up by the Navy Department.

It has been estimated that there are in the waters of the United States more than fifteen thousand boats with gas engines. In some the motor is an auxiliary to the sails, and in others the gas engine is the only power. While the auto-boats present the spectacular part of the sport, motor boats are now so popular among yachtsmen that all sorts of craft are being built and equipped with gas engines, and, while these are not built for speed, many of them can be raced. The American Power Boat Association has framed a rule by which slow-cruising boats can be raced against the fast-racing machines, the cruiser getting an allowance of time according to its displacement and power of its engine, so that it has a fair chance, all things being equal, of winning.

These semi-racers, as they are called, are good boats for afternoon sport. They are substantially built, and with their low-power motors are comfortable in almost any kind of weather. Then, too, they do not cost nearly as much as a racing machine. One of the fast boats will cost from $10,000 to $15,000, while the semi-racer will cost only as many hundreds. These semi-racers are found all over the country.—[Pearson's Magazine for September.

[RECREATION.]

TROLLING FOR SALMON.

After a series of spasmodic bottom rushes the salmon let up, but when near the boat he rose to the surface, hesitating a moment, then running straight away, gradually settled until finally checked. For a moment he struggled obstinately, keeping near the bottom, then rushed wildly toward the boat in an effort to escape, the reel rapidly taking up the slack. A sudden pause, a dull tugging, and the fish came toward the inevitable.

Slowly the reel took in the slack line, then the infuriated silverside had his second wind, and made a wild run for the deep eddy; but the damsel at the reel maintained her composure, letting out the line slowly as the fish surged and tumbled. The line slackened and the soft grumbling reel took it up. The silence was ominous, still the line was slack. Had he shaken the hook loose? No! He flashed in the bright morning sun; leaped successively two or three feet into the air, then rolling, and darting viciously, churned the water into a boiling, seething foam. Like a half-tamed mustang he led in, but suddenly at the appearance of the boat he pulled back, throwing and shaking himself, and then as if to free his body of the iridescent silver he shot out of the water and fell back, slapping the water savagely with his tail as he again disappeared. Cautiously she reeled him in again, but the prize fought the taut line; he was only brought to gaff when overcome with exhaustion.—[James E. Sawyers, in Recreation for August.

[ATLANTIC.]

I' GOT TO FACE MOTHER TODAY

I' got to face mother today, for a fact!
I' got to face mother to-day!
And jist how I dare to, an' how she will act,
Is more than a mortal can say!
But I' got to face her—I' got to! and so Here's a' old father clean at the end of his row!

And Pink and Wade's gone to the farm fer her now—
And I'm keepin' house for 'em here—
Their purty new house—and—all paid fer!—but how
Am I goin' to meet her and clear
Up my actchully heppin' 'em both to e-lope?—
('Cause Mother wus set—and wus no other hope!)

I don't think it's Wade she's so biased ag'in,
But his bisness,—a railroadin' man
'At runs a switch-engine, day out and day in,
And's got to make hay while he can—
It's a dangersome job, I'll admit—but see what
A fine-furnished home 'at he's already got!

And Pink—w'y, the girl wus jist pinin' away—
So what could her old father go
When he found her, hid-like, in a loose load of hay,
But jist drive on clean into
The aidge of the city, where—singalar thing!—
Wade switched us away to the Squire,
I jing!

Now—a-leavin' me here—they've driv off, with a cheer,
On their weddin' trip—which is to drive
Straight home and tell Mother,—and toll her back here
And surrender me, dead or alive!
So I'm waitin' here—not so blame overly gay
As I wus,—'cause I' got to face Mother today!

QUEEN POPPY.

Her kingdom is the countryside,
Her throne the yellow corn;
Her jewels are the pearls that hide
Among the grass at morn.

The merry lark her minstrel rare,
The wind her herald strong;
Her maids of honor, passing fair,
The nodding clover throng.

She holds her court upon the hill,
In green and crimson drest;
When winter reigns she haunts it still,
With memories of rest.

FORMAL FALL OPENING

Monday, Tuesday, and Wednesday—September 18, 19, and 20

A Word of Welcome

The fashion event of the season is unquestionably the Hamburger's Fall Opening. The thoroughness which is characteristic of the undertakings of Hamburger's in the past will be emphasized in our endeavor to make this Opening an occasion long to be spoken of and remembered. A noteworthy feature of the Opening is the innovation of confining the decorations to an exposition of the merchandise gathered from every center of consequence by our world-wide buying organization and now displayed in its entirety throughout the house for your inspection, criticism, and pleasure. Make it a point to come, and bring your friends with you.

Opening Display
Women's Wearables

Handsome Creations of Europe as Habiliments for America's Fair Women

An exquisite, elaborate display of fine imported costumes and evening dresses from the foremost French and Vienna modistes as also the leading makers of America; all the new novel, quaint ideas in correct colorings and materials. Such a magnificent display in our cloak and suit department for the Fall Opening has never before been our privilege to place before the Los Angeles public and we say to you in all confidence that no store this side of New York can show more or better garments every line to suit the fancy and fit the figures of the handsome women of Southern California. It would be impossible to describe them all in detail but you will take advantage of our opening and feel welcome to inspect any article of merchandise displayed.

Evening, Reception Costumes

The materials Crepe de Chines, Louisenes, allover nets, French Broadcloths or Henriettas in shades of apple green, reseda, Alice blue, pink, ecru, light blue, lilac, white or black; made over foundations of silk Chiffon; handsomely garnitured with the most elegant trimmings of lace and are reasonably priced ranging $50.00, $65.00, $75.00, $85.00, $95.00, $125.00, up to $150.00.

$75 Broadcloth Suits $50

Ultra stylish, handsome garments in Louis XV styles with fancy vests; embroidered lapels; satin lined coats; plaited round skirts; colorings green, blue, wine or plum; also black; elegantly tailored; perfect in fit and finish.

Fall Opening of Millinery

Styles Designed by the World's Famous Milliners Elegant in Their Simplicity

Let us talk of styles, colors and materials. Black is very strong, white and black much shown in smart effects for street and suit wear. Green in the soft resada and mousse shades seems to have the lead in colors, though purple and violet are among the new colors shown; and the soft rose pink, Alice and kingfisher blue, pearl, gray and gun metal are very desirable in suit hats. The materials are first—velvets, Paon finished, light weight. Dress hats are in many styles, though the Derby crowns seem to be most popular. All appear to have high back bandeaus and much of the trimming is in black. We will display more than 100 genuine French models from the most famous Parisian milliners; also a number from our own designers. We do not expect to sell our French models at a profit. They are priced at the simple cost to import. As a special inducement we have prepared two extra specials for the opening days and they will go on sale at 9:30 a.m.

Imported Hats at $25

From Mme. Georgette—A Tam crown velvet dress hat in black and white. From Maison Lewis—a pearl gray French felt suit hat with blue and green velvet and flowers.

French Pattern Hats $26.50

From Loys Soeurs—a kingfisher blue dress hat of velvet and Maline with self-colored aigrettes and flowers. From Mon. Julia—a Derby crown sailor of black velvet and pink Chiffon with pink roses and black ostrich plumes.

Paris Model Hats $28

From Marescat-Soeurs—an artistic creation in black and white; of velvet, lace applique and ostrich plumes. From Loys Soeurs—a white evening hat of white velvet and Oriental applique with ostrich plumes.

French Pattern Hats $30

From Mme. Josse—a mousse-green picture hat of velvet and Maline; trimmed with plumes and old gold ornaments. From Mme. Georgette—a high back dress hat in black and white of French felt and jet with Chenille facing.

$10 Dress and Suit Hats $5

[illegible] ALL WERE FOR THE STATE.

[illegible] lyric that is of Macaulay's in which [illegible] Horatius kept the bridge. "Then [illegible] was for party, but all were for the [illegible] he paints the times when the old [illegible] in its pristine simplicity. And [illegible] marked the manner of all men's [illegible] their moral as well as their physical [illegible] best. The ode does not say "then [illegible] personal gain. It says: "No man was [illegible] There is a great world of difference here. [illegible] into degradation from the condi- [illegible] are for party to the condition where [illegible] Men may be for party through strong [illegible] in which selfish ends do not figure [illegible] a sort of nobleness in the heart that [illegible] as compared to the man who is for [illegible] out of his pretended patriotism.

[illegible] does not indicate a high degree of [illegible] The bigot in politics or religion is usually [illegible] vision is contracted. Bigotry implies [illegible] prejudice is never founded on clear and [illegible] views. But the bigot may be only blind [illegible] he is right, and the man who does even [illegible] because he thinks it a right thing, is [illegible] an admirable man, but there may be [illegible] admirable in his devotion to a principle, [illegible] it is right. Such a man cannot be [illegible] contempt. He cannot be despised. He is [illegible] the man who does a wrong thing, knowing [illegible] but does it because it brings him profit. [illegible] does that is wholly despicable.

[illegible] who acts on prejudice which he mistakes [illegible] may have the noblest character. He is [illegible] conversion, of repentance, of reformation, of [illegible] He is distinctly worth saving. The wretch [illegible] unblinded eyes, with clear undimmed vis- [illegible] is wrong, but goes right on and does it [illegible] sake of the gain he makes out of it, [illegible] what injustice, injury, harm, wrong, de- [illegible] his fellowman, or to the community as [illegible] would be useles to try to reform, convert, [illegible] He is incapable of reform, of re- [illegible] salvation. He is not worth saving.

[illegible] in the highest examples of literature we have, in as authentic history as the past has handed down to us, two men who are types of these two classes of men. Here is Pilate, the Governor of a great state, who stands as the accredited representative of a great empire. He sits in judgment on a fellowman. He says himself from his seat of judgment: "I find no fault in him." He seeks by a futile ceremony to wash the stain of blood from his hands, and yet delivers the "just man" into the hands of his enemies to be put to death. Did you ever hear of the conversion, reformation, salvation of Pontius Pilate? Why, for 200 years, generation after generation in their most solemn act of worship recite Pilate's unjust act to express their contempt for the man who did deliberate wrong. Self was all Pilate was capable of seeking. There was not principle enough in his soul to make a decent dog out of.

Saul of Tarsus destroyed more lives than did Pilate. But Saul thought in putting men to death he was "doing God service." He meant to do right. He had nobleness of soul beneath his mental bigotry. He was capable of repentance, of conversion, of redemption, of salvation. In lieu of the injury he once wrought upon his fellowmen he devoted his life to lifting them up to higher planes of life than they had known before, and thus rendered them the highest service a man can render men. Behold how high a place of honor in the history of the world the converted bigot has held for as many centuries as the other has been abhorred.

The world is full of these two types of men. Not necessarily full of the class embraced under the epithet bigot, although that tribe is always a numerous one. But on one side is the man who cares nothing for principle, who does not care to distinguish right from wrong, whose sole solicitude about an act is summed up in the purely commercial inquiry, "Will it pay?"

On the other side happily the world is never wanting in a goodly number of men and women whose first and main anxiety is that their lives and the acts they do in life shall in their last analysis rest in justice. And these last are not the highest type of human nature. Saul of Tarsus might have been satisfied with merely abstaining from "putting the innocent to death." He was not so satisfied. Negative virtue is better than positive vice, but positive devotion to the cause of the vice is as highly exalted above negative abstention for wrongdoing as that is above indulgence in injustice.

The unhappy state composed of wretches who are all for self must quickly perish. Ishmael and his tribe, whose hand is against every man, find in a trice that every man's hand is against them. There is no room for them among men. They must betake themselves to the desert or be extirpated. The state whose component parts are only negatively virtuous is not much better off than that of the positive Ishmaelites. Selfishness, be it never so just, never made a state great. It never will make a state half great. It may not destroy the body politic so rapidly as injustice and anarchy, but it will as surely destroy the state in the end. A state is made great not by those who are for party, much less by those who are for self. The more men there are who are always for the state, the greater will be the state.

Yes, that may be true of the state, but what of the individual? Does it pay to be patriotic? In dollars and cents, scarcely ever. In what is more valuable than all the wealth of the world, almost always. Pilate "held his job"—for a while—by doing what he knew to be wrong. Saul of Tarsus got "stripes and imprisonment," shipwreck, hunger, death by being a philanthropist. Did Pilate's selfishness pay? Not a cent of dividends in twenty centuries. Did Saul's philanthropy pay? Yes, the richest rewards, looking at this life, a man ever reaped. To any man with the sentiments of a man, Saul's reward richly repaid him for all his sufferings. Discount the world to come and this is true; only the sentiment of the beasts that have no ambition will question this edict.

Rockefeller, Roosevelt. Place these names side by side. Does it not savor of sacrilege to do so? Is there not something revoltingly incongruous in the comparison? You do not accept the statements of Ida M. Trabell, nor those of Lawson? So be it. But taking "its richest man in the world" for the very best you can take him for, and the President for the very least those who oppose him in politics will concede to him, and is not the position of the man who is all for the state exceedingly exalted above any possible position the man who is mainly for self can possibly occupy?

Let the republic neglect as much as it pleases its rich men. But let it ever cherish and revere its patriots. Rome flourished and was great when full of poor men who "all were for the state." Rome fell, although full of rich men who all were for themselves.

REMARKS BY MEN OF THE TIMES.

Another evidence that everything moves in cycles is furnished by the latest machine gun. Two or three centuries ago, the big unwieldy muskets were supported on metal legs. Now a machine gun has been introduced of the same style, with this slight difference, however, that the new gun fires cartridges at the rate of 300 shots a minute.

Recent reports from Eastern Africa fully confirm the stories, so frequently denied, of outrageous cruelty to the natives on the part of Belgians and Germans. It is no wonder that the Germans are having trouble with these unfortunate people. Germany, like Spain, will have to learn that successful colonization involves making friends of a conquered people.

PRACTICAL ETHICS

VALUE OF DISCUSSION.

ONE of the best methods for promoting moral and intellectual development of the individual is earnest, intelligent, tolerant and respectful discussion.

We speak of "having it out" with one another. That is to say, the wheat is to be threshed in order to remove the chaff.

To rid the mind of stale intellectual matter is just as important, if not more so, than to store it with new facts. What is it that marks off the rigidly conservative and non-progressive from those having greater mental elasticity, hence keeping pace with the advancing thought of the time? The first have their minds lumbered as it were with old wornout traditions; stale prejudices and precluding misconceptions or false opinions of life and human relationships which leave no room for the entrance of new ideas or the influx of advanced thought.

In order to maintain the moral and intellectual health of the mind it is as necessary that there should be a regular process of elimination as of assimilation; in fact the capacity of the mind to assimilate knowledge is largely determined by its power to eliminate, to think away the useless stuff accumulated from time to time.

Where this is not done our mental and moral state is much in the same case as our bodies would be when deprived of the physiological process of respiration.

Every inspiration must be followed by an expiration, for we cannot profit by the in-breathing of vitalizing oxygen, unless at the same time we rid the system of deleterious waste products.

Moreover energy whether mental or physical is not merely to be stored, it is to be generated that it in turn may be liberated.

Discussion may therefore be viewed as a method both constructive and destructive. We tear down the old rotten rafters of time-worn opinion; lift out of their rusty and creaking hinges the prohibiting gates of iron prejudice; leaving the mind open, unhampered and free to entertain every worthy or helpful thought and idea that may grace the intellectual horizon, and thus through right thinking promote right acting; building up fine and forceful character which should be the final end of all human activity.

AS A MEANS OF TESTING GROWTH.

We often mistake strong feeling or emotion for thought. To see if you really have thoughts as well as feelings, try to put what you suppose you think into an intelligible form of expression.

You may have the elements of thought or knowledge hanging vaguely or loosely around a given subject under discussion, but it is not until you are prodded on by a vigorous opponent that you think down upon the theme, through the premises to the conclusion and it is not until then that you become aware of real intellectual exercise. In such an exercise moreover, you manifest your power, your strength or weakness of mental seizure.

The intellectual athlete enjoys a contest in debate as heartily as the physical wrestler a hand to hand engagement.

(Would that the intellectual arena might more frequently be substituted for some of the physical horrors of brutal sport.)

Discussion promotes strength and growth of mind; it enriches the speaker's vocabulary; lends nicety in the choice of words and cultivates precision and definiteness in the framing of sentences.

No one, however broad his view, ever sees the whole of any truth at one time, therefore when we come to the threshing mill of discussion each one takes a hand in the turn of the mill; and every one in doing so helps whenever something is added to the discussion by way of disclosing a point or factor heretofore obscured or unobserved.

Thus gradually the topic assumes larger and larger proportions; growing more luminous until the whole stands out clearly to the intelligent and attentive participants in the unfolding of truth from the intricate bandages of varied and manifold opinion.

To the successful thinker—one who as we say "has driven his thought home," or to one who has brought his thinking sharp as an arrow straight to the point—there comes all the joy and exhilaration of the successful archer.

The secret lies in knowing how to take aim—to focus your point; think all around it first just as the trained eye of the expert marksman or shot moves swiftly about the encircling field of his object, then, proper range—steady aim, and lo! The mark is struck.

THE WORLD-HEART.

When slowly through the evening air a bell
  Completes the charm of some dear valley scene
    For wanderer upon the mountain heights,
  And when the pale smoke wavers up between
    Strange homestead trees, he dreams of lost delights.
And tears of memory to his eyelids well.

There is a twilight hour when every heart
  Beats with the evening bell a mournful chime,
    When yearnings vague and old regrets have place,
  And unto one comes all the pain of Time
    And he may touch the hands of all the race,
A twilight hour when veils of ages part;

When fireside smoke, loved emblem of the home,
  Binds with its warm blue thread a brotherhood
    Of all that ever stand alone at night,
  Half waiting with that bell some mystic good,
    Longing for homeward ways in sweet twilight.
Yet feel no love-hearth bids them cease to roam.

Money-making in Cuba. By Frank G. Carpenter.

HOW BUSINESS GROWS.

BANKS AND OTHER ENTERPRISES ARE BACKED BY AMERICANS.

From Our Own Correspondent.

HAVANA, August, 1905.—American capital is rapidly pushing its way into Cuba and the day will come when we shall own the island commercially and industrially, if not politically. The immense tobacco business is already controlled by our trust, sugar plantations, capitalized at millions, have been bought by Americans, and more than $50,000,000 of United States gold has been spent since the war in Cuban lands. The street railroads of Havana are largely owned by an American syndicate, and the most of the money used in buying the Cuban railroad, which is now opening up Eastern Cuba, came from New York. Other railroads are projected by Americans and there are also electric lighting and power schemes here and there over Cuba financed by them. I have written of the vast iron and copper deposits which are being mined by capitalists, from Philadelphia and New York and have said something of the United Fruit Company, which owns the biggest banana plantations in Cuba, and of the Nipe Bay Company, which will soon put up the largest sugar mill of the world.

Cuban Banks Backed by Americans.

Some of the biggest of the Cuban banks are operated with American capital. The Royal Bank of Canada has among its stockholders men like J. Ogden Armour, Norman B. Ream, John J. Mitchell and Marshall J. Field of Chicago and James A. Blair, John I. Blair, George F. Baker and others of New York. The National Bank of Cuba has an American president, Edmund B. Vaughn, and one of its vice-presidents is Samuel M. Jarvis, both of New York. One of the directors of this bank is John G. Carlisle and a second William I. Buchanan. The other directors are Cubans, including some of the best men of the island, but the most of the capital is American, Pierpont Morgan and Stephen B. Elkins being large stockholders.

These two banks do an enormous business. The Royal Bank of Canada has assets of $31,600,000 and it had last year more than $21,000,000 in deposits. It does business throughout Canada, Nova Scotia, New Brunswick and British Columbia, and it is rapidly building up a big business. It is earning more than 14 per cent. on its capital stock and is paying dividends at the rate of 8 per cent. per annum.

The National Bank of Cuba made over 20 per cent. last year on its paid-up capital, it gave 8 per cent. in dividends paid to the shareholders, while the balance went to the surplus and undivided profits.

The Royal Bank of Canada opened its first branch here in 1899, and it has since absorbed two of the large Spanish banks and established a branch at Caraguey, in the heart of the island. The National Bank was opened years ago, with an authorized capital of $5,000,000 and $1,000,000 paid in. It has now 6000 depositors, with more than $9,000,000 deposits, showing a gain over last year of $3,000,000 and of $2500 in the number of depositors. This bank has increased its paid-up capital to $3,000,000, and it proposes to issue up to the total amount of $5,000,000 at an early date. Its managers tell me they expect their deposits will double within the next year, and they say that the financial business of Cuba is increasing by leaps and bounds.

The National Bank, like the Royal Bank, will have a central head at Havana, with branches all over the island. It has already ten branch banks in the different cities, and it will soon increase these to fifteen. This bank was chosen as the depository of the Cuban funds when Gen. Wood was Governor; and it may still be called the government bank of Cuba, its title being "El Banco Nacional."

Three Millions in Sight.

I had a letter from Mr. Flather, the cashier of the Riggs National Bank at Washington, to the managers of the National Bank, and upon presenting it I asked to be shown over the establishment. This was done, even to the vaults, where I saw what would be rather a surprising sight in almost any bank of the United States. The vault is as big as a hall bedroom and is walled with pigeon holes and shelves. These were filled with greenbacks and yellowbacks in the good money of our own Uncle Sam. The notes were of all denominations from $1 to $500 each, and some single bundles contained $100,000. A counting had just been made of the funds on hand, and it showed $1,600,000 in these notes. On the floor under the shelves were stacks of canvas bags, a foot long and six inches wide, filled with Spanish gold. Each bag contained $10,000 in coins. I lifted one and it took all my strength to raise it. There was $1,500,000 worth of gold on the floor of that vault, and its contents altogether amounted to more than $3,000,000.

Cuba is a land of big things. It has millions as the basis of its industries, and it does business in the large. It has plantations worth fortunes, million-dollar sugar mills, and banks with millions on deposit. Nevertheless, the country is in its infancy, as far as such things are concerned. There are no savings banks yet and no safe deposit vaults. I do not know that there are any trust companies, and there are not yet the exploitation companies with millions behind them which are bound to come in the building up of the island.

Banking in Cuba.

While I was in El Banco Nacional I met Mr. Samuel M. Jarvis of New York, one of the vice-presidents of the bank, who is temporarily stopping in Cuba looking after his large interests here, and asked him to tell me something about banking conditions. Said he:

"Cuba has a curious history as regards banking. Before the war the chief financial institution was the Bank of Spain, which had its branches scattered over the island, with a central office at Havana. This bank was the fiscal agent of the government. It issued government notes, collected the taxes, and also did a general banking business. It not only issued notes, but at times it compelled the merchants to take them to such an extent that its notes are now worth only 4 or 5 cents on the dollar. Such transactions brought banking into bad repute, and for a time after the war the people were afraid to trust their money to any bank. I know of men who had payments of from $100,000 to $150,000 to make who brought the money in gold coin in bags to their creditors and counted it over. They had no depositories and they would not trust to checks or drafts. At that time the merchants acted largely as the bankers, and there were also private banks. Such still exist.

"Today this distrust has largely disappeared. We have already about 6000 open accounts and the government payments of the $35,000,000 loan to the soldiers are largely in checks upon us. The people often hold such checks for months before cashing them, showing that they have an implicit faith in their value."

Cuban Stocks and Bonds.

"What is the condition of Cuba financially?"

"It is excellent," replied Mr. Jarvis, "and it will continue to improve. The government is safe and its relation to the United States is such that in case of a revolution, which I do not think possible, the island would probably be taken over by the United States. This would make all Cuban securities more valuable than ever."

"How do you regard Cuban bonds?"

"I consider them a gilt-edge investment. They will pay their interest right along."

"What is the condition of the Cuban railroads?" I asked.

"Very good. They are all making money, except the new road built by Sir William Van Horne. That is in the infancy of its development, and it will [illegible] some time before it pays dividends."

"Is not the Cuban government going too [illegible] debt?"

"I think not," was the reply. "The [illegible] made through the Speyers, and the other [illegible] plated, necessitate an interest charge of only [illegible] or $3,000,000 a year. This is nothing for Cuba. [illegible] the war the Spaniards issued loans based upon [illegible] which included an interest charge of $14,000,000 a [illegible] Cuba paid that money without trouble in her [illegible] condition, and she certainly can handle her [illegible] debtedness of the present.

"Our people do not understand this country," [illegible] tinued Mr. Jarvis. "They don't know it as the [illegible] peans do. The latter have had dealings with both [illegible] and Cuba in the past and they appreciate our [illegible] bilities. Indeed, I doubt whether there is a place [illegible] earth which has as good prospects as Cuba, and [illegible] I do not except South Africa or the Klondike."

"What population has Cuba?"

"It had 1,500,000 when the war closed, and it has [illegible] in the neighborhood of 300,000 more. This is [illegible] about one-tenth of what it will support. Take [illegible] of which only one-tenth can be cultivated; it [illegible] 40,000,000. Java, of the same size as Cuba, is [illegible] mountainous; and it has a population of [illegible] is good from one end to the other. Its soil is [illegible] as any in the world, and that even to the [illegible] mountains. Besides that, Cuba is next [illegible] United States, the best market on earth. [illegible] easily support 20,000,000, and its people still [illegible] the most prosperous of the nations."

Electric Roads in Cuba.

I talked at length the other day with [illegible] Luciano Diaz, formerly secretary of [illegible] public works, about Havana's electric railway [illegible] which he is vice-president. He tells me that [illegible] already fifty miles of road in operation, and [illegible] miles more will be constructed in the near [illegible] first electric car on the island was run only [illegible] ago and the gross earnings of the roads last [illegible] more than a million and a half dollars. [illegible] all the rolling stock has been bought from [illegible] States, but the company has now built its [illegible] and will construct its cars here. The [illegible] railroads are to be gradually extended [illegible] and they will probably form one of the [illegible] industries of the island. At present [illegible] assets of about $21,000,000 and their stock [illegible] the New York Stock Exchange. They are [illegible] by Americans.

During my talk with Mr. Diaz he said [illegible] mous amount of money is coming into Cuba [illegible] the American investments already amount [illegible] one hundred and fifty million dollars.

Do Cubans Like Americans?

I asked whether Americans were [illegible] Cubans. Mr. Diaz replied:

"The better classes of our people [illegible] have Americans come here, and they [illegible] capital. They realize that Cuba and the [illegible] must be closely connected commercially [illegible] and that Americans more than any others [illegible] in the development of their property. [illegible] classes, I mean the negroes and mulattoes [illegible] some objections to American immigration [illegible] how the negro is regarded in America [illegible] may not be so well treated by the [illegible] are by the Cubans."

"Speaking of this feeling," said Mr. [illegible]

Our own people have a queer idea of the native Cuban. They seem to think he is a savage or a negro. An exhibition of this feeling occurred while I was at the World's Fair, where I had to do with the Cuban exhibit. I was sitting in our pavilion when a party of Americans who had just visited the Filipino village came in. They had watched your half naked cousins in their grass huts, and had noticed their color and light attire. As they came into the pavilion one of them said to me: 'I want to see a real Cuban.' Whereupon I pointed to one of our commissioners, a fair faced, rosy cheeked gentleman of about sixty years of age, and said: 'There is one.' The man replied: 'Why, that man looks and dresses just like an American.' I could hardly make him believe that we Cubans are not like the savages of the mountains of Luzon."

The Cubans Versus the Spaniards.

Speaking of the feeling of the Cubans toward us, I believe Secretary Diaz is right. The lowest classes do not care for Americans. They are nevertheless very polite and will go out of their way to please. Those who hate us more than the Spaniards. There are many of them still in Cuba and they have a great part in the business of the island. Some are millionaires and not a few have large mercantile establishments. These Spaniards are thrifty. They deal on a close margin and buy as little as possible from the United States. They secretly fight the Americans and do everything they can to obstruct our trade. The conditions just now are in their favor, the tariff regulations favoring Spain rather than the United States. The duty on textiles is such that fine cotton goods cost almost as much as linen. The result is that people buy linen of Europe, when they should buy cotton of us. Some of the strongest houses in Havana are Spanish. This is especially so of the big wholesale establishments, many of which do a general banking business. A number of the big sugar plantations are owned by Spaniards and the Spaniards have vast tracts of valuable lands.

Talks on American Trade.

I met in Havana Mr. Barton of Reed & Barton, the silver merchants of New York, and asked him about our trade with Cuba. He replied:

"We are selling more goods to Cuba than ever before. Cuban merchants go to Europe by way of New York, and they usually leave orders there. This is so with machinery, leather goods, furniture, shoes and all kinds of notions. The taste of these people has been educated to European goods, but it is rapidly changing to American goods. The chief obstacles to the increase of American trade lie in the credit system. The European wholesaler is willing to wait, and as the Cuban wholesale merchant sells on time he wants sixty, ninety days or even six months' credit. He will pay good interest for it, but he must have the time. The American on the other hand wants cash with the order, and for this reason loses the trade."

"Do the Cubans pay their debts?"

"Yes, most of the houses here are as old and well established as any in the United States. I would trust my Cuban customers as soon as any I sell to at home. These people think it a disgrace to fail in business and we have as a rule but few losses."

"Do the Cubans buy much silverware?"

"Yes, both solid and plated. Of late they are buying a great deal of plated silver. They are calculating the cost of things more than they did in the past. I have been selling goods here for many years. Before the war my customers only asked themselves if they liked the goods. Today they figure closely and buy where they can buy cheapest."

Our Drummers in Cuba.

In talking with another American, a man who is selling goods for John Wanamaker and taking big orders daily, the question came up as to whether American commercial travelers can sell goods in Cuba. Said this drummer:

"I find it easy to get orders, especially among the native Cubans. They buy largely and are easy to sell. The Spaniards figure more closely. There is a big opening, however, here for the American drummer, and our largest wholesale houses should have their men on the ground working this trade. They should send their best men, and, if possible, those who speak Spanish. If they can't speak anything but English, however, they can get along and do well. As for me, I find that my Spanish sometimes hurts trade, and I speak English when I can. Then if there is a misunderstanding I am not the cause of it. The most of the Cuban merchants speak English, and those who do not cannot argue with me as to the goods and the prices. The result is they get down to business quicker and on the whole I am the gainer."

"What are the expenses of the commercial traveler in Cuba?"

"They are about the same here as at home. I figure on $10 gold a day as a good average. The railroad rates are a little higher and the hotel rates are especially dear. The best hotels in Havana charge $4 a day and upward, and out in the country one seldom pays less than $3 a day. Cab fares are cheap."

THE KAISER IN PARIS.

It has often been asserted that the German Emperor has paid frequent visits to Paris, of course in the strictest incognito. His presence here during the exhibition was emphatically affirmed. Now M. de Noussanne, author of "The Kaiser as He Is," contributes a remarkable article to the Echo de Paris, in which he gives the report of his conversation at Ostend with a diplomatist whom he cannot mention. This personage told the writer positively that the Kaiser has more than once visited Paris disguised as a motor car mechanic or driver, and that he is bound to do so again at any moment.—[London Telegraph.

The Helping Hand.

A STORY FROM CREWDSON'S NEW BOOK, "TALES OF THE ROAD."

Published by Courtesy of Author.

THE helping hand is often held out by the man on the road. Away from home he is dependent upon the good will of others; he frequently has done for him an act of kindness; he is ever ready to do for others a deed of friendship or charity. Road life trains the heart to gentleness. It carries with it so many opportunities to help the needy. Seldom a day passes that the traveling salesman does not loosen his purse strings for someone in want—no, not that; he carries his money in his vest pocket. Doing one kind act brings the doer such a rich return that he does a second generous deed and soon he has the habit. The liberality of the traveling man does not consist wholly of courting the favor of his merchant friends, he is free with them, but mainly because it is his nature; it is for those from whom he never expects any return that he does the most.

A friend of mine once told this story:

"It was on the train traveling into Lincoln, Neb., many years ago. It was near midnight. It was, I believe, my first trip on the road. Just in front of me, in a double seat, sat a poor woman with three young children. As the brakeman called: 'Lincoln, the next station! Ten minutes for lunch!' I noticed the woman feeling in her pockets and looking all around. She searched on the seats and on the floor. A companion, Billie Collins, who sat beside me leaned over and asked: 'Madam, have you lost something?'

"Half crying, she replied, 'I can't find my purse—I want to get a cup of coffee; it's got my ticket and money in it and I'm going through to Denver.'

"'We'll help you look for it,' said Billy.

"We searched under the seats and up and down the aisle, but could not find the pocketbook. The train was drawing near Lincoln. The poor woman began to cry.

"'It's all the money I've got, too,' she said pitifully. 'I've just lost my husband and I'm going out to my sister's in Colorado. She says I can get work out there. I know I had the ticket. The man took it at Ottumwa and gave it back to me. And I had enough money to buy me a ticket up to Central City where my sister is. They won't put me off, will they? I know I had the ticket. If I only get to Denver, I'll be all right. I guess my sister can send me money to come up to her. I've got enough in my basket for us to eat until she does. I can do without coffee. They won't put me off wi—ll—?'

"The woman couldn't finish the sentence.

"One of the boys—Ferguson was his name—who sat across the aisle beside a wealthy looking old man, came over. 'Don't you worry a bit, madam,' said he. 'You'll get through all right. I'll see the conductor.' The old man—a stockholder in a big bank, I afterward learned—merely twirled his thumbs.

"The conductor came where we were and said: 'Yes, she had a ticket when she got on my division. I punched it and handed it back to her. That's all I've got to do with the matter.'

"'But,' spoke up Collins, 'this woman has just lost her husband and hasn't any money either. She's going through to Colorado to get work. Can't you just say to the next conductor that she had a ticket and get him to take care of her and pass her on to the next division?'

"'Guess she'll have to get off at Lincoln,' answered the conductor gruffly, 'our orders are to carry no one without transportation.' All railroad men have not yet learned that using horse sense and being polite means promotion.

"The poor woman began to cry, but my friend Billy, said: 'Don't cry, madam, you shall go through all right. Just stay right where you are.'

"The conductor started to move on. 'Now, you just hold on a minute, sir,' said Collins, 'When this train stops you be right here—right here, I say, and go with me to the superintendent in the depot. If you don't, you won't be wearing those brass buttons much longer. It's your business, sir, to look after passengers in a fix like this and I'm going to make it my business to see that you attend to yours.'

"The conductor was lots bigger than my friend, but to a coward a mouse seems as big as an elephant, and 'brass buttons' said: 'All right, I'll be here; but it won't do no good.'

"As the conductor started down the aisle, Ferguson turned to the woman and said: 'You shall go through all right, madam, how much money did you have?'

"'Three dollars and sixty-five cents,' she answered—she knew what she had to a penny—$3.65. And I'll bet she knew where every nickle of it came from. A cruel old world this to some people, for a while!

The train had whistled for Lincoln. Ferguson took off his hat, dropped in a dollar, and passed it over to Billy and me. Then he went down the aisle, saying to the boys, 'Poor woman, husband just died, left three children, going to hunt work in Colorado, lost purse with ticket and all the money she had.' He came back with nearly enough silver in his hat to break out the crown—$18!

"'Will you chip in, colonel,' said Ferguson to the old man who had been his traveling companion?

"'No,' answered the old skinflint, 'I think the railroad company ought to look after cases of this kind. Ahem! Ahem!'

"'Well,' said Ferguson, snatching the valise out of his seat—I never saw a madder fellow—'We've enough without yours, even if you are worth more than all of us. You're so stingy I won't even let my grip sit near you.'

"When the train stopped at Lincoln, Billy and Ferguson took the conductor to the superintendent's office. They sent me to the lunch counter. I got back first with a cup of coffee for the mother and a bag for the children. But pretty soon in bolted Billy and Ferguson. Billy handed the woman a pass to Denver, and Ferguson dumped the $18 into her lap.

"'Oh, that's too much, I'll take just $3 and give me your name so that I can send that back,' said the woman, happier than anyone I ever saw.

"But we all rushed away quickly, Billy saying: 'Oh, never mind our names, madam. Buy something for the children; good-by, God bless you.'"

STRANGER THAN FICTION.

TRIUMPHS OF SCIENCE THAT ASTOUND THE SHADE OF JULES VERNE.

[New York World:] A phosphorescent cloud floated slowly into the editor's room last night, hovered over the big leather arm chair and settled there. Gradually the half luminous mass took shape—a man's shape. Jules Verne sat there.

"Graciously it has been permitted me to revisit the earth on this memorable day," he began, in a calm, sonorous voice. "One of my rewards in the beatific state that I enjoy is liberty to study, from time to time, those triumphs of latter-day sciences which are stranger than all the imaginings of my fiction.

"Before this I have tried to grasp the wonders and possibilities of wireless telegraphy, of radium, of the X-Rays, of liquid air. Today I hastened to New York, because, of all places in this particular world, it possessed the deepest interest for me.

"I foreshadowed man's conquest of the air in 'Five Weeks in a Balloon' and in the 'Cloud Clipper.' Today an airship was floating far above your loftiest house tops, an aerial craft under its navigator's perfect control.

"In 'Twenty Thousand Leagues Under the Sea' I described the fantastic performances of a submarine boat. Today the Plunger is steaming below your near-by waters.

"Today, too, I have seen the newly invented periscope, which enables those in a submerged vessel to see the whole horizon for miles around, and which at the same time pictures the entire surface of the water and everything above it. And, more wondrous still, I have examined, all unknown to the man whose mind created it, the fluorescent searchlight, which will light up the ocean's profoundest depths, and which as a surface searchlight, will light up the sea's surface for two miles around, itself remaining invisible.

"It needs no prophet now to foretell that soon will come the time when man will enter into possession of a realm beneath the waters a thousand times more vast than all the continents together," exclaimed the voice of Jules Verne, enthusiastically. "The bottom of the ocean will have its explorers, its tragedies, its long history of conquest and failure. Millionaires will abandon their surface yachts for yachts that can plunge and will explore the depths once forbidden. Instead of going after big game to India, the hunter will pursue the ferocious inhabitants of the deep in coral jungles. Men will fight for the ocean caverns they have discovered as they do now for their gold placers. Nations will presently annex portions of the sea bottom as they have done with savage islands and territories, and they will locate and operate their submarine mines of coal and metals. New lines of business, new industries, new commerce will spring up to exploit the products of the ocean.

"And man's domain of the air will yield him—"

The luminous shade remained silent for an instant, then spoke again:

"You will misunderstand me. I am giving you the false idea that in the flesh I was vain of the fulfillment of my so-called prophecies. It will surprise you, perhaps, to learn that I did not take especial pride in having written of the motor car, in 'The Steam House,' of the submarine boat and the navigable airship before they became actual facts; of the astounding development of trusts and philanthropy in the 'Five Hundred Millions of the Begum.'

"When I wrote about them as realities these things were half discovered already. I simply made fiction out of what became ulterior fact, and my object in so doing was not to prophesy, but to disseminate, as widely as could be, such knowledge as was given me."

The voice was silent, the phosphorescent specter grew dim, dimmer—vanished.

A STRENUOUS TEACHER.

A little girl who reads nature books, studies natural history and is devoted to pets, was discovered holding bunny in her lap, trying to direct his attention to a book that she had, and ever and anon boxing his long ears vigorously. Auntie was shocked, of course, and inquired what was the moving cause of such cruelty.

"He's so stubborn," replied the little teacher.

"A rabbit stubborn! Why, child, I never heard of such a thing. What is he stubborn about?"

"I'm trying to teach him the multiplication table, and he just won't try to learn, nor even say it over after me. Now, you say it, sir, 'Three times two are six—three times three are nine.'"

But the rabbit didn't say it, and again auntie inquired into her little niece's conduct as two or three more cuffs were administered to the poor creature's all too convenient ears.

"Why, auntie," explained the girl, "the books all say that rabbits multiply faster than any other animal, and this obstinate little creature won't even go through the three times threes with me."—[Lippincott's.

THE SCHOOL TEACHER.

PERPLEXING PROBLEMS HE HAS TO MEET IN THE ORIENT.

From Our Own Correspondent.

MANILA, August, 1905.—Education is the main dependence of the American government in its attempt to reconstruct the Philippines. The school teacher is the headline performer in the experimental drama that is being enacted in the effort to civilize the motley tribes who make up the population of the archipelago. We found here sixty-nine kinds of people speaking thirty-four languages and sixty dialects. The complication became more serious when it was learned that this mixed mass was heterogeneous—less than 10 per cent. of the whole being able to converse in a common tongue.

It has been an age-old belief that the oriental is incapable of enlightment; that nature intended him merely for a hewer of wood and a drawer of water.

Those who claimed to know the East were quick to advise, saying that it would be well enough to train the Filipino's muscle, but that any effort to develop his mind would be a waste of time and money. Uncle Sam is always ready to profit by the experience of others, nevertheless he is a great believer in the virtue of the little red schoolhouse, and so, one morning in August, 1901, the army transport Thomas dropped anchor in Manila Bay and began to discharge its human cargo of 550 American teachers. It was a merry, light-hearted crowd, come to "hustle the East;" tp work out the greatest experiment any nation in the world has ever attempted.

Other pedagogues followed until 900 were at work here. The total number who have come out for service is 1300. It would be difficult to describe the obstacles which these pioneers met and overcame. They went into districts that were so unsafe no army officer dare leave his tent without arms. Having no knowledge of the local vernaculars they had absolutely no way of making their wants known to those upon whom they had to depend for supplies and assistance in their work. At first their lives were altogether lacking in the comforts and conveniences to which they had been accustomed at home. That they remained in the face of all these discomforts and dangers is an everlasting tribute to their courage.

The mortality among the teachers has not been great. In seven years only fifty have died from all causes. More have been lost from drowning than in any other way, the loss of life from this source resulting from attempts to cross swollen streams and perilous straits. For a time smallpox caused one or two deaths a month, and several have been victims of cholera. Six teachers have been murdered by bandits, four having been killed at one time. They were captured by ladrones and carried around for a week or more before being put to death, the outlaws seemingly being undecided about what to do with their prisoners, and it has occasioned much regret that a more determined effort was not made to rescue them.

Another teacher was killed while leading a party in repulsing a band of desperadoes. This brave fellow engaged the leader of the ladrones in personal combat and both were killed. Still another pedagogue was waylaid and killed because it was thought a book satchel which he was carrying contained money. None of the teachers have been molested within the last two years, although on a number of occasions different ones have fallen in with bandits on their travels.

No small amount of criticism has been offered by those who believe that the government is spending a greater amount of the revenues on [illegible] for the common good of the people. In [illegible] of the revenues of the islands were [illegible] work, but this decreased until last year [illegible] was only 11 per cent. The appropriation [illegible] $1,206,225, which is about $40,000 less than [illegible] during the previous year.

Although the amount of the expenditure is [illegible] ually diminished, the volume of work [illegible] is increasing, which fact is due to the [illegible] ization. It is shown that the amount the [illegible] is investing on education in the Philip[illegible] cessive when compared to what is being [illegible] places. Japan has a population about [illegible] of the Philippines, yet it is spending [illegible] as much on general instruction, while [illegible] fourth of the entire revenue of Porto [illegible] used in furthering the cause of education.

The school authorities have their [illegible] education well formulated, and merely [illegible] which to demonstrate the practicability [illegible] The total number of children in the Phil[illegible] the ages of six and fourteen is 1,200,000 [illegible] has been to have 400,000 of these in the [illegible] time. The primary course requires [illegible] it will be seen that if this standard [illegible]

[illegible] of ten years the greater portion of the community will have a working knowledge of English, [illegible] and geography. The greatest trouble [illegible] at the present time is that the children are [illegible] in faster than they can be accommodated, the [illegible] for 1905 having reached the astonishing [illegible]. It is proposed to remedy this by [illegible] the age limit.

Course of Study.

[illegible] course of studies for the primary grades includes [illegible] of the simplest character, such as English, [illegible] geography, industrial work and music. The [illegible] course includes advanced English, arithmetic, [illegible] history, the study of plants, animals, [illegible]. In this course the boys are taught [illegible] or shop work and the girls are instructed [illegible]keeping. In the secondary school the pupils [illegible] either a literary course, trades, agriculture, [illegible] or teaching. Night schools are maintained [illegible], so that those who are employed during [illegible] may not be debarred therefrom. The industrial [illegible] popular in all the Asiatic countries and [illegible] of this sort are now being conducted in [illegible], India and the Federated Malay States.

[illegible] of school in the Philippines are different [illegible] in the United States. The session opens [illegible] half past seven in the morning and closes for [illegible] at eleven. Most of the American instructors [illegible] a class for native teachers during two hours [illegible] afternoon. About 800 Americans are now employed, and this number will not be materially [illegible] for several years. None of the white teachers [illegible] engaged in primary work, their whole time [illegible] to intermediate instruction or to supervision. There are now about 5000 natives teaching in [illegible] schools. The Filipino has two qualities [illegible] conducive to success as a teacher. He is [illegible] sympathetic, but is inclined to be indifferent [illegible] regular hours, and unless constantly [illegible] is not apt to be thorough.

[illegible] a fact not generally known that the oldest [illegible] under the American flag is located in the Philippines. What is now the University of Santo Tomas was [illegible] in Manila by Dominican friars in the year [illegible] members of that order are still in control. [illegible] college in the United States is Harvard, which [illegible] in 1636. William and Mary College of Virginia [illegible] organized in 1693, while Yale was founded [illegible] Fair Exhibit.

[illegible] exhibit at the St. Louis Worlds Fair [illegible] toward advertising what is being done here [illegible] that has been written on the subject. This [illegible] forty-seven acres of ground and was [illegible] buildings. The manner in which Ameri[illegible] there was an indication of the great interest [illegible] which prevails throughout the United [illegible]. President Francis said that the Filipinos were [illegible] feature" of the Fair. The records [illegible] ninety-nine people out of every one hundred [illegible] the Exposition grounds visited the Philip[illegible]. This exhibit cost the government 10 cents [illegible].

[illegible] of the educational exhibit at St. Louis [illegible] splendid results, was the distribution [illegible] by Filipino pupils to boys and girls [illegible], England and other English speak[illegible]. These were given to teachers who visited [illegible] among their pupils. A register [illegible] parties to whom letters were given, and [illegible] Exposition this book contained 12,000 [illegible]spondence now going on between [illegible] children and their little brown broth[illegible] is both a stimulus to the use of [illegible] an exchange of valuable information. [illegible] early to judge what effect educa[illegible] the Filipino, it has been demon[illegible] doubt that he is anxious to receive [illegible] he is an apt pupil. John Barrett [illegible] becoming Minister to Japan by say[illegible] was as bright as the Jap, yet the [illegible] among the teachers here seems to [illegible] young diplomat stated the case cor[illegible] that there are now more people in [illegible] who can speak English than Spanish. [illegible] spoken to in English will reply in [illegible] and this is not only true of inhabitants [illegible] of the country residents as well.

[illegible] Agitators.

[illegible] pessimistic concerning the satisfactory [illegible] among the Orientals contend that [illegible] generation will refuse to work, and will [illegible] into a crop of malcontents and agita[illegible] that every time a pupil is gained for [illegible] laborer is lost from the hemp fields; [illegible] a native in his own estimation so [illegible] himself above manual labor.

[illegible] grant that this is true in many instances [illegible] the same may be said of any country [illegible] has been introduced among an ignor[illegible]. Without approving the natives' aversion [illegible], they hold that this ambition to rise [illegible] circumstances is commendable; that his [illegible] will improve with his education.

[illegible] he will realize that the natural transition [illegible] station to one of greater importance is by [illegible] effort toward fitness, rather than [illegible] elevation. His failure to grasp this [illegible] does not make his case hopeless. That [illegible] of, and willing to receive instruction, is [illegible] feature of the situation. Given an apt pupil [illegible] to ultimately produce a creditable [illegible] entirely with the insight and patience of [illegible]. The real danger lies in the granting of [illegible] authority. If the half-developed native is [illegible] before he is equal to it, the mistake can only result in the disappointment and embarrassment for all concerned.

Filipino is Not Lazy.

The defenders of the Filipino scout the idea that he is incapable as a worker. They contend that his inclination to shirk physical labor is not due to inherent laziness, but rather to a lack of incentive. In the past he was poorly paid when he ventured to work and was shamefully robbed if he succeeded in accumulating wealth, which would have discouraged the ambition of any race, no matter how naturally energetic its people might have been. The tendency to exaggerate the dignity of a little learning is due to long familiarity with the Spanish code whereby the ignorant had to subserve and support their superiors.

Recent experiments with native labor have tended to support the foregoing conclusion. The contractors for the electric street railway in Manila succeeded in completing their work on time. They offered twice the scale prevailing during the Spanish régime, and gave each laborer ten cents extra at the noon hour. Providing the workman with cash to get something to eat near the work, prevented him from straying away, and made him more fit to labor than if he continued without eating.

The contractors in charge of the harbor improvements had no difficulty in procuring help when it became known that they would pay promptly. In former times the laborer received about 10 cents a day, but he frequently had difficulty in collecting his wages. This low scale, together with the uncertainties of payment, naturally made him indifferent. When the Americans offered 50 cents a day, there was much scepticism concerning the good intentions of the proposal, but prompt payment and fair treatment soon allayed all suspicion.

A Model Village.

The harbor improvement company now has a large colony established at their quarries. The commission has extended jurisdiction over the internal affairs of this village, and about a thousand families are located there. These people have their own church and schoolhouse, as well as a native doctor to attend them. They have an excellent band, and the company has even erected a cock-pit for their amusement. By supplying all the needs of the employés they do not stray from home, and the manager of the company says the labor problem is solved as far as he is concerned.

Such measures, while successful with collective labor, would be impossible of application to the rural workman. On account of his isolation he will be more difficult to handle. The government must rely on education. It will teach the trades and agriculture, with sufficient English and arithmetic to enable the individual to transact his affairs without being cheated; it will maintain the law and restore order; it will improve the land by making it bountiful and good to look upon. In the meantime, it is hoped that the Filipino will improve himself and justify the hope that is centered in him.

TRIBUTE TO A FRIEND.

A friend of former United States Marshal Isaac O. Barnes, having died, he attended the funeral. He arrived promptly and seated himself in the crowded room to await the services. For some reason there was a very long delay and the solemn silence of the darkened room was anything but congenial to a man of Mr. Barnes's disposition. The heat also was very oppressive.

Fanning himself vigorously with his hat, and twisting uneasily in his chair, Barnes remained silent for what to him was a very long time. But at last, being unable to contain himself longer, he leaned over toward a solemn looking man on his right and remarked, in a hoarse whisper audible all over the room, "I presume you were well acquainted with Billy," (referring to the deceased.)

"Yes, indeed," said the stranger, "he was a very fine man."

"I should say he was," replied Barnes, "and smart, too; smarter than lightning. Why, sir," he continued, in a louder whisper, getting excited, "if he had had the running of this funeral he'd been underground an hour ago."—[Boston Herald.

A TRUE BEAR STORY.

While on my vacation at Camp Valentine, in the heart of the Coast Range Mountains, amid the wilds of nature, several amusing and exciting animal stories were directly related to me.

Thus one story was told by an Irish huntsman who stammered hopelessly:

"Faith and b-b-be gory! I'm in l-l-luck to ba alive, an t-t-talkin'! As I c-c-came up B-B-Bear Wallow, I got off me d-d-donkey to give him water.

"I st-t-tumbled across two c-c-cubs by a log. I sh-h-shoots one o' them, when here c-c-cumes the old mother arfter me.

"B-b-be gory! I takes to me haals r-r-round an' r-r-round by a big pine t-t-tree, an' the auld m-m-monster right to me haals.

"Whin she gets d-d-dizzy, I runs to the t-t-tother side o' the b-b-bushes. Here she c-c-umes agin with b-b-bristles up the like o' mine—r-r-roaring the while."

"S-s-soon the baste gets d-d-dizzy agin, and b-b-backs off a pace d-d-dune the mountain. Faith! Then I j-j-jumps on me d-d-donkey, poor sceered c-c-critter ti-tied to a t-t-traa. Lack a d-d-day! the d-d-donkey is t-t-tied f-fast. He p-p-pulled, and I p-p-pulled and off c-c-cumes his b-b-bridle.

A City and Its Saint.

PADUA, THE TOMB OF ST. ANTHONY AND GIOTTO'S PICTURES.

By a Special Contributor.

WANDERING through the art galleries of Europe, one constantly comes upon that favorite subect of Renaissance artists, the visions of St. Anthony. Murillo, above all others, loved to depict the Paduan saint. How tenderly his brush lingers upon those masterpieces, where the Christ child appears before the young Franciscan. How varied, too, are these scenes St. Anthony, while reading, surprised by the holy vision; St. Anthony on his knees before the child enthroned; and lastly, crowning ecstacy, the infant folded in his arms, while jubilant angels sing hosannas in praise.

One grows to have a deep tenderness for this rapturous, ardent young saint, and a visit to his shrine at Padua is more a pilgrimage than a mere sight-seeing tour.

Though Padua has not the attractions of many towns in Northern Italy; neither the ruins of Verona, the mosaics of Ravenna, nor the architectural freaks of Bologna; still it can boast a Roman descent, and no less a person than the stern Mantegne headed its school of art. Padua, too, was one of the adopted homes of Dante, "Il Divino." It takes but little imagination, indeed, to conjure up the meeting between him and Giotto, which took place here in the early years of the fourteenth century. Giotto must have tarried many months in Padua, for he has left here masterpieces such as no true student of the Renaissance would dare neglect. His "Life of the Virgin," completely covers the walls of an unpretentious little church, called "Madonna dell' Arena." Faded, cracked by weather and by time, these frescoes still stand as one of the art wonders of the world.

BASILICA OF ST. ANTHONY.

True to the traditions of north Italian towns, the streets of Padua are flanked by low arcades; others are narrow, sunless passages, picturesque, but damp and forbidding as an avenue of tombs.

There is much to please the eye, as one saunters through the main thoroughfares, trending towards the great church, which has been the loadstone of our visit. The street scenes are delightful, as they are in all Italian cities. The people take to their homes only as a last resort, and at the close of a long day lived in the sunshine. We find the poor congregated at the market place, a broad piazza, finaked by a fine old building, called "Palazzo del Capitani." The signori, however, are never seen far from the marble porticoes of some café, where they sip vermouth and kill time. They never have pressing business, these gentlemen of Italy.

Finally emerging on an open square, the immense basilica of St. Anthony stands before us. At first sight the architecture of this church impresses one as fantastic in the extreme, but, too, it holds the charm of fantasy. One might say that it looked like a bunch of inflated balloons, tugging at their tie ropes. Its seven domes, its slender towers, flying buttresses and jutting chapels all seem to be held together, as it were, under protest. Many artists worked in the erection of St. Anthony's, and it covers a larger area than St. Mark's at Venice.

The vast, whitewashed interior is bare and chilling, and one hastens through to reach the chapel of the saint.

Truly beautiful is the last resting place of St. Anthony. One long retains a memory of dazzling, white carved marble, of a roof picked out in gold, of votive lamps hung between rounded arches, and of immense silver angels, holding candles, that light the tomb. The walls of the chapel are completely covered with reliefs, showing the life of the saint, from his ordination, and the different miracles which he performed. The most celebrated is that where Anthony causes a young child to testify to its mother's innocence; a beautiful group but cold in execution. Attached to the shrine are numerous votive offerings, flaming hearts and crosses in silver and testimonials by those whom the saint has miraculously cured. On one side, too, is a pile of old crutches, in sorry contrast to the gorgeous shrine.

In a secluded corner of the great basilica is a picture, supposedly an authentic portrait of St. Anthony. The style is that of Giotto, and the painting has been attributed to him. Two figures kneel at the feet of the saint, who stands erect and extends his hand in blessing. The grouping is stiff and the coloring crude, but the expression of Anthony's face is mild and beatific, and as we move away, we feel that his blessing has extended down the centuries, even unto us.

MARTHA LOWELL.

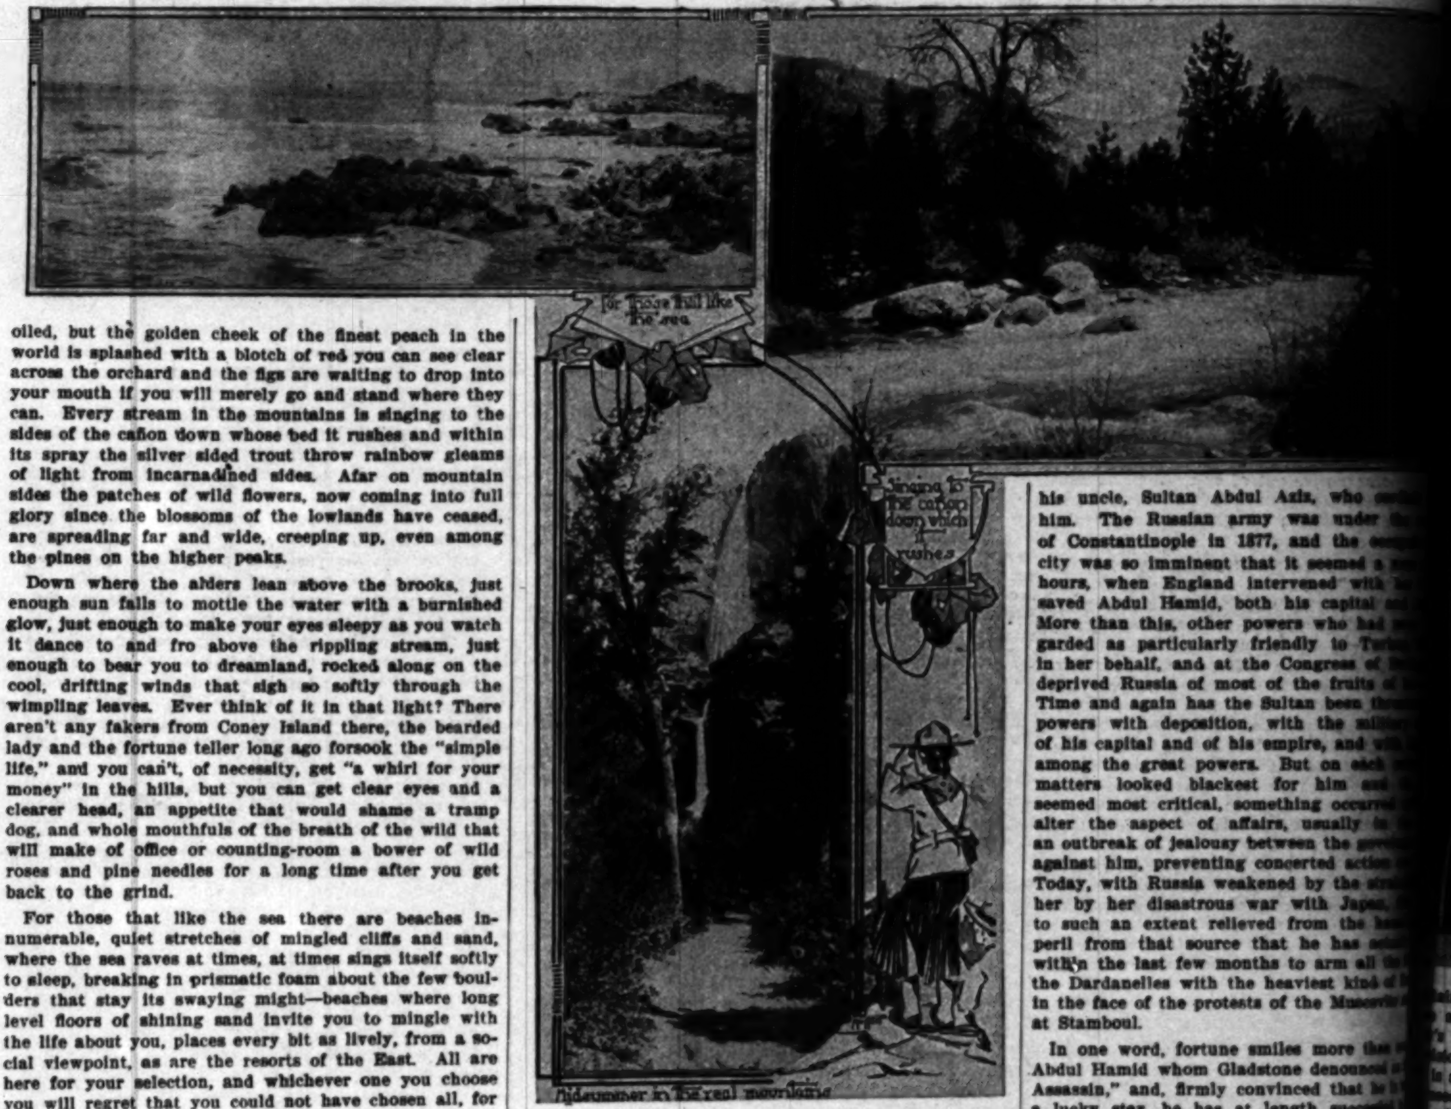
California's Midsummer.

DIFFERENCE BETWEEN OUR HEATED TERM AND ELSEWHERE.

By a Special Contributor.

TO a friend of the writer, traveling in the East not long ago, a dweller on the Atlantic seaboard said: "What a pity you people who have such a nice climate all the rest of the year should be compelled to endure a California midsummer." The westerner was of strong constitution and he recovered, but what he told that Egyptian concerning the climate of the Land We Love gained for him a reputation as the most able single-handed liar east of the Rockies.

California—that is, the southern end of it, needs no commiseration, and mighty little assistance from anybody, least of all from those who swelter through a 110-degree summer trying to get together enough money to buy coal for the next winter, when the thermometer is forty below sea level. The best time of all, of course, in California as anywhere else in the Temperate Zone, is her spring, for then the flowers bloom brightest, the birds sing sweetest to their nesting mates, and all the world of the outdoors is busy making promises of what is is going to do when midsummer arrives. And these gorgeous months of the golden mid-year never disappointed one of their devotees either in quantity nor in quality. Nor does the bud and blossom promise of March and April and May fail of fulfillment in July and August and September. The dust may lie a trifle thick along the few country roads that have not yet been oiled, but the golden cheek of the finest peach in the world is splashed with a blotch of red you can see clear across the orchard and the figs are waiting to drop into your mouth if you will merely go and stand where they can. Every stream in the mountains is singing to the sides of the cañon down whose bed it rushes and within its spray the silver sided trout throw rainbow gleams of light from incarnadined sides. Afar on mountain sides the patches of wild flowers, now coming into full glory since the blossoms of the lowlands have ceased, are spreading far and wide, creeping up, even among the pines on the higher peaks.



For Those that like the sea
Singing to the cañon down which it rushes
Midsummer in the real mountains

Down where the alders lean above the brooks, just enough sun falls to mottle the water with a burnished glow, just enough to make your eyes sleepy as you watch it dance to and fro above the rippling stream, just enough to bear you to dreamland, rocked along on the cool, drifting winds that sigh so softly through the wimpling leaves. Ever think of it in that light? There aren't any fakers from Coney Island there, the bearded lady and the fortune teller long ago forsook the "simple life," and you can't, of necessity, get "a whirl for your money" in the hills, but you can get clear eyes and a clearer head, an appetite that would shame a tramp dog, and whole mouthfuls of the breath of the wild that will make of office or counting-room a bower of wild roses and pine needles for a long time after you get back to the grind.

For those that like the sea there are beaches innumerable, quiet stretches of mingled cliffs and sand, where the sea raves at times, at times sings itself softly to sleep, breaking in prismatic foam about the few boulders that stay its swaying might—beaches where long level floors of shining sand invite you to mingle with the life about you, places every bit as lively, from a social viewpoint, as are the resorts of the East. All are here for your selection, and whichever one you choose you will regret that you could not have chosen all, for you hear so many happy stories from those that went to places where you did not go, and yet you yourself know that you really had the best time of all. That is one of the good things about California's outdoors, either in midsummer or earlier in the year; you are perfectly satisfied with the place to which you go, or the hunting or fishing or walking you take up—that is, you are satisfied if it is in your nature to be satisfied; if you can't be contented in Southern California you will be kicking or knocking or doing something you shouldn't when the pearly gates swing wide to yet you into the Hereafter.

Do you prefer the mountains, sky-scraping pyramids set down to mark the graves of the Titans? Far and near, throughout the length and breadth of the Golden State, there are as beautiful mountains as there are anywhere in the world. At another place in these columns I have described at length the mountains which look on California as "Marathon looks on the sea," and to say much more here would be repetition, useless to regular readers of The Times. There are many wild places hereabouts, where one may go and get all of the roughing it one wants, while there are other and more accessible places where all the comforts of civilization and all the companionship of the best people of the Southwest may be had—where one can be as comfortable as at his own home.

That kind of an outing never did appeal very strongly to the writer; the Lord knows there are too many people huddled together in the cities now, without planting little mushroom colonies wherever there is a spring in the hills. I am a great believer in the doctrine of the hills; that it is good to just go out and lie around under the trees and let the squirrels throw acorns and nut shells at you and the ants bite you until you get rested. But you can't rest very much astride a burro watching the trail with one eye and the girl ahead of you with the other—and rest is what this old world needs, top and bottom, the studied ability to take our time with anything and everything that comes up—to let absolutely nothing hurry us until we are ready to be hurried and then to take our time with our rushing.

The mountains bloom so beautifully during the midsummer months, too, wild tiger lilies and roses and all the rest of the gorgeous sisterhood that make Southern California's wild garden famous the world around. I remember once, long ago, there grew an immense bed of flame-throated tiger lilies down in a little flat place in a broad cañon back of Arden. And, by the way, have you ever been to Arden? No? Well, then, go; go and see the beautiful quiet retreat there in the Santa Ana hills; then when you get through with this go down by way of El Toro to Laguna, and you will come upon one of the prettiest and least advertised beaches of the entire roast. But—to return to our lilies—I never before nor since have seen so many and such gorgeous ones. They are peculiar blossoms, are tiger lilies; today they will be growing squarely in the bottom of some gorge and next year not a one will be blooming there, but, half-way up the mountain side you will find a clump of three or four. Over back of Old Baldy the wild roses grow the best of any, but they can nowhere rival the tame roses that are blooming for you this morning. And this is not the largest nor yet the sweetest rosebush the Southwest knows, either, but it was grown in the midst of the dryest seasons this State has ever had and the full glory of its bloom comes to it in the hottest month of all the California year. Beyond this, of course, it must be admitted that other blossoms do not do as well here during the midsummer months as do the roses—but who that has ever gathered a great handful of glowing golden or crimson or white or pink roses in such a summer as this would ever want any other kind of flowers, would ever want to go blossom gathering in any other land.

Under the oaks, on the lower hills, where all seems so sepia-colored and dead, there is yet left much of the greenery of early spring, and can you but find a cool, shaded cañon, from whose head ever so tiny a rivulet gushes, you will come upon a veritable paradise, for here will be bank on bank of rich fern clump, wide patches of godetias and wild fuchsias over whose reddening clusters the humming birds hang in scintillant clouds. To such a place, too, come the quail and the doves, such of the little gray while the squirrels line the hillside I do not think that the squirrels have water from the spring, though I have ing from a horse trough in a barnyard, to like the small creatures the lure of about the pool.

And don't let anyone mislead you into there is any part of Southern California mountains that is so very warm. Just comfortable in tent houses out here freezing is no reason that when the into a bit of charcoal we are in like the thermometer goes above 90 in the California—except the hot interior valleys goes up about the heat; but nobody even prostrated. But when the mercury same height in New York or St. Louis several other eastern cities, there are ately. Though the why and wherefore of tions may not at once be obvious, the fort is evident to one who has long land of perpetual sun.

Switzerland ends and Germany begins, and is at once marked. Here the valley opens into a broad plain and down past Strasand Heidelberg, Frankfurt and Mayence, becomes level and well-watered, well-cultivated stretch. Hops and grain seem to be the principal many parts of this territory. On the level are no fences. Germany evidently has the no-fence idea which very sensibly im- the owner of live stock the responsibility of of it. The land is held in large patches. I the way the fields are laid out. In many parts few houses straggling here and there over the farmers build their houses close forming a sort of village, often amounta town.

the fields are tilled! The land is as clean as a well-kept garden, free from weeds, brush or anything to impede the proper working of the soil or the growth of the crop. The work is all done with teams, excepting in small garden patches. There are no companies of men or women digging up great fields by hand. So far as I could learn, no women work in the fields in this part of Germany, or if they do, not generally. It used to be general for women to do farm work all over Germany. I am told it is not uncommon in remote parts of the empire still, but it is becoming less and less the rule. In fact, to judge of Germany today by Germany of even a few years ago, would be very misleading. The progress made in the country has been by great strides. The intelligence applied to farming along this valley is most striking. No soil is let go to waste. Where the land is not rich enough to produce grain, hops or fruit, a small piece of wood is established. If it is very light soil, the trees planted are pine. If it is a rocky piece of ground, small oaks cover it. If it is wet, willows or some other species of tree suited to that sort of land. And as fast as one tree is large enough to cut down a young one is put in its place.

The whole aspect of the country is as prosperous as any I ever saw. Brickyards abound and the use the bricks are put to stares you in the face at every mile-stone you pass. One might well imagine he was in some part of America where a new colony was being planted if he judged from the houses. These are nearly all new. They are well built, of ample size, and apparently every possible attention is given to make them comfortable. Where there is an old house it has been added to if not large enough before, and the old parts are all in good repair with a good coat of paint, new tiles when needed and many similar indications of thrift and well-being on the part of the owners. On these broad fertile plains there are few or rather no vineyards. I am speaking of the right bank of the Rhine, and some distance away from the stream. On the left bank is Alsace-Lorraine, which is much more French than German still, in spite of all the efforts being made to transform the country into a Teutonic type.

The Picturesque Rhine.

The Rhine Valley, as we know it, the picturesque and historic Rhine, begins at Mayence and reaches to Dusseldorf. Here the broad level plain gives place to rather low hills on both sides of the river, and the stream having gathered all the waters of the broad plains above is here of considerable dignity. Along this stretch of the river, vineyards occupy nearly all the visible slopes of the hills. Here all the Rhenish wines are made. These vineyards are for the most part like those of France, Italy and Switzerland, which occupy similar land. They are generally small patches planted on the hillside and up to the very apex of the hills. The soil here is very light, sometimes full of small stones and occasionally rocky. The vines are small, set close together and all staked up to some sort of support. From these vines come those peculiarly light wines known as Rhine wines so famous the world over. The most characteristic types are white wines, but there are red Rhine wines too.

Nowhere is the progress and prosperity of New Germany more evident than here along the scenic Rhine. There are other enterprises besides vineyards and the other farming, to be seen along the historic river. Even at picturesque Bingen, the march of modern industries is seen. These signs of busy life crowd along the water's edge and reach up among the hills. The chimneys rise up and belch out dun volumes of smoke at a hundred points. The wooded banks are there still. The old castles, many in ruins, are still there, witnesses of old days of feudal tyranny, bloodshed and violence. But the woodlands and the ruins, even with the vineyards, added no longer, hold undisputed sway along the stream, so long famed for its beauty and romance. One catches glimpses of chimneys taller than the ruins, pouring out their columns of smoke upon the brows of the hills in the closest proximity to the castles. Where the bugle call once echoed and the hoofs of the soldier's war horse, now the shrill steam whistle rends the air and the hum of busy machinery sings its merry song. Gazing at the ruined castles and the vine-clad slopes, to be frank, I must confess to the very bad taste of being more impressed by these signs of industry than by the spectral ruins of past ages. But I do not know, after all is said, a graveyard is the last place one wants to go to, and these monuments over the graves of a past civilization are not so interesting as the pulsating life of the present day, as found in a busy factory. A past civilization! Was it civilization that created these grim castles? Well, perhaps one step in the evolution of the civilization in which we of today live.

This great develoment of modern industry culminates at Dusseldorf, one of the greatest centers of the iron business in Germany; not far off is Essen, where the Krupp works are situated. Below Dusseldorf the lands are level, becoming lower and lower the further down the river one goes until the boundaries of Holland are reached. This lower part of Germany is very much like that was before we got to Frankfort, only damper. The farming is much of the same type.

How They do Things in Holland.

After seeing Holland it is difficult to be without some doubts as to the correctness of Huxley's theory of evolution. How humanity has lived here for untold ages and not developed wings, fins or web feet or all three of these faculties, is a great puzzle. The man who was equipped with one or more of such means of locomotion would have a great advantage over any sort of pedestrian meant to live all the time on terra firma. By the way, there was once a Flying Dutchman. Perhaps he was the one who should have survived and left a generation of men with wings. Perhaps he had so much advanatge over the mere bipeds that they fell on him, cut off his wings, forbade him to multiply and replenish the earth—I mean the water—and thus interfered with the natural evolution of a winged race of men.

From where we entered Holland at Sevenaar to Utrecht the country is very much like Belgium or the lower part of Hanover. From there on the land becomes less and less, the water more and more. At first the country was only like that along the Po in Italy, very damp, with ditches cut here and there between the fields to drain off the water. By degrees these fields became more and more narrow, the ditches more and more frequent, until in spite of all efforts to make the dry land appear, the bits of land were only broad ribbons with a streak of water nearly as wide as the bit of land between. The ditches have to be cleared out continually, and in spite of all efforts they are all the time full of water. In many places the ditches are broad and deep enough to float a skiff and this is the usual mode of locomotion. In other places where the ditches are not so low or deep, small bridges stand by which access is had to the fields beyond. The small houses of the farmers are placed along anywhere among these watercourses, where there is room found to build a house and its outbuildings. In cleaning out the ditches a black rich vegetable mould is taken up which is spread on the narrow ribbons of land between.

It is an exceedingly intricate system of drainage by which the water is led off, for at almost all points the land lies below the bed of the Rhine. But the stout Dutchman, his stout frau, the fat geese, great white pigs, big sheep and fine Holstein cattle, all flourish here on the flat fields between the ditches. And there is almost as much water in the air as in the canals. There is not a great deal of frost nor of snow in Holland even in winter time. But from September, I judge to about the end of May, the rain is very persistent. The air is at all times surcharged with dampness. The command to let the waters above be separated from those below according to the book of Genesis was only partly obeyed in Holland. So the command to let the dry land appear was never fully obeyed in the low countries. While there is little snow or frost the mercury hovers so close to the freezing point that it is not a pleasant climate to live in. Indeed, this damp cold goes to one's very marrow, and is harder to bear than twenty degrees of frost where the atmosphere is clear and dry, with a brilliant sunshine. Not only the fields are green nearly all the winter but hardy vegetables, such as cabbage and cauliflower flourish in the fields in the depth of winter. Such vegetables are common all over Northwestern Europe all winter long and the price is not high.

CASE OF CHINESE NERVE.

A Chinese, carrying a ladder, walked into one of the police courts in Singapore, the other day. Removing his hat, he bowed with grace to the judge on the bench. Over the latter's seat was a valuable clock. This the Chinese quietly removed, tucked it under one arm and the ladder under the other, bowed again to the magistrate, and withdrew. Some days elapsed, and the clock was not returned. It had been stolen while the court was sitting.—[New York Tribune.

Science vs. Crime.

MARVELOUS DISCOVERIES MADE WITH THE PHOTOMICROGRAPH.

ESTABLISHES SOURCES OF HAIR, BLOOD AND EVEN PARTICLES OF SKIN FOUND ON MURDERERS—NEW TESTS FOR DETERMINING WHETHER HAIR IS FROM BEAST, NEGRO, MAN OR WOMAN—CASE OF MURDERED GIRL FOUND WITH HAIR CLUTCHED IN HAND—NEW TESTS FOR BLOOD EVEN MORE DELICATE.

By a Special Contributor.

THE most interesting and exciting war of wits now waging in this strenuous world of ours is that between science and crime.

Of all the artillery, light and heavy, which the legions of science have directed against the cohorts of crime, I can think of none more merciless in effect than the camera which produces the photomicrograph. To illustrate the powers of this harmless-looking engine of war, I need simply say that you, if photographed by such an instrument—large enough to perpetuate you upon one of its colossal plates—would appear fully as tall as Deudhunga, the highest peak of the Himalayas. So you will not express surprise when I tell you that a drop of blood, a single hair, a particle of skin found under the finger nail of a person suspected of crime may now tell the tale of his guilt or innocence. It will establish from what class of animal the blood is from; whether the hair is from a beast, man or woman, and whether it matches the hair of a certain person; and this science is so far developing that even the minutest particle of skin will demonstrate its own origin.

One Hair Gave Clew.

Some time ago at Bedford, Ind., Miss Schafer, a school teacher, was found mysteriously slain. Clutched in her stiffened fingers were found hairs torn from her foe, whether beast, negro or white man was not known. A Louisville expert who made the photomicrographic test pronounced at once that the hair was from a white man. This method, developed by Dr. Paul Jeserich, the judicial chemist of Leipzig, was first demonstrated in a case wherein the life of a suspected murderer literally hung upon a hair. The case was one of murder and two men were suspected of the crime. A single hair was found upon the clothing of the victim, and this was enlarged into a photomicrograph. Hairs from one of the suspected men were also taken and photomicrographed. Then the two pictures were compared, but the difference in structure, tint and general appearance was marked. Hairs from the other man were then treated, and these too, were found to be unlike that taken from the murdered man's clothing. The latter was seen to be pointed, showing that it probably had never been cut. Working upon this clew and making comparisons with the hirsute coverings of all sorts of persons and animals it was finally discovered that the hair in question was that of an old yellow smooth-haired dog. It then came out that one of the prisoners owned just such a dog, a fresh hair from which conformed in every detail with that found upon the victim. On this evidence the owner of the dog was held, and he subsequently confessed that he alone committed the crime.

Now, it appears that no two hairs are exactly alike when taken from different species, races or sexes. Animal hair differs in construction from that grown on a human head. In human hair the surface stratum is smooth and thin. The circular section is comparatively broad, forming the main part of the hair shaft. It is striped in appearance and carries the coloring matter. The tubular part is thin, extending to not more than one-quarter of the entire width of the hair. In the animal hair the tube fills nearly the entire width. The hair from beards is the thickest of the human category, being as much as 0.15 mm. in diameter, while the hair from a woman's head is found as fine 0.06 mm. The ends of hair are also closely studied, and if ragged and torn at the extremities, the presumption is that the locks are from a woman, or possibly a man wearing his hair long and untrimmed. Much is told by the roots. Those from a woman's head are thin and attenuated, those from a man's scalp club-shaped, while the hair itself from his beard has cells containing air, and so on down the ladder of evolution are found characteristics too technical to mention. Hair being but a prolongation of the cuticle, it is, of course, not unreasonable to believe that minute particles of skin may be traced by the photomicrograph.

How Blood Tells.

But it is blood that tells, the old saw says. Now when there is made a photomicrograph of the vital fluid there is seen a series of uniform, scattered objects—the corpuscles, enlarged. Those of man are circular, a characteristic shared by all other mammals except the camel. In the lower vertebrates they are oval, elliptical and so on. So, then, if a spot of blood found on a suspected murderer is that of a bird or a reptile, for example, the photomicrograph will free him, but if it be mammal's blood, other than that of a camel—what then? Photomicrographists now claim that they can distinguish man's blood from that of such other mammals; that the corpuscles while agreeing in shape, differ in diameters and that diameters are easily compared with this powerful instrument. They say that this diameter for a man is 1-3200 of an inch; of a dog, 1-3570; of a mouse, 1-3850; of a sheep, 1-5000 and so on.

But a surer blood test independent of the photomicrograph and one claimed to distinguish between man and beast has even more lately been developed. I have seen this—this Bordet test—performed by Prof. John Lear in his biological laboratory at Muhlenberg College. Its first appearance as a factor in medico-legal proceedings occurred during the recent investigation of the massacres of the Jews at Kishineff, Russia, when it was applied to the clothing of a child to determine whether some blood spots were of human or animal origin. This Bordet test has for its basis the affinity which blood is discovered to have for its like. Human blood has this affinity only for human blood; dog's blood for dog's blood, and so on. A suspicious spot upon clothing, wood or metal being brought to Prof. Lear, he first makes a microscopic test to determine whether it is blood of any kind. Then it is a simple matter to prove whether it is animal's blood other than camel's.

Inject Man's Blood Into Rabbit.

The next step is to thrust the needle point of a hypodermic syringe into the arm of a healthy man and to suck out therewith five cubic centimeters of blood. A rabbit, with a shaven spot over his abdomen is next produced from the laboratory menagerie and this healthy human blood is injected into its circulation. After this there form in the rabbit's blood certain products which have the characteristis of attracting only human blood. The rabbit is finally bled, its blood being collected in a vessel and cooled, during which process its corpuscles settle in a clot, on the top of which rises a light liquid (the serum) containing these products which attract human blood only and repel that of any other animal.

The professor meanwhile has had before him, awaiting the final test, those bloodstains suspected of being of human origin. In one recent case they were found upon an alleged murderer who claimed that they had oozed from his pet dog. The suspicious stains are first dissolved in a salt solution, into which is later poured two or three drops of the test solution obtained from the rabbit's blood. The combined liquids are placed in glass test tubes standing upright in a little wire rack, which is put into a copper oven or "incubator" with a little inner door of glass. Here the tubes are kept for some time at a temperature of 73 degs. In several hours they are taken out and examined.

Now the long-awaited medico-legal verdict of the suspect's guilt is to be rendered. The presence of human blood in the washed stains is proven if the liquid in the tubes has turned cloudy and filled with flakes at the bottom. If the liquid in the tubes remains transparent, however, and without any deposit, the proof is just as positive that man's blood was not present in the suspected stain. If dog's blood and not the blood of a man had been injected into the rabbit originally the test fluid taken from the rabbit would precipitate only dog's blood, and so on. But there is only one exception to this rule—a partial exception only—and it is one which contributes a further datum in favor of those who believe that we are descendants of the apes. It is found that several very high orders of the ape family—never seen in this country, not even in menageries—will cause a partial clouding and precipitation in the humanized test fluid. But this is only so when the fluid is diluted below a certain degree.

MICROSCOPIC BLOOD TEST.

Could Solve Murders of Rue Morgue.

But were those very "Murders of the Rue Morgue," in which an ape was the murderer—as fancied by Poe—to be repeated here today, Prof. Lear, with one drop of the ape's blood could nevertheless determine that the telltale stain was not human. He says that he can distinguish between ape and human blood by employing a 500 to 1 solution of the test serum.

But this wonderful test goes still farther and distinguishes between the blood of the negro and white man. Such results are at least indicated by experiments now being made by Dr. J. W. Mallet of the University of Virginia. He has immunized rabbits with the blood of the colored race and has found difference in their reactions from those of Caucasians. Indeed, when science can go this far—determining from the blood trail left by a wounded criminal, whether he be white or black,—a great stride has been made.

We will return a moment to the photomicrograph. This instrument is being directed not only against the murderer, but the forger. By aid of a certain kind of plate it may be made to yield a clear image of writing which has been completely covered with fresh characters by the hand of the forger. The true and the false are thus distinctly revealed at the same time. If you have a camera you know that the ordinary photographic plate will photograph blue as white and yellow or red

The Secret Agent.

THE LONE WAR WAGED BY KATO, THE JAPANESE.

By a Special Contributor.

[illegible] life of Kato was dedicated to the service of the Emperor. It was the duty of his teachers to thread his body with steel fibers instead of nerves; to render his soul adamantine to sympathy and sentiment and to fashion his brain for instant, cheerful sacrifice that he should live strongly. He was of the purest [illegible] of the Samurai from the province of Satsuma, famed for the courage of its men and for the delicate beauty of its women and its ware.

As a babe he was given to his teachers, being conceded perfect in body, brain and breed. Into wonderful hands he fell; men who were wise unto mystery in human faculties, psychic and organic, manipulated the [illegible] toward the ordained purpose of his life. As the [illegible] of the daimios were unerringly tempered for the fine balance between brittleness and malleability, [illegible] even the blades of Toledo and Damascus, so the physique of Kato heated, chilled and wrought. A secret shame tortured the boy, and if his teachers had known, they would have beaten it from him. The memory of a woman was in his mind, a memory which defied his fiercest struggles to repress. And there must have been a drop of blood in him which the birds brought from Europe, since he could not forget the fair young mother who had sung him lullabies in a paper-windowed room where the iris bloomed and a charcoal brazier glowed long, long ago—and it was agony to remember.

Kato was sixteen when his nation aroused and smote the sleeping giant of Asia. From the tragic day, the darkest in the annals of the island empire, when victory was turned to shame and the chief trophy of conquest seized by the Triple Alliance, the boy was trained for a specialist. He was withheld from all communication with the outer world. His hair was allowed to grow. He was carefully instructed in the English and Russian tongues, but forced not only to [illegible] to think in Chinese.

Then he became deeply versed in many accomplishments—telegraphy, railroad and bridge construction, the [illegible] of range, the use of firearms, fuses and explosives; in the drawing of maps, in the tying and carrying of [illegible] and in the handling of junks. Above all, he acquired a quality which was Chinese, intimate with the rice, tea, silks, coins, gods and traditions of the mainland people.

When Kato was twenty-one, his teachers pronounced him their masterpiece. They had found but one fault in him. Satsuma and his lineage had given him small hands and feet. They taught him to bind the latter and habitually to conceal the former. Here now was a young man capable of acquitting himself with credit as envoy extraordinary to a foreign court, but it was decided that Japan needed him more as an observer in Manchuria in the disguise of a Chinese coolie.

With a queue that hung to his thighs, the opium pallor on his lean face, and clad in the greasy padded garments of a burden bearer, he made his way to Tientsin as a hand on a vile little hooker; then leisurely proceeded to Yinkow, already fouled by Russian hands, seeing the new land as he went with the proprietary eye of an outgoing consul or missionary.

He found the Russian section boss in a shattered [illegible] seeking employment on the railway, although it was not beyond his limitations to have spoken Russian better than the native; and although he could have talked learnedly with the literati of China, [illegible] the sneakily-intoned and restricted speech of the coolie. Indeed, it was within his capacity successfully to have engineered the building of the Port Arthur arm of the great railroad; but instead he toiled with pick and shovel on the roadbed, bringing forth songs of labor on occasion and singing under his burdens as those of welted backs who hewed and [illegible] the cedars of Lebanon.

Though Kato was apart from his kind, and in thought there was both humor and drama. He knew that there would be a moment in years to come when he would stealthily ignite a thread somewhere [illegible] line and destroy—for his Emperor—the work of [illegible] men for a hundred days.

At length Japan deemed herself in readiness to strike the enemy for the repossession of the fortress [illegible] of Liaotung and interest. The five-year postgraduate course of Kato in Manchuria then came to an end and his active service as a spy began. He sent a message to Watanabe, a Japanese leader in hiding up in the mountains, that war was a fact; [illegible] the strength at points of Russian concentration and averaged to a rifle the military capacity of [illegible]. His reports were passed down the railway by sub-spies and eventually reached the General Staff at Tokio. One of his assignments was to draw a map of the enemy's fortifications around the city of [illegible]. This task required twenty nights. The topography of every acre of ground (the same ground which the Empire's men fought over and won three [illegible] with Kato's map in the headquarters' [illegible]) was portrayed with colossal capacity for detail—every mound, mountain, ridge, ravine, forest, [illegible], even to hummocks and clumps of trees. [illegible] against almost insuperable odds. Once he [illegible] five nights' work. The alarm, an [illegible] sentry, found only what appeared to be a coolie writhing from internal pains. During the hours of daylight, Kato tugged ties and set rails for [illegible] siding. His teachers had builded well.

[illegible] marvel was praised in Tokio; the worth of it even penetrated the moat-encircled palace walls, but Satsuma was not told. Kato was not working for fame since secrecy is antipodal, nor for self, nor his teachers, nor for wealth or woman—but for the Emperor. It was all for the same, a stupendous task or a quick unhallowed death—for the Emperor. The wonder of it was that he continued to live, since his existence was as precarious as the blaze of a candle flaring in a tempest.

Late in the spring Kato received orders to blow up the six-span bridge crossing the Tatche-ho (river) between the Manchurian capital and the first city of size above. It was required that the work be done speedily in order that the reinforcing stream of troops marshaling under the Russian commander-in-chief near the Korean boundary might be broken. The coolie who brought the order to Kato also delivered a suitable explosive, and the spy stole away from his gang in the night.

The Tatche-ho bridge was only eight miles north, but it was necessary for Kato to make a wide detour through the eastern fields and forest in order to avoid the Russian railway guards. During the remainder of the day, the spy traveled in haste, but craftily. He well knew that it would be impossible for him to strike the bridge except by the river, which he reached in the dusk at a point two miles upstream. He was carrying a wooden box of the size in which tinned goods are shipped. The cracks in the four sides of the box had been widened, apparently by a knife.

Kato calmly accepted a handicap, inasmuch as the night was cloudless and it was the season of the full moon. He tarried for a few moments on the bank; then stripped to loin cloth and undershirt. With a bundle containing his clothing, also the heavy explosive, fuse and matches in a waterproof case, tied to his waist, and the wooden box in his hand, he waded into the stream, pausing often to look and listen. The night was balmy and beautiful, and the grasp of winter which still mastered the mountains from whence Tatche-ho came was crushing cold in the water. A moment later one could have seen only a box floating downstream in the moonlight.

The box bobbed on past the bridge, but the spy clung to one of the abutments and slowly, shoved by the current, let himself around to the stone pier. In the shadow of the truss above, he breathed deeply for a few seconds, listening to the strokes of the sentries' feet and rifle butts which rung loud in the iron work of the girder above his head. Silently, then, but with Valjeanic strength, the spy drew himself out of the water, his hands and feet gripping the jagged corners of the pier and his right shoulder braced at intervals against the projecting frame of the abutment.

Kato gained the iron work of the girder, fourteen feet above the water, within sixty seconds, and huddled close to the pier. Through the moonlight spaces between the ties above he discerned the rails and carefully chose a spot upon the masonry, well within the vital frame of the girder, to set his explosive—a force sufficient to shatter the shoulder of a mountain.

Then the spy wiped his hands in his hair and waved them to and fro gently until they were quite dry, before breaking the seal of the destroyer. He smiled as he set the naked cylinder in place, reflecting that he would have two minutes to descend to the water, and swim away down stream beneath the surface—after touching the match to the fuse. He leaned far forward, deadening the scratch and concealing the flare of the match with his body and hands. In the act of raising the flame, globed in his fingers, a sound reached his ears from the girder to the left.

Kato did not turn, but with fine flexibility of mind instantaneously changed his purpose, holding the flame of the match to the center of the curling fuse instead of at the tip. There was now but sixty seconds left, scarcely time for him to clear himself from flying débris. Still he did not leave the spot, though the fuse was ignited, but deadened the ember of the match in his fingers and with his back to the creeping spark, turned his face toward the sound. In the moonlight eight feet away, he saw a Russian crawling hastily toward him upon the stiffening rods of the girder. He wondered why the Russian did not shoot.

The unerring swing of Kato's thoughts was not counter-directed for the minutest fraction of a second. If he attempted to light another match and touch it to the very pit of the fuse, a bullet might find his brain in the light of the torch and his hand fall stricken. Then over his body the enemy might succeed in snuffing the crawling spark in time. To save himself was now out of the question. His nerveless faculties grappled the problem coldly, but with time-defying speed. Success demanded his presence to the last. He must, trusting in the dark and his knife, with unabating strength and towering will, resisting even death—protect the fuse until the spark journeyed to the heart of things—until his body mingled with the débris of the bridge.

It was for such moments as this that the teachers of Kato had toiled.

. . . .

Four nights before, the Russian sentry now nearing Kato had fired into a shadow and been subjected to the jeers of his companions. He intended to be sure now before using his pistol. Another mistake and everlasting shame would be heaped upon him. The moonlight sifted in broken patches through the ties and rested upon the frame of the girder, upon the stiffening rods and stone work showing portions of the figure crouched against the masonry. Then he saw a naked body and a yellow face glistening with drops of water—in the glow of a match!

The flame shining red through the fingers of two hands moved upward toward the truss, hovered a second and was flicked out. Then the Russian saw a spark upon the pier! He drew his pistol and fired; scrambled forward along the stiffening rods and fired again and a third time! There was a sound of choking in his ears and a knife burned down his temple and cheek, crippling his left arm. He emptied the fourth shot into the jerking body before him.

Kato, wrecked, voiceless, empty-handed, but still impassioned by his purpose, whipped his body with horrid meaning between the enemy and the spark. The Russian, screaming to the other sentries, reached for the explosive, even as the spy with his last spasm of strength hurled himself forward, carrying the other into the stream. A sentry, kneeling upon the stiffening rods, tried to poke the destroyer of the pier, but was not given time. The reinforcing stream of troops, marshaling under the Russian commander-in-chief, near the Korean boundary, was broken.

The head of the spy whom the teachers had pronounced the masterpiece, was found the next day and there was a smile upon the hard brown face. It may have been that Kato smiled at the very last, because he knew he had won for his Emperor; or it may have been that the memory of the woman returned to him—the woman who had sung him lullabies in the paper-windowed room where the iris bloomed and the charcoal brazier glowed long and long ago.

WILL LEVINGTON COMFORT.

THE CZAR'S TITLE.

INTERESTING FACTS CONCERNING THE DERIVATION OF THE WORD.

[Boston Transcript:] "Among the prisoners taken in the Battle of Narva, there was one who was a striking example of the revolutions of fortune. This was the eldest son and heir of the King of Georgia; he was termed the 'czarafis,' a word signifying prince, or son of a czar, among the Tartars, as in Muscovy, for the word czar signified king among the ancient Scythians from whom these people are descended, and was not derived from the 'Caesars,' so long unknown to these barbarians." In such terms Voltaire disposes of an historical question which is not without interest at the present time (see Charles XII., book 1.)

Opinions upon this point vary greatly. The resemblance of the word czar to the word Caesar (Kaiser in Greek) has led some to think the Russian Princes assumed this title as the sovereigns of Germany did that of "Kaiser," as the equivalent of the title of Emperor. It is even related that at the commencement of the twelfth century, Alexis Commenius, who was then reigning in Constantinople, wishing to gain the favor of Vladimir Monomachus, sent to him an Ambassador with presents, and caused the imperial crown to be placed on his head, proclaiming him "Caesar" or "Czar" of Russia.

It is certain that the pretended identity of these two titles becomes very doubtful when one learns that petty chiefs of Tartar hordes bear the title of czar, so that on this point Voltaire may have been right in asserting that the oriental nations had known and used the word tsar or czar from a very remote period.

The doubt only increases when one reads the formula which precedes all royal proclamations in Russia:

"We, by the grace of God, Emperor and autocrat of all the Russias, of Moscow, Kief, Vladimir, Novgorod, etc., Tsar of the Kasan, Tsar of Astrakhan, Tsar of Poland and of Siberia, etc., Lord of Pskof and Grand Prince of Smolensk, of Lithuania, of Volkynia, of Podolia and of Finland, Prince of Esthonia, of Livonia, of Courland, of Karelia and various other countries, Prince of the territory of Nijni-Novgorod, Tchernigof, etc., etc., etc."

The distinction between the title of tsar and that of emperor is formal in this singular monument of barbarism. The sovereign proclaims himself Emperor and autocrat of all the Russias, without renouncing for all that the title of Tsar of Kazan, Astrakhan and other places. This seems to show very clearly that the title of tsar existed from very remote times in the East and that it is quite distinct from that of emperor.

Some writers pretend to trace in certain names of the Assyrian kings incontestable traces of this ancient designation: Nabonassar, Nabopolassar, Nebuchadnezzar, Belshasar, etc., are to be considered, according to them, as compound names, the termination "sar" or "sor" signifying prince or general, and thus giving origin to the title "Czar." In this way, Neriglissar would signify "Prince of Nerguel" or prince favored by Nerguel. (Nerguel was an Assyrian idol.)

Mickiewicz, sharing this opinion, presents the Assyrians as forming part of the great Sclavonic family. He sighs at the idea of seeing his unhappy race supporting the yoke of sovereigns daring enough to take a title which reminds one of Nebuchadnezzar, name in which he thinks to recognize that pride of which the Bible speaks, and which led the "sor" to wish to be adnorned as a god. He remarks upon the striking analogy existing between different varieties of the name of this race and the designation of slavery. Serb or serve, from which comes the Latin servus; slave, slavon, esclavon, from which comes the French esclave. There is a great distance between this hypothesis and the origin which the Sclaves themselves attribute to their name, viz., slava, glory!

PROFITABLE FELLOWSHIP.

Among the pleasures and profits of intelligent travel are the companionships one forms. The well-poised traveler is never afraid to make new friends. He soon learns to read human nature sufficiently to know whom to trust, and one cannot travel, even to a very limited extent, without meeting many people well worth knowing. The little home circle is delightful and often helpful, but the viewpoints and opportunities of our fellow-citizens are so nearly identical that our next-door neighbors are not apt to furnish as profitable friendships as persons we meet whose environments are different and who have, perhaps, had a wider range of opportunities and seen more of the things worth while, which are the heritage of the traveler.

When the man who is familiar with the East meets the man who has learned the great story of the West, the conversation is pretty apt to be worth listening to.—[Four-Track New-

Royalty on the Rail.

WHEN KING EDWARD TRAVELS TRADESMEN LOSE THOUSANDS.

By a Special Contributor.

ROYALTY on the railroad presents to the busy American some very amusing aspects. Every time King Edward goes from one part of England to another, the mercantile community of Great Britain loses something like $5000. This is due to the fact that English railway officials use most extraordinary methods in safeguarding royal trains.

Even in performing so simple a journey as going from Windsor to London—a distance of about twenty-five miles—traffic is suspended for hours when the King travels that way.

On longer journeys, the loss to business houses along the line of the royal route is something enormous. When the King last journeyed from Scotland to London it was estimated that the direct loss to tradesmen was something like $15,000 on account of the tying up of traffic and delay to perishable goods.

When King Edward travels along a certain line, all passenger and freight traffic—even including the fast express service—is suspended. Most elaborate precautions of every description are taken to insure royal safety. For instance, for fifteen minutes before the departure of the royal train from any station all trains are held up, and ordinary traffic is not resumed for fifteen minutes after the train has left.

Special Signals are Used.

Along some sections of the route, royal trains are preceded by pilot engines, which go ahead to test the line in case anything should be wrong. All throughout the journey, the King's train is under the eyes of railway officials.

The ordinary block system of signaling is suspended, as being too dangerous for monarchs. Railway officials do not seem to consider this a reflection on their own methods for safeguarding the public. They know, however, that if any of the royal party should be injured when traveling on any special line that that particular line would "see its finish," so far as the British traveling public is concerned.

Each portion of the line on which the King travels is guarded from section to section by railroad men with flags. They direct the movement of the train. There are two signalmen to every quarter of a mile. For instance, in signaling the train from Folkestone to London, upwards of 288 men are required.

When His Majesty is about to travel, the railway station is cleared of all ordinary passengers, and only a favored few are allowed on the platform. Just before the royal carriage drives up, a roll of crimson velvet carpet is carefully laid along the platform between the King's carriage and the train.

Never Turn Their Backs.

Usually, the King's carriage is preceded by a few outriders—men on horseback who clear the way—and not infrequently by a small body of cavalry, the Horse Guards being the favored regiment, as the King himself is a colonel in that regiment.

Railway officials line the platform, and make a low bow as His Majesty passes by en route to his carriage. Usually, the president of the road—or "managing director" as he is termed in England—accompanies the King; though, of course, in a separate carriage. It would not do for a mere railroad president in England to ride in the same compartment with the King himself.

The reward of the managing director for his somewhat perfunctory task is, however, often quite great. Knighthood, the Order of the Garter, and other honors are often conferred by the King upon men who have helped to make his journeys pleasant by their official presence.

As the King passes along the railway platform, the various officials move in such a manner that they are always facing the royal party. Many an official has lost his job by inadvertently turning his back upon some member of the royal family when passing to a train.

Flowers and Hints.

As soon as the King is seated in his carriage, one of the railway directors reverently approaches King Edward, handing him a dozen copies of the "Way Bill" of the journey. This is printed in letters of gold on purple silk, and is really an elaborate time table.

The name, rank and occupation of every person traveling on the road on the royal train is also printed on the Way Bill. Its practical use is to remind His Majesty that on the same train with him are numerous officials, each ready for anything in the way of a "tip" from 50 cents up to a baronetcy.

Each attendant of the King also receives a copy of the Way Bill, but it is printed upon white instead of upon purple silk.

If Queen Alexandra should be traveling with the King, or perhaps alone, she is presented with a bunch of flowers just as the train moves from the station. The presentation is made always by the daughter of an official, or of a local Colored Royalty Barred.

The speed of royal trains is limited an hour. King Edward rejoices in the several royal trains, which are used conveying His Majesty, the Queen and suite.

When great potentates, such as the of Italy, or the like, visit England, royal placed at their disposal.

King Edward has recently suspended the placing the royal train at the convenience monarchs who so frequently visit England; always observed in Queen Victoria's reign. received and conveyed in a royal train, King the Kaffir.

The King of Persia and his suite about ward to keep the royal trains exclusively of "White Royalty." After the "King of Persian monarch styles himself—had used train between Folkestone and Windsor, it necessary to disinfect and reupholster every riage; and as this meant practically riages, the expense was very great. It attendants of the Persian ruler even took away from the stationary washstands, the basins, and in one case the porcelain bathroom. Of course none of the railway dared to interfere, and the royal train was wrecked "all standing."

Lots of Royal Baggage.

Every royal train is made up of five first carriage is divided into two compart for the use of railway officials. The of the railway company usually rides train. He is accompanied by a number officials; and in his carriage are several cially employed to guard the royal party There are usually three detectives from and two in the employ of the railway

The second compartment in the first served for the royal baggage which, even is traveling on short journeys, is very Queen carries an enormous number of forty—and never goes anywhere without paraphernalia; as, for instance, a china of china dolls which her children played little, and a number of other small objects just as well remain behind. The Queen's requires to be packed in not less than trunks, while the other seventeen are Exterior of King Edward's special car, built at cost of $60,000 articles than wearing apparel. Altogether, the "royal baggage" amounts to never less than twenty-one tons.

Built on American Lines.

The second carriage is constructed after the American fashion. Instead of being divided into many compartments, as in most English trains, it is one large car on the "parlor car" order. Easy chairs and writing desks are placed in handy places. This car has also a buffet, where light luncheons may be obtained. It is considered the height of luxury in England to travel in a car fitted up like an American parlor car; and even the King enjoys traveling in this fashion, and has ordered all his trains to be built on "American lines."

Among the most remarkable features connected with the King's train are the number of American devices in use. In the first place, the train is heated by a hot water system after the American plan. Usually, in England, the only heat supplied to the cars is by a system of huge water cans containing hot water which turns itself into cold water within a few minutes after being placed in the cold cars. The King's train, however, has a system of pipes, and the water is continually warm. All the coaches of the King's train are lighted by electricity. These lights can be turned on from any of the seats, and are supplied from dynamos under each car.

The lavatories also are supplied with hot water. It is considered quite an innovation in England that hot water should be constantly "on tap." As a matter of fact, the most ordinary comforts of American railway travel strike the English monarch as being the height of luxury, and every American idea has been adopted in fitting out the royal trains.

A Compliment to Ireland.

The King's favorite amusement while traveling is card playing. A number of card tables have been fixed in the train, and they can be adjusted to any place where His Majesty may be seated. His favorite game—it goes without saying—is baccarat.

The King's coach is usually the fourth from the engine. It is an open parlor car, and has accommodations for twenty-one persons.

It is upholstered throughout in light green velvet, chosen especially by the King out of compliment to Ireland.

The carpet in use on the South Eastern system, as shown in accompanying photograph, was woven to Queen Alexandra's order by the peasantry of Donegal, who make carpets by hand in precisely the same way as the Persians.

This carpet cost no less than $750 and it is considered the finest specimen of Irish peasant work of modern times. Pale green silk curtains are hung across the windows on silver poles, each of which cost $50, and the silver door handles in the royal carriage are valued at [illegible]

In Queen Victoria's reign, royal trains were upholstered in pale yellow velvet, and the decorations were of the same color, but King Edward's predilection for things Irish has caused this to be changed.

The King Has a "Graft."

All that the different railway companies receive for the privilege of conveying the King over their lines is [illegible] per annum each. They look upon the royal journey, however, as a tremendous advertisement, and railway directors, through being brought into personal contact with His Majesty, frequently receive titles, [illegible] and others obtain substantial largesses. There is little doubt that if His Majesty desired it the railway companies would be delighted to convey [illegible] over their systems free of all cost, deeming the honor a sufficient reward.

The only persons who have a right to make any complaints concerning the royal touring junkets are the [illegible] along the line of the route where traffic is held up for hours whenever the King or Queen desires to go about. However, as it would be considered disloyal to make any open protest, the British public must content itself with merely grumbling, and await the day when royalty will become more considerate.

As the King has so many trains and the railway companies consider the royal patronage so good an investment, it is remarkable that great difficulty is experienced in obtaining any photographs of the trains [illegible]. Volumes of red tape have to be measured and it is only after the signature of the Lord Chamberlain has been affixed to a permit that the [illegible] is permitted to make any pictures. The accompanying photos are the first ever given out for publication.

SAVED BY A DOG.

An interesting brigand story comes from Palermo. Brigands terrorized the district of Casteltermini and entered the villa of a wealthy land owner at Liberto. In the absence of the owner the bandits seized his two sons. They gagged and bound the eldest, and imprisoned him in the cellar of the house. A letter was dispatched demanding a ransom of $1000 from the father for the younger son, whom they removed to a grotto at [illegible], where the brigands had their lair. A dog followed the bandits and his young master. The dog entered the grotto with them, and a few hours afterwards, when the ruffians were asleep at the entrance to the cave, discovered a small aperture. He increased the opening by using his paws. Eventually the hole was large enough to enable the boy to escape from his place of confinement. Followed by his dog he was able to reach his home during the night. The police discovered the grotto, and the four brigands were captured.

Beautiful-cloud.

BEING A ROMANCE OF TWO CHINESE BALCONIES.

By a Special Contributor.

IT was the second hour of the afternoon and every one was unendurably dull.

Beautiful-cloud slyly pinched the arm of Peony, her handmaiden (napping over her everlasting embroidery,) then, yawning prolongedly, she saundered out upon the balcony, where the nasturtiums were flaunting their beauty in the face of the ugly street.

Life is so maddeningly stupid sometimes, with only two big festivals during a whole year, and no events but birthdays, and no amusements but the outgrown games of children. And with her forehead in a pucker quite excusable, Beautiful-cloud walked up and down the balcony until the shuffling sound of her pretty shoes was a weariness not to be endured by her shell-like ears. As she flung herself upon the settee, making a grimace at the solemn cockatoo overhead, something fell at her feet. It was really the first petal of the rose called fate, yet it greatly resembled a cunningly-folded eight-pointed note, pierced by a red silk cord and tied to a pebble.

Now Beautiful-cloud had no mother and no sister, but (such is the amazing intuition of an ignorant maiden,) she instantly divined that the object was a love letter, and so very foolish is the heart of a maiden, she was immediately lifted to the thirty-third heaven of bliss. But being of superior prudence and refinement, she at once and with haughtiness retired from the balcony. She did not deign to look about and see who had tossed the love letter, although above all things she desired to know.

Nevertheless, when she was once inside the house and screened by the bamboo curtain, her exceeding great pride vanished and with eagnerness she peeped at the opposite balcony and saw the man.

Of course, he was uncommonly handsome and young. He wore a dark blue robe, fastened with three gold ball-buttons, and he was leaning idly upon the yellow railing, wholly engrossed in the street sights below, and wholly unconscious of the existence of the beautiful maiden who lived across the way, perhaps. For one whole minute Beautiful-cloud breathlessly watched him. She noted his regular features, his distinguished bearing, and his immaculate appearance. And then, most unfeelingly, she aroused Peony from her pleasant slumbers and commanded her to look at the bold person across the way, who had just had the unheard-of presumption to throw her a love letter!

Peony was a maid servant of the type believed in America to be non-existent. She woke up and promptly giggled, sympathetically and excitedly, even before she saw the youth, and when she did see him, she exclaimed with the proper emotion: "Great Buddha! but the man is handsome. I behold the future husband of my mistress, standing upon a yellow balcony, thick with white azalea trees!"

Whereupon, of course, Beautiful-cloud gently boxed her ears and demanded that she immediately pull that love letter into the room, without being detected by that bold and very ordinary-looking man-creature.

But think as hard as they could, it was not managed until at last Peony went out to bring in the cockatoo. Then it chanced that her embroidery dropped from her hand right over the note, and stooping, she happened to pick up both.

At that instant Beautiful-cloud, who was still peeping through the curtain, observed an expression of pleasure upon the face of the young man, who was still engrossed in the sights of the street below. He soon withdrew into the house. And the maiden, Beautiful-cloud, failed to remember that the house was the house of Sang Kee, the enemy of her father.

It was a superbly written note. But it was about some jade-like girl, who had narrow eyes that sparkled like beads of amber in crystal in sunshine, and were also, like one long caress, and who caused the writer to dream of mountain-fairies and gilded goddesses in splendid pagodas.

And, such is the great conceit of those who love, Beautiful-cloud immediately jumped to the conclusion that all of it referred to herself! And she was so merry that her father, at evening rice, said to himself: "My daughter remains a happy little child, and about marriage there shall be no haste. Wonderful is the resemblance to her mother!"

The next morning, another eight-cornered note flew into the balcony, and as Beautiful-cloud, charmingly dressed, stepped out for one breath of air in the afternoon, another fell at her pretty feet. She paused in her walk, as if in virtuous amazement, and then, with what she believed to be a look of consternation, she looked at the young man on the opposite balcony, who was so bold as to promptly bow. And Beautiful-cloud could only blush charmingly, hold her sleeve before her face and hurry out of his sight.

A man who, at every opportunity for a whole week, throws love letters at a young lady and makes the composition of each one so elegant that one can only hope they are original compositions, while she sadly fears they are mere quotations from the lesser classics, may be considered to have properly introduced himself. That is, if the man is in the least adorable and the life of the young lady is not too crowded with duties and purposes.

It may be sadly unfilial—and an act denoting unrefined morals—to condescend to read and keep such missives. It may be the proof of an inferior taste to read and read and re-read letters of unvarying monotony in their descriptions of the habits and charms of the same maiden, with a faultless, golden complexion, with little teeth like melon seeds, with eyebrows like the delicately-curved markings of the silkworm moth, and who wears glistening frocks. And yet Beautiful-cloud persuaded herself that these epistles were true pearls and the whole zest of life, which no longer was stupid and without worthy purpose.

But however, unfilial and imprudent her secret joy in these flying love letters, she was consistent in her inconsistency and never did she condescend to pick up even one note. For a long time, she sent no acknowledgments. Then of course there came a letter in which the despairing young gentleman threatened to drink gold-leaf, (not an ignoble way of ending an unhappy life,) and described, in detail, the coffin which was being designed to receive his miserable body.

Beautiful-cloud did not wish to appear icy-hearted beyond a reasonable period; so, when this letter came, she turned her back upon conventions and took from the tortoise-shell box that had been her mother's, an old brass charm, upon which there was embossed the singularly appropriate hieroglyphs: "May heaven grant you a long life and wealth and honors and the hall be filled with all the beautiful and precious things of your heart's desire."

This was a dearly-prized keepsake, and yet Beautiful-cloud made greatest haste to fold it in a piece of yellow paper, spotted with gold, and to cunningly weave it all about with threads of her own shining black hair. But she was wholly unequal to throwing a missive of such vital importance; she trembled behind the curtain, while Peony, the steady-nerved one, took it, and with strange unconcern tossed it to the youn man gloomily posing amid the white azaleas.

Beautiful-cloud was suddenly awed by this one little act. She realized that by it she had changed her whole life, and, when the handsome youth had passed out of her sight, she threw herself face downward upon her divan and wept in fear of the great happiness she knew was approaching, also Because!

It is filial sin for a maid to love a man unknown to her father, and a sin not meriting forgiveness when the man is cousin to the father's bitterest enemy. And when the father is told by an all-seeking, noble-intentioned neighbor of the clandestine love affair of his daughter, what is to be done except barring the door to the balcony and locking the daughter in a room with only bread and tea?

That is what the grieving father of Beautiful-cloud promptly did. And then, what in the world is a maiden, so cruelly immured, to do except it be to send her bondwoman to the apothecary shop, so that she may have speech with the lover, who of course has eaten nothing since the disappearance of his phoenix from her balcony, although his distinguished friends have dragged him to their banquets and have clapped him soundly upon the shoulder and spoken jests at which his heart sickened?

How wonderfully emboldening a thing is love. When Peony returned from the apothecary's with the powdered beetle wing, there was a rope ladder up one of her sleeves and an eight-pointed note in her hair. The message to Beautiful-cloud was that she must quit her father's house that night and join her future husband, who would be waiting with a carriage in the street below.

And of course Beautiful-cloud protested that she could not think of such a thing, and at the name of her father she wept and beat her head, for she loved him and did not wish to leave him alone with sorrow. Had he not said, in his lion's wrath, that if his daughter disgraced him by marriage with one friendly to the Po Wong Uls, he would drink poison? And at the thought of her father hurrying to the yellow river, Beautiful-cloud hated life and herself and her lover, and longed for death.

But so fickle is the human heart, when the afternoon sunlight had passed from the narrow street, Beautiful-cloud dried her tears and began, with great calmness, to consider what she would take with her for the wonderful new life about to begin. She had so many treasures. There were little remembrances of her mother and the box of notes from her lover and the large colored photograph of her father, in his ceremonial robes, to say nothing of ornaments and twenty new robes of grenadine and poplin, for it was then the period of extreme heat. But it was arranged at last. Peony managed to get everything into two neat bundles, ready to drop into the street at the right moment. And Beautiful-cloud, instead of going to bed at the accustomed hour, put on her twenty robes of grenadine and poplin, and awaited the appointed hour and signal.

It was not a joyous period of waiting. The household of her father had been one of gloom for many days, and it was hard, beyond all words, for the dispenser of that gloom to leave it perhaps forever, without one word of contrition or of affectionate farewell. It would have been hard to leave old Peony, too, had she not encouragingly prophesied that, upon mature reflection, the father of Beautiful-cloud was sure to eat his words and forgive his daughter and send for her to come to him. And Beautiful-cloud thanked Buddha for the encouragement, and bravely faced the last obstacle, which was looking at a sealed roll called The Future.

But love, if selfish, is the most wonderfully edifying and emboldening of all the seven emotions. And when a dog cried plaintively under the window at the twelfth hour of the night, Beautiful-cloud was ready and descended the rope ladder with a joy in her heart that was all-sufficing.

The Pearling Industry.

AN INTERVIEW WITH AN AUSTRALIAN MASTER PEARLER.

By a Special Contributor.

It has been many years since the roving natives of the Malay Archipelago first discovered that the waters of the desolate and deserted shores of the Western coast of Australia were much richer in shell than those about their own island homes. [illegible] years since the few bands from the islands of Java and Celebes began making visits to Roebuck Bay, where Australia's pearling industry first started, driving out or compelling to become their slave workmen of the aboriginal blacks who were the first men there, for these Malay fishers were sharp and [illegible] in their dealings, possessing all the calculating [illegible] of the Chinese. At the present time throughout the [illegible] miles of coast line in Northwestern Australia, extending from Exmouth Gulf to King Sound, there are fully 2000 Malays, Japanese and Manilamen, with a sprinkling of many other races, working at the pearling business.

[illegible] in Australia, recently, the writer chanced to meet in the lounging-room of Menzies Melbourne Hotel, a bronzed, plainly dressed man who was introduced as a "master pearler" from the northwest coast. Now "master pearlers" in the Antipodes are generally known as wealthy man who live picturesque lives, exercising in their business absolutely as much power over their native crews as does any sovereign in his own [illegible].

The wealthy pearl fisher at first modestly avowed that he was not of sufficient importance to bear interviewing, but was finally induced to believe otherwise. "[illegible] the business for good, a while ago," he began, "but I'm beginning to get restless now and may perhaps drift into it again. Pearling over here, as you'd [illegible] from the name, doesn't mean hunting for the pearls the ladies like to wear in rings and necklaces. [illegible] gems of this kind are not very common and a man can't afford to make these his principal search. He is always looking to take what comes his way, but his [illegible] is to bring up from below the mother-of-pearl shells which are found in paying quantities and are worth anywhere from $400 to $750 a ton.

"In the early days, when the diving was done by the black fellows, it was rather slow business. These men had no apparatus, but would sit upon the edge of their open boats and breathing loudly in and out would fully inflate their lungs. They would then slide feet first into the water, turn head over heels and swim down [illegible] feet, their greatest depth, to bottom, where they could remain only a minute or two. Now, however, the shells are all found by divers who wear modern diving suits and go down to depths of from 80 to 100 feet to the coral ledges. These divers, who know all the tricks of oysters and where they are likely to be found, can be hired cheap, sometimes for a small share of the shells they get. I used to have about 200 Malays and Japs working for me and had quite a fleet of 'luggers.' A 'lugger' you know is a small two-[illegible], about thirty-five feet long, specially fitted for the business with low sides, so that things can be hauled aboard easily. When the 'luggers' reach a spot where the bivalves are thought to be plentiful, the divers, who are nervy chaps with little thought of their own danger, get into their heavy diving rigs and are [illegible]. They take net bags down with them [illegible], each bag being attached to a lugger by a rope. [illegible] of the crew are kept pumping air into the diving suits with the air pumps, and when the [illegible] footing they go waddling through regular [illegible] of beautiful coral trees and fern plants, [illegible] fish and water snakes wriggle and scurry [illegible] quickly grab and break off all the shells, putting them into their net bags. When the bags are full, a signal is given by jerking the ropes and they are dragged up into the lugger, and emptied of their [illegible].

"[illegible] a diver will get all tangled up in a living [illegible] marine vegetation which will clutch and suck at [illegible] enough strength to hold him down forever, if [illegible] up above shouldn't keep in motion and pull [illegible]. When a diver gets tired he signals the "air [illegible] is hauled up.

"Pearl diving is dangerous busines," said the old man in reply to the question, "and divers must often [illegible] risks, accidents being possible almost any [illegible] the air pumps may break down, the air pipes [illegible] or the diving suits become torn on [illegible] rocks, thereby causing suffocation. Or the [illegible]-line crews in the boats above may get sleepy [illegible] and let the life lines or air pipes get caught [illegible] sharp coral growth that won't break off, as [illegible] darts about here and there under water wher[illegible] shells may be found. For he must keep [illegible] the boat which keeps moving, and from which [illegible] movements, at times, take him a considerable [illegible] with the sagging weights of lines pulling behind. [illegible] the apparatus does get tangled that way, that [illegible] has to work his wits. For then he can't signal [illegible] if he doesn't clear himself quickly the weight [illegible] the crew and boat will be forced on the lines [illegible] likely break them.

"[illegible] luggers used to get their loads I had the[illegible] their shells into a 'pick-up' schooner [illegible] kept sailing among my fleet for the purpose. [illegible] schooner when filled, was taken down to [illegible] the chief center of the pearling industry, and Broome is a queer settlement, for that's all it [illegible] the cable company's landing station, a bunch [illegible] a jail, some galvanized iron houses, a few [illegible] and 'humpies' and about a hundred 'breakwinds' made of brush without roofs. I tell you it is a hot town, when all the pearling fleets are home. Hot both in climate and character. Just as hot a place as you'd want to find. Everyone is more or less drunk, the jail is full and the smell which comes from the 'opening' sheds is about enough to finish a white man. These 'opening' sheds are built of rough boards and are where all the shells are taken which have not been torn open by the crews on the trip down to Broome. The shells are dumped upon long benches usually inclined so that when a bivalve 'opens up' of its own accord, it will spit out any pearl which may be hidden away in its gullet. The pearls thus obtained, roll down the inclined benches into troughs filled with water and when collected are ready for sale to the agents. The shells after being cleaned, are shipped to Singapore and later are supposed to be auctioned off to the trade.

"I must tell you how I was approached once by a fellow with a scheme to form a big pearl trust. He was a Yankee that I met at Kalgoorlie, a regular promoter with a working brain but no money. At this time, practically all of the shells were disposed of to five firms, who, although pretending to buy at regular auction sale, really bid everything in at prices previously agreed upon among themselves.

"Well this fellow who came to me had a proposition to form the 'Amalgamated Pearling Company.' The plan was to buy up all of the vessels engaged in pearling on the northwest coast that were furnishing the shell supply. Then to ship all of the output to New York and corner it there. This he claimed could easily be done when once you controlled the fleets. A big ship was to be regularly run between Broome and New York to carry the shell over and bring back American goods and supplies.

"It was a gigantic scheme and called for a big amount of money which he wanted me to raise. I didn't get enthusiastic over it, because I couldn't figure out how you could get control of the actual shell supply after you had bought up the vessels. You see, suppose you did buy up all the fleets working at pearling and cornered their output in New York, what was to prevent other ships being fitted out and put into the pearling business right along beside you, when your game was discovered. For the waters and reefs are as free to one man as to another and you couldn't get a government concession for a trust on them. The promoter chap declared that the 'Amalgamated Company' would be too powerful for any serious competition, but I couldn't agree with him there, and can't say that he has found anyone else that could as yet, for his pearling trust has never been formed.

SHELL CONTAINING PEARL VALUED AT $2000, FOUND ON NORTHWEST COAST OF AUSTRALIA.

"Some years before I first went to the northwest coast of Australia, I spent some time among the Tuamotu Islands, in the Low Archipelago of the South Pacific Ocean. These islands cover an area of about 1500 square miles. They are really oval-shaped atolls, surmounted by coral reefs rich in pearl shell, which usually was secured by the natives diving from the edges of the reefs. Being a good swimmer, I used to dive with the natives myself, the water was so clear you could plainly see the pearl shells clinging to the many-colored bunches of coral beneath the surface. We used to break off the shells from the coral and then swim up to the surface, each hand holding a shell, which made a fine paddle to help you in getting up.

"Seeing the possibilities in the business, I soon commenced trading for the mother-of-pearl shells, giving the native beans, coffee, calico and such things. I never had to use money, for it was of no use to the dwellers there, as they had no place to spend it. I used to get a gunny sack full of shells for four or five yards of calico and some beans.

"The pearl shells were easy to get in those islands and most of the natives would oil their bodies and dive down without the clumsy diving suits, the water was so clear and there was so little danger from sharks.

"I should have told you that there are two varieties of pearl shells, the smaller, about four inches wide, is more valuable than the larger ones, which will average eight inches and are coarser. There has always been a good demand for the shells for buttons, knife-handles and trinkets and probably always will be, since the suitable manufacturing kind can only be found in a few localities."

SQUARING AN ACCOUNT.

HOW TWO OLD LOVERS MET AND WERE PARTED AGAIN BY FATE.

By a Special Contributor.

But for the two sitting a seat apart, the waiting-room of the depot was unoccupied; the other passengers having gathered outside on account of the heat of the day. But years makes the blood cold. The bewhiskered old man in the faded serge suit had looked curiously from time to time at the little old lady in the widow's bonnet; and the little old lady had looked from time to time in a more covert way at him.

At last the old man, catching the gleam of friendly curiosity in the corner of the old lady's eye, found his voice—a raher thin voice carrying introdultory "Hems!"

"You're waitin' for this Chicago train, too, I reckon," he suggested tentatively.

"Yes, I'm waitin' for it," returned the old lady in careworn tones, tilting her bonnet and glancing around. "Seems as if it weren't coming. I hope it hasn't gone off the track or anything." A shade of anxiety darkened her features.

"Hem! gone off the track! Hem! no, I reckon not; that fellow at that clickin' thing in there would tell us if it did—no, I reckon not." He found a good deal of difficulty in assuming the role of comforter, but when inspiration did come it came in a burst of benevolence, and in a sudden glow of worldly knowledge he leaned over and touched the old lady's arm. "The 'cars' on this line never run off the track, Missus," he assured epilogically.

"Don't they now! I'm so glad to hear it—" But the old man was staring at her with a growing expression of recognition.

"Well, I declare!" he exclaimed, "if I ain't powerfully certain that you're Sarah Ann Thompson," moving into the seat beside her, "who I used—"

"I'm Mrs. Riley," interrupted the old lady with demure haste, sprucing up and folding her hands on her lap.

"Ah, of course! you married Bill. How long is he dead?"

"Twenty-five years, comin' September." Her manner became perfunctorily restrospective.

"Well, well, how time flies. Pretty near as bad as a steam engine, and you never have to wait at the station for it. I guess we've never met since before you married Bill—since—"

"I guess not," put in the old lady uneasily.

But her companion was unobservant in his eagerness to rehabilitate old times.

"You remember," he said, "that I wanted you before Bill; I reckon, I wanted you pretty bad, then, too."

"Did you, now?"

"You know I did, Sarah Ann." He had become quite lover-like.

"You never said so that I kin remember."

"Bill plumped in and did the thing so quick. He allus was like that—the reason he went so soon, I reckon. A mighty fine lad, though, Bill," he added politely.

"He'd pass, I guess."

There was something in the old lady's manner and tone that brought the old man back to the time before "Bill."

"There was one little promise you made me you never kept, Sarah Ann," he commented, after a considerable pause. "I often thought since how'd it a-felt if you had, an' I often thought since that you owed it to me if we ever met, in spite of Bill, seein' you'd promised me in the most partikuler way. I reckon you don't mind it now."

"No, I guess I don't."

"I'll whisper it to you, then; it was a kiss, Sarah Ann." And before the little old lady knew what he was about—or let it be hoped so, at any rate—the old man had clasped her about the neck and imprinted a vigorous kiss on the withered cheek.

The whistle of the approaching train drowned her scream.

"There, I've got it at last!" he exclaimed, releasing her.

The little old lady rose to her feet, and gathered up her parcels.

"If you'd been so smart when you were younger, Sim Hopkins," she said pertinently, "you might have got more, and I mighn't have been a widow now."

Her companion bent close to her as he picked up his portmanteau.

"If I wasn't married," he began, "you wouldn't be a widder for—"

"If you wasn't married!" reiterated the old lady, horrified; then suddenly giving her lips a vigorous rubbing with the back of her hand, she left the waiting-room, casting a haughty glance at the old lover.

A STRANGE FARM.

Though not included in the reports on that subject, undoubtedly the most remarkable agricultural enterprise in the country is the farm in Southern Florida on which the one crop cultivated is alligators.

This unique farm is located on the east coast of Florida, some distance below Palm Beach, on the bank of the Indian River. The situation is an excellent one for the purpose, for it is in the very part of the country where the saurians were the most numerous in the days before they began to be hunted as a business, and not far away are the Everglades where the few remaining specimens (that is, few when compared with the tens of thousands that were to be found in Florida waters twenty years ago) are being relentlessly pursued to extinction by their fellow swamp dwellers, the Seminoles.—[Four-Track News.

The House Beautiful—Its Flower Garden and Grounds

AQUATIC GLORIES.

WATER GARDENS NOT SO COSTLY AS GENERALLY SUPPOSED.

By Ernest Braunton.

IN a country like ours, where there is a scarcity of rivers, lakes, ponds, etc., yet where ice seldom forms, artificial bodies of water, however small, are much appreciated. Here we may have some sort of a water garden throughout the year. Many people hesitate to incorporate a lily pond in plans for the home grounds because of the general, but erroneous, impression that such features are quite costly. The expense of water gardening is almost entirely that of first cost, the subsequent expense as compared with any other like garden area being small indeed. Aquatic plants vary greatly in value. The writer has put in collections where some water lily bulbs cost but 50 cents each, while others (one at least) cost $15; the latter, however, had to be imported from France. Even the most desirable sorts are now within the reach of all.

Lotus Blossoms
Hollywood Lotus Garden

The pioneer "water lily man" in California and in the United States, is E. D. Sturtevant, of Hollywood, who has, at the present time, a gorgeous show in all the best water plants known. Chief among these is the Victoria, the largest aquatic flower known to exist. So much sentiment clings to "Victoria regia, the Giant Lily of the Amazon," that we wish we might here record it as the one grown at Hollywood, but facts will not warrant such a statement. Victoria regia comes from the Amazon and its tributaries in British Guiana, ranging from near the Equator to nearly 10 degs. north. The species grown by Mr. Sturtevant is V. Cruziana from the river Parana and tributaries in Paraguay. This latter is much hardier than the Amazon lily, its habitat being about 27 degs. south. Flowers of this lily vary in size from ten to sixteen inches in diameter, and the leaves are often more than four feet across. In the Hollywood pond are three plants of this Victoria, more than were ever grown before at one time in this State, None have ever been grown out of doors elsewhere in California. Each of these plants blossoms at intervals of eight or ten days and for one night only. The flower opens about seven in the evening and closes at sunrise the next morning. The second evening it again opens but has a wilted appearance, the baste of the petals are stained with pink, and the delightful fragrance of the first evening has flown.

Mr. Sturtevant grows other night-blooming lilies, the gorgeous hued tropical species, and these are also open quite late into the forenoon. These range from white to deepest blue and crimson, the blossoms standing out of the water on long stems, quite unlike the more common day bloomers whose flowers repose on the surface. Those visiting the Sturtevant pond will find it a very enjoyable and profitable trip. It lies two blocks north of the Hollywood car line, on Franklin avenue, between Crown and Western avenues. Those going from Los Angeles may get off the car at Crown, walk north to the end (two blocks,) one block west and the pond is in plain view. Visitors are always welcome, and if Mr. Sturtevant is at home he will be found ready with an interesting talk on aquatics, based on a quarter century of rich and varied experience.

The Transvaal Daisy.

At the last meeting of the Southern California Horticultural Association, Howard & Smith exhibited, among a great variety of flowers, some fine blossoms of the Transvaal or Barberton daisy, (Gerbera Jamiesoni.) This daisy, a close relative of our common dandelion, seems especially adapted to Southern California conditions, and its liability to sport bespeaks some interesting and valuable varieties in time to come. In England they have already crossed this species with those from several other countries and procured a great range of color in the hybrids, from "Brilliant" a more glowing color than the Transvaal daisy to "Sir Michael," a pure yellow. Intermediate shades come in pinks, orange, orange-reds, etc. This plant thrives in soil with good drainage but will not endure "wet feet" or continual disturbance, being hard to transplant from the open ground, though pot-grown plants may be handled without danger of loss. Each succeeding year will doubtless witness the growing popularity of this scarlet-faced Boer which is, in every sense of the word "a daisy."

In many sections Lippia is rapidly forcing out all other plants used for lawn making, yet people in semi-airid sections, or where the water supply is limited continue to struggle with blue grass. Lippia is no doubt the most drought-resistant plant we have in our gardens and should be treated accordingly. That it will stand any California conditions is evident from the following extract from the annual report of the Arizona Experiment Station:

"The fog-fruit has again proved its superior qualities as a lawn plant, since during the past summer it was able to endure all ordinary droughty conditions without harm, also maintaining itself for eight months on the mesa with less than two inches of rainfall. When grown side by side with Bermuda grass, it proved superior in every respect. To secure the quickest as well as the most satisfactory results on the lawn, the soil should be spaded, mixed with well-rotted manure, and the plants freely watered. During the present summer, the lawns of Lippia along Third street, Tucson, planted in ordinary mesa soil and exposed to our intense conditions, have preserved a carpet of green which has often been beautifully variegated with the rose purple blossoms."

The Poinsettia.

The poinsettia, known to botanists as Euphorbia pulcherrima, is a native of Mexico and requires heat at all times; therefore plant in the hottest and sunniest places, but a protected spot, if possible, for the plant is easily hurt by frosts. It is best pruned early in spring just before the season's growth commences and the first spring should be cut a foot above the ground and every spring thereafter leave but one foot of the previous year's growth. In this way you will get a fine sturdy plant, capable of producing an immense crop of the scarlet bracts.

The hardwood cuttings may be planted out just where you wish them to grow. It would be well to withhold the water supply if your plant has soft growth, for, though it might harden up before frosts come, the riper the wood the better it will stand the Water Supply.

We fear that failure in country gardens is often due of water supply. The writer has often noticed plants as carnations and chrysanthemums so illy that water had to be carried to them. Fads in Architecture.

HOW PENDULUM HAS SWUNG FROM "LINGERIE" TO SIMPLICITY.

By a Los Angeles Architect.

FROM the one extreme to the other the swaying pendulum of fashion ever swings us. But a few years ago the jig saw was employed as a principal agent in covering our houses with a sort of architectural lingerie. A plain surface was regarded with horror, panels were placed where panels should not be and these were frequently filled with radiating pieces resembling crudely the rays of the setting sun. Turned columns without the slightest beauty in outline, inane little balconies, useless cast-iron railings and a score of such meannesses generally overwhelmed all that might otherwise have been inoffensive. How the alternate oscillation has swung us from these puerilities to an affectation of simplicity which at its best is so non-committal as to greatly lack character, as its worst is positively as exuberantly foolish as any thing to be found in the "jig-saw" style of architecture, lately deceased but not lamented.

Simplicity in every-day architecture is to be greatly desired, for simplicity is the keynote of the greatest architectural triumphs of all known civilizations. Living architecture is that which meets the requirements of the age. If these requirements are modest and sensible the architecture will be modest and sensible; if they are extravagant and vulgar our buildings will be violent and vulgar in response. Architecture, to be worth anything, should express our mode of life; yet how utterly inconsonant with the simple nature of the great majority of lives are the great majority of houses, and how little do our places of worship outwardly bear evidence of the simplicity of our religious convictions. In truth, the people are so greedy for what they term originality that the attempt to satisfy this craving gives rise to much that is original only in its violation of good taste. Forced originality serves only to produce a charlatan style in architecture, false in every sense, even repellant in its truculent immodesty. We are, supposedly, a practical people, yet it does not require much observation or reflection to recognize how woefully impractical is much of our architecture.

Simplicity in architectural design means good art in architecture, and this means perfect adaptation to circumstances. Good art is therefore eminently practical, and indiscriminate ornament whether it be the thin extravagance of a passed decade or the monstrous affectation of simplicity so prevalent today, is not practical. If thought really lies at the base of propriety and our work displays an absence of mind then there can be no fitness in it; for fitness demands constant consideration and the careful weighings of the conditions which are supposed to necessitate the feature. How little consideration is sometimes accorded the fitness of a thing is apparent on all sides.

Probably in no other city of the same age as Los Angeles can be found so much that is beautifully designed and cleverly planned, so fully entitled to respect and admiration, which makes it the more remarkable that there should be so much which disregards this high standard. The too prevalent desire to create something unusual outweighs the sense of fitness, a sort of "rag-time" architecture is the result, ingenious, perhaps, but certainly not clever.

That a thing of beauty is a joy forever is so trite a saying one feels obliged to apologize for using the expression, yet it is the very fundamental principle of good design; to abandon which is to neglect the lessons to be learned from tradition; in other words, to turn one's back upon the accumulated experience of past ages. To adhere slavishly to tradition is to be pedantic, but to ignore the lesson of tradition is to wander in a maze of inextricable confusion. If read rightly, the true Mission is simply a remote colonial phase of Spanish Renaissance bereft of the refinement of the latter; the inference is obvious to those who may wish to adapt and develop the Mission style to our modern use; to similarly adapt the Elizabethan and to do so intelligently, that its fine characteristics may be retained and freed from equally characteristic crudities, it is necessary to make a sympathetic study of that very charming and interesting transitional period of the early English Renaissance.

It would be interesting to compare the relative adaptability of the colonial Spanish and the Elizabethan to our local needs. The English (domestic) style has such a wealth of detail in interior woodwork, such as doors, mantels, panellings, stairs, etc., as well as furniture: open timber framed roofs, galleries and screens, and a remarkable skill is displayed in modeled and moulded plaster; the half-timbered examples are equal to any of the ancient framed buildings and are so delightfully "homelike" with their beautiful roof lines. Many of these old dwellings have "courts" similar to the "patio," most of the more famous are built with an outer court and an innner court as well.

The accompanying illustration is quite typical of the Elizabethan half-timbered house with its picturesque arrangement of gables and tiled roofs; "Park Hall," Oswestry, was built between 1553-8. The fine oak framing is still in an excellent state of preservation offering, with the diamond glazed casements many good suggestions for modern application. It is this type of the Elizabethan which many Americans rather confusedly designate "Early English," a term which is applied by Old Country archeologists only to the buildings of the thirteenth century.

IMPRISONED PENNIES.

The enormous decrease in the coinage of pennies, half pennies, and farthings, from £148,499 worth in 1902 to £77,895 worth in 1904, is an aftermath of the boom in pennies caused by the greatly extended use of penny-in-the-slot-machines a few years ago.

The experts in coin production state that there was something like a "penny famine" a few years ago, and this led to a large production of new coppers by the mint.

"The circulation of the penny is a curious thing," said one of the London and Southwestern Bank managers, "For instance, we think nothing of receiving at one city branch of our bank £100 worth of pennies in one week, and the great producer of pennies is Peckham. Many branch banks where business men run in and ask for a sovereign's worth of pennies get their supply of coppers from Peckham.

"The secret of this is the penny-in-the-slot-gas meter. The South Metropolitan Gas Company's army of men who spend their time in emptying the pennies out of household meters bank the money at Peckham, and millions of pennies are poured into our branches in the Peckham district. At present we find the demand for big packets of pennies brisk."

One of the secretaries of the South Metropolitan Gas Company gave an account of the five weeks' imprisonment of millions of pennies.

"We have 182,000 penny-in-the-slot gas meters. A large corps of inspectors spend their time in going round emptying these. They get around this enormous number of meters about once every five weeks.

"It is quite a usual thing for them to empty out 2,500,000 pennies in a few days. These millions of pennies have been locked up for five weeks in many cases, and if we let the emptying process stand still very long we should make a material difference to the stream of coppers in circulation."—[London Express.

FIELD NOTES.

Antelope Valley Bartletts.

THE arrival of a carload of fine Bartlett pears from Little Rock, about a week ago, gave the people Los Angeles an eye opener as to the possibilities of that section. I bought a box of Bartletts from Mr. Martin, grown in an orchard adjoining the source of this carload, and found the fruit perfect in form and flavor, and free from insect pests. Quietly the farmers of that section have been planting to apples and pears, discarding the profitless almond trees which had been planted there by the land boomers to the amount of hundreds of acres. So far the Antelope Valley has escaped the invasion of the codling moth. The pear blight has also failed to materialize. If the orchards continue to enjoy immunity from these destructive influences the future for that locality is bright, for the pear orchards have so far borne fair crops every year.

Controlling Pear Blight.

INASMUCH as the cutting away of all infected wood is about the only remedy for pear blight now in practice, anything relating to other remedies is read with interest, no matter how absurd it may be. It is about time for another raid of the hole-boring contingent who will contract to kill all scale upon the trees, bring down all the insects that may fly through the orchards and eradicate all disease whether in tree, soil or air by simply boring the trunk and inserting any kind of a nostrum from plain dirt to calomel. However, I was informed by a pear grower that old iron freely buried about the roots of the trees is a good remedy, and that has a semblance of merit. The Virginia Experiment Station offers this remedy for pear blight: Acid phosphate, 14 per cent., two parts; muriate of potash, 50 per cent., one part. From 5 to 15 pounds of this mixture is applied to the soil according to the size of the tree. It should be used in February or early in March.

The Surviving of Evil.

AGAIN has been demonstrated the slight possibility of passing a constitutional law in California should it be attacked in the highest court of the State. Recently C. E. Hayden, a Santa Clara fruit grower was arrested and fined $300 for violating the law requiring fruit packages to be labeled with the name of the locality in which the fruit was grown. The Supreme Court released him on the ground that the law was in violation of the Constitution. Now there can be no objection whatever to compelling the proper branding of fruit packages either in principle or practice. It is one way of protecting the trade-mark of other people. I suppose the law requiring the correct weight of butter will go down when measured by our compromise State Constitution. Had the State a constitution marked "A Plain Bill of Rights," laws could be made to conform to it. It is not stated in particular why Mr. Hayden objected to branding his fruit as grown in Santa Clara county. That brand would certainly add to its reputation. But hereafter any brand may be considered a superfluity. Or any brand may be applied whether true or false.

Growing the Pecan.

A RESIDENT of Washington City writes for information on pecan raising in Southern California. I am not aware of the successful cultivation of this nut in this portion of the State, and do not think the climate suitable. At least no one should invest in pecan orchards here, without a full investigation of the conditions. Pecan growing has become a craze in some portions of the South and it has been tried successfully from the Mexican line to the Dismal Swamp. Over this vast territory the tree is indigenous, bearing heavily farther south and thriving with little attention. In addition to the natural advantages of this region, there are plenty of hickory, of which the pecan is a relative, upon which it may be grafted, or the native trees may be improved by grafting to the commercial varieties. If the nut could be produced here, the price of land and water would preclude successful competition with the Southern States. But the greatest objection is that the pecan trees of California are not productive, probably because of the dryness of the soil and atmosphere.

Dr. Moore Reinstated.

THE action of Secretary Wilson in recalling Dr. George T. Moore of nitrogen-culture fame shows the secretary to be a courageous man though it set raging the agricultural press that was determined to upset "Uncle Jim" at any cost, through the alleged misconduct of the secretary's subordinates. That Mr. Wilson is in close touch with the President in his treatment of Dr. Moore, and Dr. Salmon of the Bureau of Animal Industry, will not be taken as a desire to cover up any wrongdoing on the part of the employés of the office. The fact that Dr. Moore gave to the world free from monopoly the results of his discoveries did not weigh an atom in the minds of the detractors who rushed in so brashly to destroy the efficiency of the farmers' department at Washington. In the face of the testimony of thousands of farmers, some of whom we all know personally, as to the efficacy of the nitrogen-fixing cultures, the Mafia has even assaulted the discovery itself, claiming in the dark that it is a gigantic fraud. The evidence finally proved Moore and Salmon as free from graft as the President himself.

Government Selling Timber.

IRRIGATORS all along the line will be interested in the application of the government's order to sell timber upon the forest reserves. While the new policy will not materially affect the reserves in Southern California, its execution will be carefully watched by all who depend upon irrigation for raising crops. The fact that all timber will be cut under the direct order of the forestry officials, does not insure scientific lumbering upon the reserves by any means. It may be assumed that the forestry people will provide against wastefulness, against cutting where the requirements of irrigation would be injured; that the timber will be sold at its full value and the money accounted for. But there are too few scientific foresters in command for the government to expect the selection of timber offerings to be made to the advantage of reforesting. However, as most of the forests of the San Gabriel and San Bernardino reserves are inaccessible, the question of selling timber is of more importance elsewhere. At any rate we have the promise of an honest administration.

Impromptu Flower Show.

AT the meeting of the Southern California Horticultural Association, held on the 6th of this month, those fortunate enough to attend enjoyed a rare treat in flowers. Howard & Smith had on the tables the latest in phloxes, cannas and other novelties, and Mr. Howard entertained the audience with a description of each kind that was instructive and inciting to possession of more beautiful varieties in these plants. One of the most captivating features of the evening was the display of a large leaf of the Royal water lily, the Victoria regia of the Amazon with a partially opened flower. These were from the lily ponds of Mr. Sturtevant at Hollywood, the exhibitor being identified with the first successful importations of this plant from South America years ago. It was a revelation to see the huge framework of this giant lily leaf over four feet in diameter. No one in the audience had perhaps ever seen the under side of a Victoria leaf before and Mr. Sturtevant entertained his listeners, while holding the leaf before them, with the story of having photographed one in New Jersey with a man and a child standing upon the floating foliage. The leaves of this lily grow six feet in diameter, the flowers reaching to eighteen inches in diameter at their best. The exhibitor explained that the flowers opened about 7 o'clock in the evening, closing at dawn and reopening the following evening before withering away. Several other flowers are expected this month and Mr. Sturtevant invited visitors to call very late or very early to see them in their glory. The association will have a flower show early in November and it promises to be one of the larger events of the season.

Fungus to Suffocate Scale.

PROF. S. M. WOODBRIDGE has introduced the question of destroying scale by inoculating them with a fungus prepared for that purpose. In a circular received a few days ago, Prof. Woodbridge sets forth that a certain fungus prevalent at times in the orchards may be propagated from cultures prepared in his laboratory and sent out in sterilized bread. Three of these pieces of bread each two inches square, are put in a barrel of water at a temperature of not less than 70 degs., in which the fungi is to propagate and furnish culture sufficient for 1600 trees. From this "seeding" the fungus is supposed to spread over the scale and destroy the pests. This idea has been discussed before, but the efficacy of the treatment has not be demonstrated. For years observers have been aware of a strange fatality that overtakes the larvae of the black scale while yet under the cover of the dead mother scale. It has been demonstrated that the red spider is subject to a similarly deadly malady and that it is of fungous origin. But I do not believe any one has given these phenomena sufficient investigation to lead the growers to hope for practical results from the use of fungi as an insecticide. It is impossible from our present knowledge of this matter to determine whether the white fungi found upon the dead larvae are the cause of the destruction of the scale, or have overrun the host as the result of the death of the scale from other causes; or whether the scavenger fungi, in attacking the body of the dead mother, may not have smothered the young. As this subject is of great importance, Prof. Woodbridge should be supported in his efforts to propagate and distribute what he thinks is a successful remedy. At present the proposition of destroying scale pests in this manner is all too vague to hang a hope upon, but it is assuring to know that it is receiving serious attention by practical men.

Why Remedies Fail.

EVERY artificial remedy for insect pests is more or less defective. It is effective only in a degree, as compared with other remedies. Not only is the remedy at fault in itself more or less, but in its application, man is governed by certain motives that do not act instinctively, such as interest, caprice or comfort. In other words two elements work adversely to the success of insect remedies, defects in the remedies themselves and lack of consistent application on the part of those troubled by the pests. The growers, by care in detail and constancy of use could make more effective any standard specific, notwithstanding its faults. The fact that all remedies of human invention are either defective or impracticable of application is important, as it corresponds with the fact that incidental interventions alone prevent the full effectiveness of the carnivorous or parasitic foes of insect pests. The habit to prey upon another is fundamental, and sibly be resisted. Therefore, as the use of remedies is not founded upon elementary preëxistent ends such as control the attacks insects upon their natural food, the fruit depend more and more upon beneficial serve the balance. From this it must that the uses of artificial methods of insect lessen. However defective in practice our be, they must be depended upon till the natural may be made effective through the introduction sites for every trouble and the larger the insect friends already at work. While evidence of the constant increase in the sect parasites, no one would advocate the artificial remedies wherever the use is [illegible] of Betel.

BETEL chewing is practiced by nearly a tenth of the human race. The nut is the fruit of the palm, [illegible] catchu, well known here. It is hard and [illegible] mottled and is gathered before it is quite [illegible] boiled and cut in slices, which are dried and prepared for use. The betel pepper, Chavica betel, is a [illegible] allied to the plant that produces black pepper and [illegible] by the Chinese in this city. The third important ingredient is powdered shell or coral lime. A [illegible] of the pepper serves as a wrapper to contain the [illegible] betel and a pinch of lime and the compound is [illegible] chewed. [illegible] Pickling Cucumbers.

[illegible] ago while residing on a farm near a large [illegible] Central Kansas, I found the cucumber crop [illegible] remunerative auxiliary to other farm crops. [illegible] Shortage.

[illegible] unfavorable weather in the Maryland-[illegible] district has increased the fear of a decided [illegible] the tomato pack, and in some sections [illegible] represented to be excited over the situation and outlook. Advices from prominent southern packers and brokers indicate that there is now practically nothing obtainable in the way of standard three pounds at less than 80 cents f.o.b. for either prompt or future delivery. Packers are represented to be indifferent about selling, even at this figure. On the other hand, jobbers here hesitate to take hold on the basis of present asking prices for futures, and are buying spots sparingly, and as a rule only when they can get goods a shade under the general market. There is a moderately active demand for peas, with trade restricted by the increasing scarcity of offerings at prices within buyers' views.—[New York Journal of Commerce.

Useful Plants That are Also Beautiful.

WE are prone to forget that beauty is usually an attribute of the useful. In England where Indian corn does not mature it is often grown as an ornamental plant. Wheat, barley, rye and oats make bouquets which even when dry are pretty. Sunflowers, which are field plants, cropped for their seeds in Russia, are here mostly found in flower gardens, but are none the less beautiful because of their utility as food plants. The castor bean plant furnishes most of the oil that lubricates the axles of the millions of whirling wheels in the world; but it is also an ornament in our gardens. Hemp is a fine foliage plant and flax has a beauty which, though brief, demands for that very useful plant a place in the flower garden. The opium poppy, which supplies a staple article of commerce, is grown by thousands of people, who appreciate the satiny sheen of its broad petals. Even cotton, the king of tevitte plants, the plant that produces the fiber which today has been woven into more square miles of fabric than measures the daily output of all the looms producing woolen and silk, is a beautiful plant. Though rarely seen in flower gardens, it can fairly claim a place by the side of hollyhocks malvas, abutilons and other members of its family. Tobacco, whose leaves go into the smallest byways of commerce throughout the whole world, the plant most prized and most despised of all the two-hundred thousand kinds that grow; the plant most used and most abused by men, is also a comely herb.—[Town and Country Journal.

Artificial Parasites.

THE wonderful ability of plant germs to abstract from the soil or other source of nourishment the exact constitutents needed for the development and perfection of the particular plant form from which it was derived, has been never better illustrated than in some recent experiments on artificial vegetable parasitism.

The investigators germinated a number of seeds of peas, and when the radicals had attained a length of, say one-quarter inch, they were inserted in the stalks of growing beans at a point about fifteen inches above the soil, a cut being made in the stem for the purpose. Afterward a plaster of paris mold was formed about the peas for their support. The grafted peas were grown in cold frames alongside of pea plants from the same lot of seed sown in the soil.

The parasitic peas flourished, blossomed and produced seed which were but slightly smaller than those produced by the soil-grown plants. Later the seeds produced by the bean-peas were germinated and again inserted in bean plants as before, and a second generation of artificial parasites, the roots of which had never been in contact with the soil, developed and flourished and produced peas which, when planted in the soil, produced vigorous, healthy plants.

Neat Flower Stands.

INDIVIDUAL flower pots of handsome pattern containing plants with beautiful blossoms demand individual flower stands. Various forms of these are described herewith, any one of which can be made at home.

The round stand is made from a circle of wood and board supports nailed below it. This frame is then hung with some pretty bit of silkoline cloth with points and silk balls. The draping, however, can be after any fashion that one may prefer, it not being necessary to follow the pattern given.

The square stand is the simplest of all to make and yet will prove very handsome if made of oak and highly polished. Let the wood be made as smooth as possible with sandpaper, then with linseed oil and a piece of flannel cloth rub the oil into the grain, then rub, rub, rub till a beautiful luster comes out upon the surface. Such a stand may have a top about eleven or twelve inches square, and sides sixteen inches in height.—[Orange Judd Farmer.

Fraudulent Foods.

THE percentage of adulterated foods is increasing and the public health must be more or less affected. Hawaii's contribution to the food market of the mainland in the way of jellies, canned pineapples, honey and vanilla extract has so far enjoyed a reputation of the highest purity. If the island products can always be kept free from adulteration, and just as they are represented on the labels of the packages, a very profitable trade will come this way. Throughout America and Europe those packers of foods who adulterate the least, or none at all, are the most successful in their business. Fake foods are continually being discovered and advertised by public chemists. A few months ago the State Board of New Hampshire after examining thirty-two samples of canned fruits and jellies detected 91 per cent. adulteration; of nine articles of honey three were impure, while of twenty-four bottles of vanilla extract 83 per cent. were fraudulent. The apple being the most common substitute for the pineapple, it is to the interest of the consumer to purchase canned pineapples that are put up in Hawaii, where pineapples are cheaper than apples.—[Honolulu Paradise

Hunts Prehistoric Peach.

ABOUT five years ago Secretary James Wilson, of the United States Department of Agriculture, sent one of the most skillful men in the department to China to get the prehistoric peach from which all modern varieties of the fruit have sprung. The expert, after enduring many hardships, failed, owing to the outbreak of the Boxer trouble. Last winter Mr. Wilson sent out another expert, who is now far up in the headwaters of the Yangste Kiang looking for the fabled peach of the days of Adam and Eve. The secretary expects to hear from his man in a few weeks. And it is hoped that he has found the mother of all peaches and will bring a specimen to America.—[Modern Grocer.

CAUGHT BY TRIFLES.

FAMOUS CRIMINALS WHO HAVE BEEN TRACKED THROUGH LITTLE MISTAKES.

[Answers:] The eye of the law is remarkably keen nowadays. A few weeks back a man was brought up at the Central Criminal Court who found himself in the dock mainly through a cobweb. A detective had been attracted to pay him peculiar attention by the fact that, fashionably attired, he was walking down the street with a mass of cobwebs on the elbow of his frock-coat. The news received later that a robbery had been effected at a wine merchant's office in the neighborhood suggested the question whether there were in the cellars, where the thief might have concealed himself, cobwebs of the same description. There were, and the immaculately dressed man will in future probably take a clothes brush with him when engaged in like pursuits. He will not need one, however, for over two years.

"It is the little thing that catches the criminal," declared M. Mace, the great head of the Paris police. He caught a criminal named Avinet by a scent the offender used. The crime was a terrible one—the murder of a lady for her jewels and certain bonds in her possession. The lady was discovered lying upon the floor of her room dead. She had been strangled. No one had been seen going in or departing from her rooms. There appeared to be no clew. The unfortunate lady had evidently been suddenly attacked while engaged in friendly conversation with a visitor, for a bottle of wine and two partly filled glasses stood upon the table. A handkerchief—a lady's—was on the floor beside her. It was at once assumed that the handkerchief was madame's, and that it had fallen from her hand. But it was scented, and no one had ever known madame to use that peculiar scent.

Mace came to the conclusion that it belonged to the murderer, and that the assassin was a man of effeminate and dandyish habits. What men was there likely to commit that crime who used such a scent, and preferred not to bulge his pocket out with a handkerchief which was larger than a lady's? Within four days Mace had found his man. It was the scent that led to his head falling into M. Deibler's basket.

In the Black Museum at Scotland Yard is the plaster cast of a bitten apple, which was the only clew the police had to the identify of the perpetrator of a most sensational crime. The murderer's victim was a woman who was found dead in a room in a house in Great Coram street, London. The assassin had eaten part of the apple, and a very fair impression of his teeth remained in the fruit. Unfortunately the clew was not sufficient, and the guilty man was never discovered.

In a case tried on the western circuit some years since, a man suspected of murder was discovered to have on two fingers of his right hand marks which had clearly been made by peculiarly shaped human teeth. The teeth of the dead man were shown to exactly fit into the marks, and the prisoner was convicted.

The mystery surrounding the death of a great continental banker was cleared by means of a cigar holder found in the room with the body. No one had ever seen the banker using it. But in the holder was a small piece of unconsumed cigar end. Experts pronounced it a cigar of the finest quality—one which only a person of wealth could afford to purchase. This evidence appeared to confirm the notion that the cigar holder had belonged to the dead plutocrat. He had cigars in the house, too, of the same brand. One of the detectives, however, engaged in the case was not satisfied. The cigar holder was peculiarly worn in two places. Its owner had evidently been accustomed to bite it hard. Two teeth had almost bitten it through. The detective inserted the holder in the houth of the dead man, but his teeth would not fit these hollows. The holder had evidently belonged to the murderer. He was discovered at last in the person of the banker's cook, whose teeth corresponded to the worn places. He had been accustomed to help himself to his master's choice cigars.

Some European Waiters.

A NOTED WRITER RELATES PERSONAL EXPERIENCES.

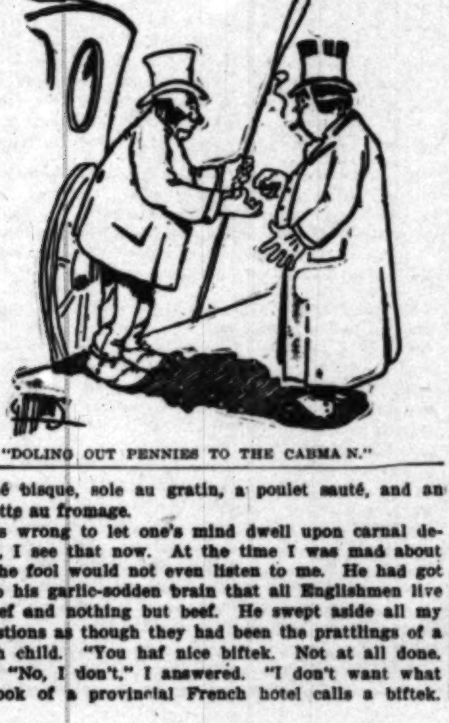
Contributed by Jerome K. Jerome.

THE slowest waiter I know is the British railway refreshment-room waiter. His very breathing, regular, harmonious, penetrating, instinct as it is with all the better attributes of a well-preserved grandfather's clock, conveys suggestion of dignity and peace. He is a huge, impressive person. There emanates from him an atmosphere of Lotusland. The otherwise unattractive room becomes an oasis of repose amid the turmoil of a fretful world. All things conspire to aid him; the ancient joints, ranged side by side like corpses in a morgue, each one decently hidden under its white muslin shroud, whispering of death and decay; the dish of dead flies, thoughtfully placed in the center of the table; the framed advertisements, extolling the virtues of heavy beers and stouts, of weird champagnes, emanating from haunted-looking chateaux, situate—if one may judge from the illustration—in the midst of desert lands; the sleep-inviting buzz of bluebottle.

The spirit of the place steals over you. Your idea on entering, with a quarter of an hour to spare, was a cutlet and a glass of claret. In the face of the refreshment-room waiter, the notion appears frivolous, not to say un-English. You order cold beef and pickles, with a pint of bitter in a tankard. To win the British waiter's approval, you must always order beer in a tankard. The British waiter, in his ideas, is medieval. There is a Shakespearean touch about the tankard. A soapy potato will, of course, be added. Afterward a ton of cheese and a basin of rabbit's food floating in water (the British salad) will be placed before you. You will work steadily through the whole, anticipating the somnolence that will subsequently fall upon you with a certain amount of satisfaction. It will serve to dispel the last lingering regret at the reflection that you will miss your appointment and suffer thereby serious inconvenience, if not positive loss. These things are of the world—the noisy tiresome world you have left without.

To the English traveler, the foreign waiter, in the earlier stages of his career, is a burden and a trial. When he is complete—when he really can talk English—I rejoice in him. When I object to him is when his English is worse than my French or German, and when he will, for his non-educational purposes, insist, nevertheless, that the conversation shall be entirely in English. I would rather he came to me some other time. I would so much rather make it after dinner—or say half an hour next morning. I hate giving lessons during meal times. Besides, to a man with feeble digestion, this sort of thing can lead to trouble.

One waiter I met at a hotel in Dijon knew very little English—about as much as a poll parrot. The moment I entered the salle à manger he started to his feet. "Ah! You English!" he cried. "Well, what about us?" I answered. It was during the period of the Boer War. I took it he was about to denounce the English nation generally. I was looking for something to throw at him. "You English—you Englishman, yes?" he repeated, and then I understood he merely intended a question. I owned up that I was, and accused him of being a Frenchman. He admitted it. Introductions, as it were, thus over, I thought I would order dinner. I ordered it in French. I am not bragging of my French; I never wanted to learn French. Even as a boy, it was more the idea of others than of myself. I have learned as little as possible; but I have learned enough to live in places where they can't, or won't talk anything else. Left to myself, I could have enjoyed a very satisfactory dinner. I was tired with a long day's journey, and hungry. They cook well at this hotel; I had been looking forward to my dinner for hours and hours. I had sat down in my imagination to a consommé bisque, sole au gratin, a poulet sauté, and an omelette au fromage.

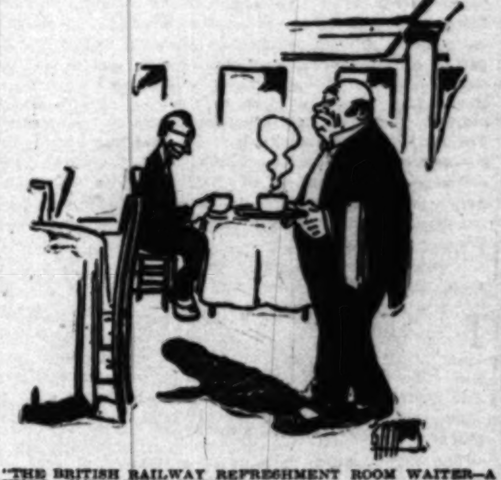


"DOLING OUT PENNIES TO THE CABMA N."

It is wrong to let one's mind dwell upon carnal delights, I see that now. At the time I was mad about it. The fool would not even listen to me. He had got it into his garlic-sodden brain that all Englishmen live on beef and nothing but beef. He swept aside all my suggestions as though they had been the prattlings of a foolish child. "You haf nice biftek. Not at all done. Yes?" "No, I don't," I answered. "I don't want what the cook of a provincial French hotel calls a biftek. I want something to eat, I want——" Apparently, he understood neither English nor French. "Yes, yes," he continued, cheerfully, "with pottitoes." "With what?" I said. I thought for the moment he was suggesting potted pigs' feet in the nearest English he could get to it. "Pottito," he repeated, "boil pottito. Yes? And pell hell." I felt like telling him to go there. I suppose he meant "pale ale." It took me about five minutes to get that beefsteak out of his head. By the time I had done it I did not care what I had for dinner. I took pot-du-jour and veal. He added, on his own initiative, a thing that looked like a poultice. I did not try the taste of it. He explained it was "plum poodin." I fancy he had made it himself. This fellow is typical; you meet him everywhere abroad. He translates your bill into English for you, calls ten centimes a penny, calculates twelve francs to the pound and presses a handful of sous affectionately upon you as change for a napoleon.

The cheating waiter is common to all countries, though in Italy and Belgium he flourishes, perhaps, more than elsewhere. But the British waiter, when he is detected, becomes surly—does not take it nicely. The foreign waiter is amiable about it—bears no malice whatever. He is grieved may be, at your language, but that is because he is thinking of you—the possible effect of it upon your future. To try to stop you, he offers you another four sous.

The story is told of a Frenchman who, not knowing the legal fare, adopted the plan of doling out pennies to a London cabman one at a time until the man looked satisfied. Myself I doubt the story. From what I know of the London cabman I can see him leaning down still, with outstretched hand, the horse between the shafts long since dead, the cab chock full of coppers, and yet no expression of satiety upon that cabman's face. But the story would appear to have crossed the Channel, and to have commended itself to the foreign waiter; especially to the railway refreshment-room waiter. He doles out centimes to the traveler, one at a time, with the air of a man who is giving away the savings of a lifetime. If, after five minutes or so, you still appear discontented, he goes away, quite suddenly. You think he has gone to open another chest of halfpence, but when a quarter of an hour has passed and he does not reappear, you inquire about him among the other waiters. A gloom at once falls upon them. You have spoken of the very thing that had been troubling them. He used to be a waiter here once—one might almost say until quite recently. As to what has become of him, ah! there you have them. If in the course of their checkered career, they ever come across him, they will mention to him that you are waiting for him. Meanwhile, a stentorian-voiced official is shouting that your train is on the point of leaving. You console yourself with the reflection that it might have been more. It always might have been more; sometimes it is.



"THE BRITISH RAILWAY REFRESHMENT ROOM WAITER—A HUGE, IMPRESSIVE PERSON."

A waiter at the Gare du Nord in Brussels, on one occasion pressed upon me a five-franc piece, a small Turkish coin, the value of which was unknown to me, and remains so to this day, a distinctly bad two francs and from a quarter of a pound to six ounces of centimes, as change for a twenty-franc note, after deducting the price of a cup of coffee. He put it down with the air of one subscribing to a charity. We looked at each other. I suppose I must have conveyed to him the impression of being discontented. He drew a purse from his pocket. The action suggested that, for the purpose of satisfying my inordinate demands, he would be compelled to draw upon his private resources, but it did not move me. Abstracting reluctantly a fifty-centime piece he added to it the heap upon the table. I suggested his taking a seat, as at this rate it seemed likely we should be doing business together for some time. I think he gathered I was not a fool. Hitherto he had been judging I suppose, purely from appearances. But he was not in the least offended. "Ah," he cried, with a cheery laugh, "Monsieur comprend!" He swept the whole nonsense back into his bag, and gave me the right change. I slipped my arm through his and insisted upon the pleasure of his society, until I had examined each and every coin. He went away chuckling and told another waiter all about it. They both of them bowed to me as I went out, and wished me a pleasant journey. I left them still chuckling. A British waiter would have been sulky all the afternoon. The waiter who insists upon mistaking you for the heir of all the Rothschilds used to cost me dear when I was younger. I find the best plan is to take him in hand at the beginning and disillusion him. family has its poets, authors, painters, men and inventors. Eli Whitney Blake, nephew Whitney, inventor of the cotton gin, assisted his uncle and patented many things on his own account. He was one of the founders of the Connecticut Academy of Science.

The family also had its soldiers. The "Lexington Alarm" may have found Richard and Ebenezer Blake sleeping, but the midnight cry had not died away before they were up and armed and on their way to the scene of action, Joseph, of Waterbury, was in the French and Indian War, and afterward lieutenant in the Revolution. In later times, George, of Pennsylvania, was brevetted major for gallant conduct in the Mexican War.

The Blakes were related by marriage to the families of Capt. Jonathan Mix, Revolutionary patriot, and of Gov. Sir William Phipps, Trumbles and Chandlers were other connections.

Among Christian names which figure in old documents are the curious ones, Sarisa, Statira, Manara, Damaris, Patronella, Barzella and Zara. Dorcas and Experience, cousins, might reasonably complain that their names in comparison were too commonplace. Freelove was a favorite name.

Mr. John Blake, we may take for granted, was a very fine gentleman, indeed. Here is the story, told originally to illustrate an Irishman's neat way of paying a compliment:

"I was climbing a country road, when an aged man addressed me, 'I am thinking, sir, that you are Mr. John Blake.'

"'Well, sir,' said I, 'you are thinking wrong.'

"'Well, sir,' said I, to meself, 'as I saw you comin' up the side, that is Mr. John Blake, and if 'tis not, says I to meself, 'tis a fine upsthandin' young man he is, whoever he is.'"

While family traditions are in order, it may not be amiss to recall the one about William Rufus Blake, actor. While playing in Boston in 1827, he received the first call before the curtain ever given to an actor in this country.

The arms reproduced, that of Col. John Blake is argent, a fret gules, Crest, a mountain cat passant, guardant proper, Motto—"Virtus sola nobilitas"—virtue is the only nobility. A fret, the heraldic true lover's knot, is a valued emblem. In Edward III.'s French war, four generals were each granted a fret or on a ground gules. Liberty, vigilance, forecast and courage are signified by the cat. With the Egyptians, this animal was sacred to the goddess Pasht, their Diana the huntress. Argent, a fret gules, is the arms borne by many branches of the family, but the crests are infinite—a leopard, a horse's head, a dragon among their number. Another motto is "Bene praeparatum pectus"—a heart well prepared. Admiral Blake's arms was argent, a chevron between three garbs sable. Crest, on a chapeau gules, turned up ermine, a martlet argent.

ELEANOR LEXINGTON.

Wonderful Long Box.

A STORY THAT WAS TOLD BY THE LATE SENATOR WHITE.

By a Special Contributor.

THE late Senator White of California interested many people, in public and in private, by telling the story of the wonderful long box; a box which was a stumbling block to many, and a fortune winner for one. It is a good story, and the Senator told it as a true story.

In the store window of a Mr. Parsons, a sign was placed with only these words: "Good Boy Wanted." The sign was there for several weeks, and many boys applied, were tried, and dismissed. Mr. Parsons was a singular and original character, and, after trying a boy for a few days or a week, he would take him out to the sign and explain, thus:

"You read that sign as though it said: 'Boy Wanted.' But that is not what the sign says. It is this: 'Good Boy Wanted.' You are a boy, but not what I regard as a 'good' boy; and so I will not need your services."

Will Daniels, Charlie Sanders, Joe Blackburn, and several other boys were tried and found wanting. Mr. Parsons kept a store at a country crossroads, and it was a forerunner of the great department stores; for he kept everything from pins and needles to plows and sewing machines. The various boys were capable of learning the numerous things needful to know in such a variegated stock, but the Long Box is what knocked them out, one after another.

"The new boy," would go to work with energy and ambition, but on the second or third day, the old man would say: "There's a long box in the attic which has not been straightened up for some time; so I wish you would go and put it in shape." When the boys found the old long box, and found it a little over half full of the odds and ends of the accumulated rubbish of years, they fell back and gave up the job; for it looked as needless or useless as it seemed to be hopeless.

Walter Brownlow applied for the place, and was given a trial. Walter had had some training in the school of sorrow before he went to work for Mr. Parsons. He was only 14 years of age; but he had lost his father; his younger sister had been ill for a year, and had died; his mother had been ill for months, and all of the life-insurance money had been spent; so he was obliged to find employment. He felt that he must find work, and keep his place, because, young as he was, it behooved him to care for his mother, as well as for himself.

So, when Mr. Parsons told him that there was a long box in the attic that needed straightening out, he went at the job without faltering. When noontime came and Mr. Parsons called him, he said that the work was not half done. On the demand of Mr. Parsons, he came down and went to dinner. At 5 o'clock that afternoon, Mr. Parsons called him again, and his reply was an apology for taking up so much time, but the job was a slow one. Mr. Parsons told him to take all of the time that he deemed necessary.

Four days elapsed, and Mr. Parsons called the lad away from his work, to come to his meals. Finally, Mr. Parsons asked him how many more days he expected to spend at his task, and he replied that it would take at least four more days, and, maybe, another week. He was given unlimited time again, and was not molested until the work was finished, and he brought to his employer a valuable old gold Spanish coin, which he said he had found at the bottom of the box between the cracks. Mr. Parsons complimented him on his industry, and also upon his honesty, and bade him good-night.

Long after supper Mr. Parsons climbed up to the attic with a lantern, and examined the work which had been done. He found that Walter Brownlow had taken everything out of the box, scattered the things around the floor, then segregated them into homogeneous piles, and replaced them systematically in the long box. With shingles, the lad had made compartments in which Mr. Parsons found things labeled. On one side he found a compartment filled with "Nails." Next to them he found "Bent Nails." At one end were "Screws," and beside them "Bent Screws." There were also "Hooks," and "Bent Hooks." The whole inconglomerate mass of uselessness had been put into systematic order; and the "good boy," whom Mr. Parsons "wanted," did not know that the whole long box full of material was not worth a dollar.

Mr. Parsons went quietly downstairs to his library, took up a late magazine, lighted a pipe and began to read and smoke, as had been his custom for many years. His wife, who knew all of his habits, his weaknesses and foibles, as well as the few sterling qualities which outweighed the detrimental points, went about her own household affairs, looking after servant, children, culinary concerns, and all else, without asking a question of the taciturn man. He always spoke when he was good and ready, and, that night, before retiring, he said:

"Mother, there's a good boy come to me, and I'm glad I've found him. But, I've got one advantage of him, and I'm not going to tell him about it yet. He must find it out for himself."

"Why, father, I don't believe you're going to take advantage of anyone on earth; certainly not of a boy."

"Yes, mother, I'm not going to tell him what I know will happen. I've found a good boy at last, and he has found a fortune; but he mustn't know that just yet.'

"Oh, of course, father, you are right. I'm glad it is the son of the Widow Brownlow. She is a good woman, and his father was a good man, and you might expect a good boy from that kind of a family."

In a few weeks Walter Brownlow became well known as the errand boy of Mr. Parsons. In a few months he became known as the collector and confidential agent. When he was 16 years of age, Mr. Parsons went to the city to buy goods, and left Walter in charge of the business for three weeks; and when he came back, he found everything as neat and in perfect working order as if he had been there personally looking after all of the details.

When Walter was 21 years old, the sign over the door of the store read: "Parsons & Brownlow." Walter was a full partner. And, when Walter was 22 years of age, Ruth Parsons was 17, and the wedding had the hearty sanction of her father and mother.

Mrs. Brownlow, Walter's mother, often says: "Yes, I'm a welcome mother-in-law, because I do not interfere in the affairs of the household in which I have a home. I am as proud of my boy now as he was when he came to me and boasted of having brought order out of the chaos before him, in that wonderful long box."

USED AS A SHIELD.

TERRIBLE EXPERIENCE OF A BRITISH SOLDIER DURING THE BOER WAR.

[London Express:] Probably not another man alive has had the terrible experience of Private Dunning, formerly of the Northumberland Fusiliers, whose body was used as a firing shield by his comrades during an affair of outposts in the South African War.

The Soldiers' and Sailors' Help Society, which has done so much good work among disabled soldiers, has been employing Dunning at light carpentry work, but he has now become so weak that it has been necessary to transfer him to the lighter task of basket making.

The story of his experience was modestly told by Dunning to an Express representative yesterday.

He was one of a detachment of 500 guarding a convoy from Wolmaranstad to Klerksdorp, which was attacked by 3000 Boers near the latter place.

"I could see nothing but one big man on a big gray horse, moving about among the trees fifty yards away," he said. "I thought of nothing but him, and kept saying to myself: 'I must bring him down.'

"I knelt down and fired carefully. The big man came down like a shot and the gray horse bolted. At the same instant about a dozen men broke cover twenty yards away and fired at me. I was hit in several places, and went down. I was still conscious, but our men thought I was dead and used me and the bodies of other men as a rampart to fire over, until, one by one, they were all silenced.

"I remember some men dragging my clothes off me later on. They left me stark naked, but one of them put my water bottle to my mouth and said: 'Good-by, chap; you're going.'"

Dunning had eight bullets in his body, and a broken arm, Some of the bullets were not extracted until he reached Krukersdorp, eight days later. Practically all the ribs on the right side have been shot away, and he now wears a thick felt jacket, with steel supports to keep him from collapsing.

He has a pension of one shilling sixpence a day, which he supplements a little by basket making. Even this light work, however, is obviously a severe task upon him, and he is frequently unable to carry it on.

My Balcony.

A FEW OF THE INTIMACIES OF ITALIAN LIFE.

By a Special Contributor.

THE balcony! What other architectural feature can boast of such an enviable place in the annals of literature! It has been celebrated in song and story, verse and prose, by men and women great and small. Emperors have harangued from it; lovers have climbed to it, heroes have leaped from it, and poets have found in it a rare vantage point from which to scan the world of dreams and visions.

My balcony, in all modesty, claims but a distant kinship with the famous balconies of history and fiction, but a kinship it is, nevertheless, imparting to it something of dignity and indefatigable charm.

It commands, not a blue expanse of bay embraced by mountain arms, and bearing on its bosom an enchanted island—not, as you may suppose, the turrets and towers of the eternal city, but only a wide quadrangular space containing a green jumble of Florentine back yards and bounded in wavering lines of irregularity by the backs of tall Florentine houses. The prospect, however, is saved from mediocrity by Brunelleschi's beautiful dome which springs into the blue beyond the housetops, with Giotto's campanile as companion.

Directly beneath my balcony is a quiet garden, into the cool green depths of which I may only gaze, for it belongs to the house next door whose mysterious occupants seem never tempted by the inviting shade to wander there that I may see them. A marble goddess whose whiteness gleams against the green, holds lonely sway down there, and pays not the slightest attention to my salutations or my questions as to her career. Perhaps it is the queer barbaric language which displeases her southern ear.

All during the long, still summer days the great quadrangle is haunted by voices, echoes of the life which ebbs and flows through the tall houses and of which one catches only fleeting glimpses. Children's laughter—a mother's call—the plaintive refrain of an unknown song—these float vaguely across the open space, varied by an occasional wrangle of the virulent Italian type threatening instant annihilation of both parties and ending in a careless laugh. But there is one voice which appears to stir the enmity of the entire quadrangle. It is a large baritone voice, and while it may distribute thrills and delight to breathless audiences in some more favored spot, it gives to us of the listening space only scales and arpeggios.

If it were a modest voice, we might be thankful even for this, but it is a voice puffed up with pride, and provokingly conscious of its own superiority. "A-h-h-h," it begins, rolling into the afternoon stillness with startling effect. There is no response; the quadrangle is taking its siesta and pays no attention. Then a half-tone higher, "ah-h-h-h;" triumphantly it soars, dominating the wide open space, its challenge penetrating into every nook and corner.

Suddenly a woman's voice takes up the scale an octave higher and follows unflinchingly through a maze of vocal gymnastics. Then some small boy (the genus is identical in all lands) awaking to the fact that here is a noise in which he has no part, lifts his piercing treble and joins in, preferring a key of his own. This being a brilliant idea attracts numerous other small boys, who fly to the breach with all their lung power, and in the babel which follows, the baritone is ignominiously routed. The boys shout on for a few moments in token of victory—a woman's laugh, musical and brimful of mirth, rings out distinctly, and peace is once more restored.

But in the evening when the tall houses open a hundred eyes of light upon the dark quadrangle, my balcony becomes as a private box in a great theater. The players are the silhouettes that come and go against the light, unconscious of observation, and the scenes they present are tableaux in the drama which began in the Garden of Eden and is yet to be finished.

There is the woman who waits every evening for the return of her lord and master, who is invariably late for dinner. She wanders about the dining-room, arranges and rearranges the table, looks at herself in a mirror—puts a rose in her hair and studies its effect—takes it out and puts it on the other side, is satisfied, and finally rushes to the door to receive—an Adonis, you suppose. Not at all. He is fat and middle-aged, and he jerks his coat off in an irritable way which tells tales; then seats himself, in his shirt sleeves, puts his elbows on the table and proceeds to push the food into his mouth. The wife meanwhile, tenderly alive to his wants, talks vivaciously or hangs with reverent attention on some stray word (there cannot be many of them between bites.) The rose in her hair, one thinks regretfully, is evidently an example of the "many" which are "born to blush unseen."

But one evening there is a guest for dinner. She is charming and highly entertaining (judging by her gestures,) and lo! the fat, coatless husband devouring his dinner like any other animal is transformed into a courtier, full of bows and polite solicitude, picking delicately at his plate and sipping his wine with graceful deliberation.

Another square of light shows a man beside a book-strewn table, reading. He is stoop-shouldered and as still as a statue in his absorption. A door opens behind him, and a woman comes into the room with a little white-gowned figure in her arms. The reader remaining motionless, she stands a moment smiling, then glides softly to his chair, and the child leaning from her grasp throws its arms about his head. Their far-away laughter floats faintly out at the window, and one looks away, not wishing to be sacrilegious.

In one house a stairway winds upward past a tier of dimly-lighted windows, and people pass up and down, like shadows—some gaily, some wearily. And high up under the cornice lives a little woman who is eternally ironing; back and forth, back and forth goes her arm against the light, until one's own arm aches in sympathy.

Sometimes I invite friends to my balcony to help me weave stories about the shadow people; Monsieur—and Madame, his English wife, or the young American professor and his energetic little spouse. The Frenchman is a Viscount traveling without his title, for a title is as expensive a luxury to carry about Europe as a Saratoga trunk. He has seen the world in every sense, having started on his wanderings at 16, when his distracted old grandfather had procured him a post in the navy to keep him out of Paris and mischief. He has been entertained by Chinese mandarins in eastern ports, has had all manner of adventures in outlandish places. He traveled through Russia at a time when relations between that country and France were strained and when the trembling of an eyelash might have sent him to Siberia as a spy. "The continent" in all its aspects is as a familiar book to him, and if Monsieur be in a talkative mood, my balcony becomes like the magic carpet of the Arabian Nights, and we who sit upon it are taken to strange places and see fantastic sights.

When the professor comes the atmosphere is altogether different. He is so full of boyish spirits that one has difficulty in picturing him clothed with professional dignity seated in the halls of learning. History being his specialty, nothing will induce him to talk on the subject. Old coins are his hobby, and a junk shop has, in consequence, greater fascination for him than a cathedral. One knows that he has, at heart, true feeling for the deeper things of life, but it is securely hidden behind a screen of assured irreverence set up, one suspects, for the sole purpose of teasing his wife, who worships with awe at the shrine of Art and Learning, and who never fails to be inexpressibly shocked at her husband's nonchalance. On the professor's evening's conversation is lively and skims over a wide area, from Botticelli's madonnas to American politics. However, visitors must go, sooner or later, and I am left alone on my balcony for the most precious hour of the twenty-four. The hundred eyes of light are snuffed out one by one, even the indefatigable little woman up under the cornice has ceased her ironing; it is a relief to know that her tired arms are at rest. The white goddess and I are left in possession of the stillness, while the full moon swings high above the sleeping quadrangle transforming yonder dome and bell tower into visions of undying beauty. The sons of Florence have always loved her with such yearning fondness; may they not come back on some such night to haunt the spots that know them best? San Marco lies but a few streets distant. If one should go into the silent cloisters with eyes from which the scales had fallen, might one not see hooded figures passing to and fro? And in that narrow cell at the end of the long corridor, surely a man sits brooding—his head bent forward and wonderful eyes gleaming from beneath his cowl.

And the Bargello! Who knows how many imprisoned souls are stealing about those low-browed halls, gliding from window to window seeking the memory of a long-lost hope. That court below with its marble staircase and dark arcades must be wonderfully beautiful in this flood of silver light. Florence has no longer any gates to close, and Dante may be treading again the cobbles of that narrow street with its strips of sky gleaming between the overhanging roofs.

Perhaps the goldsmiths have reopened their shops on the Ponte Vecchio, the quiet river mumuring as of old beneath its arches, and ghostly citizens are jostling one another in the silent thoroughfares. Surely, a more distinguished company of ghosts could be marshaled by few other cities on a moonlight night.

The artists—such a host of them, beloved of all the world, what need to name them! Poets who have dreamed in stone and bronze and rhythm and colors; soldiers, statesmen, philosophers. Perhaps they are crowding now through the gloomy portal of the Palazzo Medici within which the magnificent Lorenzo holds stately court. Other Medici must be there too. The swarm of degenerates—the murderers and the murdered. Do they hate each other yet, I wonder, or has the memory of those bitter feuds been lost in the waters of Lethe? But it is midnight and a voice from the world of flesh and blood, a maternal voice, sleepy but admonitory, calls from within, reminding me that malaria lurks in the night air. Malaria! At the dread word the whole army of ghosts pick up their misty robes and flee. I kiss my hand to the goddess, calling softly, "Felicissima notte, mia bella!" and—hark! was that a whispered answer or only the night wind stirring in the trees?

ADELE M. DONOVAN.

LITERARY STILT-WALKING.

While crossing the ocean last spring all our table was held breathless by the daring stilt-walking of a fashionable authoress installed on the captain's right. So audacious were her feats that at moments they attained the perfection of Haute Ecole.

One evening, on referring to her love of diamonds and gems in general (the good lady discoursed mostly about herself,) she announced that it was her rule to spend most of the money she earned by writing, on jewelry. "It may be foolish," she added with a simper, "but fine jewels are a temptation I can't resist. I bought my diamond and sapphire tiara this winter with the $10,000 royalties from my last novel!"

It certainly was fortunate for the lady's equilibrium that she failed to recognize the junior partner of her publishing firm in the modest little man who choked so violently over his wine at this remark. He confided to me later that the book had, perhaps, netted the authoress $500.—[Eliot Gregory, in Harper's for September.

In 1887, '88 and prose sketches apeared: "Reuben Sachs," "The of a Shop," and "Miss Meredith," the first a second edition with a promise of popularity never was fulfilled.

Her best work was done in her lyrics. This factory maid, destined to spend the scant life amid the most sordid, the most vulgar had gone down into that grim world endowed pure heart and fine sensibilities of a poetess and depressed by all the outward and visible her, she yet never missed the inward and ings of things. All that she wrote was but much was so good that, had she but experience to have had confidence in the might well have found the courage to greater power had brought recognition. promise, for instance, lay in that little which she called "A Reminiscence."

It is so long gone by, and yet
How clearly now I see it all!
The glimmer of your cigarette,
The little chamber, narrow and

Perseus; your picture in its frame;
(How near they seem and yet how
The blaze of kindled logs; the
Of tulips in a mighty jar.

Florence and Springtime; surely
Glad things unto the spirit saith,
Why did you lead me in your
To those dark mysteries of death?

How suggestively complete, too, is "To Sylvia," which breathes not only Amy Levy's love for music, but sings itself into one's head with all the pathos of the minor key, so distinctively characteristic of almost every line the neglected poetess wrote:

"O love, lean thy cheek to mine,
And let the tears together flow"—
Such was the song you sang to me
Once long ago.

Such was the song you sang; and yet
(O, be not wroth!) I scarcely knew
What sounds flowed forth; I only felt
That you were you.

I scarcely knew your hair was gold,
Nor of the Heaven's own blue your eyes
Sylvia and song, divinely mixed,
Made Paradise.

These things I scarcely knew, today,
When love is lost and hope is fled,
The song you sang so long ago
Rings in my head.

Clear comes each note and true; today,
As in a picture I behold
Your turned-up chin, and small, sweet head
Misty with gold.

A little more of life, a widening and deepening of experience, and such blossoms could have developed only into ripe fruitage. But through the "squinting, cobwebbed windows" of Amy Levy's garret, the world lay black and bleak and of no promise. She could see herself only as

A blot, a blurr, a note
All out of tune in this sad instrument.
There is no place for me in all the world.
'Tis but a rock, and I will beat no more,
A breast of flesh and blood, against it.

It was so she wrote of "A Minor Poet," but the minor poetess spoke clearly from her own disappointed heart. It was surely, too, with some grim prevision of her own end, five years later, that she should have written of that dream-child, as she drew the cork from the phial:

My life was jarring discord from the first;
Though here and there brief hints of melody,
Of melody unutterable, clove the air.
From this bleak world into the heart of night,
The dim, deep bosom of the universe,
I cast myself, I only crave for rest;
Too heavy is the load. I fling it down.

Cooped up in the narrow purlieus of a great city, Amy Levy, in all her imaginings, yet lived near to nature's heart. With dinginess on every side, she yet was instinctively susceptible to color, and accustomed as she was to the ceaseless whirr and click of machinery, she was a true lover of all harmony of sound and tone. She seemed to feel intuitively the tense, dramatic power that lies in the little things of life, but she had so shut herself off from all her work-a-day fellows that a heart was easier for her to find in the "passionate birch" on the "lonely hillsides of neglected spring," than in any of the young men with whom her lot had cast her. Love in her verse is "lost." Hope to her is "fled." Courage was but an empty word to one who wrote again and again of "my spirit's murky lead," and "The world's great woe and mine," or who could see in God Himself only one unsuccessful.

"Sisyphus, with the world for stone."

Typical of all of this, suggestive, too, of Heine, is her [illegible]

The sad rain falls from Heaven,
A sad bird pipes and sings;
I am sitting here at my window
Watching the spires of "Kings."

O fairest of all fair places,
Sweetest of all sweet towns!
With the birds, and the grayness, and greenness,
And the men in caps and gowns,

All they that dwell within thee
To leave are ever loath,
For one gets friends, and another
Gets honors, and one gets both.

The sad rain falls from Heaven;
My heart is great with woe,
I have neither a friend, nor honor,
Yet I am sorry to go.

"I am dying for a little love," still cries Catrina from [illegible] world. That, too, was the cry from the heart of Amy Levy. Here was brilliant mind, refined and sensitive, and the bourgeois surroundings against which she bruised and battered brought self-sought death at last. Her emotions were the keenest, and they demanded an outlet. Mere friendship, or such as was offered her, could not give it. Such love as trailed through the streets before her was not the love that understandeth all things, believeth all things, suffereth all things. It was that she craved, and that was not given her.

She chafed under what must have seemed the cruel [illegible] of it all:

I am not resigned, not patient, not schooled in
To take my starveling's portion and pretend
I'm grateful for it. I want all, all, all;
I've appetite for all. I want the best;
Love, beauty, sunlight, nameless joy of life.
There's too much patience in the world, I think.

None listened, or none understood, and so, at last, in despair, came submission through surrender. In "Reuben Sachs" she once had written, and it, too, may indeed have been so autobiographical as to throw more light upon her violent exit from a stage she had grown to hate: "Before the great mysteries of life her soul grew frozen and appalled. It seemed to her that this is the bitter lesson of existence; that the sacred serves only to teach the full meaning of sacrilege; the beautiful of the hideous; modesty of outrage, joy of sorrow; life of death."

Poets depart, not poetry. Was it not so, to choose but a single instance from many, with William Corey, who left behind a few lines at least, which lifted him for the moment to the level of great singers, and for which he still is remembered? What then of Amy Levy's "In the Mile End Road?" Is it not far more nearly flawless than much of the verse for which happier poets have been honored?

How like her! But 'tis she herself,
Comes up the crooked street;
How little did I think, the morn
My only love to meet!
Whose else that motion and that mien?
Whose else that airy tread?
For one strange moment I forgot
My only love was dead.

Thomas Bailey Aldrich was one of the few to offer appreciation of Amy Levy's work, yet even that came not till she had gone far beyond the hearing. The American poet came across this English girl's "London Plane Tree" just after the scant notice of her end had begged a stick of space from the daily papers. He had chanced to see that item, so he read the suicide's lines with curiosity. Then came a growing understanding, and, at last, as he closed the pathetically slight little tome he wrote:,

I picture her with sorrowful, vague eyes,
Illumed with such strange gleams of inner light
As linger in the drift of London skies
Ere twilight turns to night.

I know not; I conjecture: "'Twas a girl,
That with her own most gentle, desperate hand,
From out God's mystic setting plucked life's pearl,"
'Tis hard to understand.

This is her book of Verses—wren-like notes,
Shy franknesses, blind gropings, haunting fears;
At times across the chords abruptly floats
A mist of passionate tears.

A fragile lyre too tensely keyed and strung,
A broken music, weirdly incomplete;
Here a proud mind, self-baffled and self-strung
Lies coiled in dark defeat.

WARWICK JAMES PRICE.

CONCERNING KOMURA.

SOME INCIDENTS THAT SHOW THE CHARACTER OF JAPAN'S SENIOR PEACE ENVOY.

[World's Work:] After the Chinese-Japanese War, Komura was appointed Civil Governor of the Liao-Tung Peninsula. One day a Japanese who had not known him before called upon him. He expected to see a man of heroic expression. When he rang the bell, he was ushered in by a man whom he thought might be a servant of the house. He intimated that he wished to see Mr. Komura. "Mr. Komura is now engaged. Kindly take a chair in the parlor and wait a few minutes," answered the man, who ushered in the visitor to the parlor and then departed. A few minutes later the same man reëntered and said, "What can I do for you, sir?" The visitor was very much offended and said in a rather angry tone, "I said I want to see Mr. Komura." The man who stood before him said, "I am Mr. Komura."

Komura prefers a derby to a silk hat, to which he has an insuperable aversion. During his stay in America as a student, he often visited New York City. As a government-sent student it was proper that he should wear a frock coat and a silk hat whenever he went out on the streets. One day, wishing to have a Japanese dish, he went out to buy some meat. The butcher gave it to him in a paper package. As the Baron did not want to carry it in his hand on the street, he put it under the high hat on his head. Forth he went on Broadway toward his boarding-house, with an air of perfect unconcern; suddenly the wind rose and knocked the hat off his head, simultaneously causing the meat to be dropped on the sidewalk, to the great amusement of a young lady who was passing by.

While he was yet a minor in the Department of Foreign Affairs, the Baron's salary was anything but enough to meet expenses. His father had contracted a debt amounting to several thousands of dollars through his business failure. This debt the Baron took upon himself to pay out of his scanty salary in monthly installments.

On every pay day the creditors of Kwampei Komura, who were many, came to his son's house and demanded payment. They would leave very little to the Baron each month, but the Baron made no protest and calmly met the situation.

RECIPE FOR A WORLD.

Take one man, a woman and a garden. Add an apple and a good fresh snake. Stir gently until the pot begins to boil, then drain off the apple and keep adding children. Simmer on a slow fire, then put on ice. Alternate between the two extremes, giving the whole a good, sound basting when needed, turning slowly in a proper space. Keep adding time until the mass is of the consistency of a mud pie covered with ants. Multiply the inhabitants and garnish with villages, towns, cities and empires. Now introduce a little theology and enough devil sauce to spice. Keep adding battle, murder, sudden death and a good layer of cant. Put plenty of salt in the water and sprinkle with bad society. When your world is finished throw it in the fire and begin all over again.—[Leesburg Buckeye.

Town of Lunatics.

MOST INTERESTING INSANE RESORT IN THE WORLD.

By a Special Contributor.

THERE is scarcely a corner in Europe into which the tourist, American, of course, has not penetrated. Belgium, a little country so full of busy people as to seem like one big city, has remained unvisited for a longer period than most other points of interest. It still retains many of its primitive traits, the people clad in their quaint costumes, the many fête days still observed, the sacred shrines of the virgins at the cross roads, all are unchanged from the old, old days.

Not many miles from historic old Antwerp, but in Belgium, is the little town of Gheel, with an occupation that distinguishes it from all other towns, for the people there give themselves almost exclusively to harboring the insane. Gheel is literally a town of lunatics; of insane people who live at peace with each other, who stroll about the streets, dine at the noonday hour together, and enjoy life as well, perhaps, as a great many towns whose citizens boast of being healthy in mind as well as body.

The township shelters about 1500 lunatics, taken as lodgers by the townsfolk, who cure many of the patients by gentleness and kindness. They take them as lodgers, charging a free of from $60 to $600 per annum, according to the degree of luxury the patient is given.

It was quite by accident we discovered this little town of Gheel. It was after we had passed Antwerp that the beautiful valley lay spread out before us. The evening sun brought out in brilliant detail the snow-tipped peaks; beyond the cottages and inns of the village, it lighted the white walls of a castle raised on a rocky crag above the mist of the lowland.

We met many children, as we approached the village, who were walking about, hand in hand with great, robust men, chattering in the grave way of older persons, and some of the boarder-patients were taking care of the baby of the household. They made excellent nurses. The people of Gheel understand the management of insane people better than any other known community or institution. Their skill would almost seem hereditary, for it is due to hundreds of years of experience handed down from father to son.

At the inn, where we paused to rest and refresh "the inner man," the landlord showed the greatest consideration to one of these patients who came there, humoring all his fancies and appearing to carry out his ideas. It was a curious spectacle and as strange as a fairy visit.

It has its amusing side and a pitiful one as well, but the tenderness, tact and politeness shown by the simple peasants, as well as the sense of freedom from all restraint, produce a perfect contentment, and, in many cases, a cure.

The patient is given the best chair, the choicest bits of food, and the most attention, so that he grows to value the esteem in which he is held, and strives to master his disease, lest he forfeit his privileges.

I have talked with many who expressed the greatest admiration for their hosts and have only words of praise for the town in which they live.

There is, in the town, a well-appointed asylum for dangerous cases, who are under the supervison of state doctors. The boarders are taken by duly licensed keepers and regularly visited by state doctors. Patients are there from all over the world, some coming from New York, and all doctors who have visited the institution are deeply impressed by the efficacy of the treatment, which is one of mere kindness and tact.

ALLIE ALGER.

PEERS AS ENGINEERS.

The Duke of Sutherland is perhaps the best locomotive engineer in the British peerage and could earn a living at the work did he so desire. A private railway thirty miles long connects Dunrobin Castle with the main line, and both the Duke and his wife are experts at handling the trains over this stretch of track.

The only other privately owned railway in Great Britain is a three-mile circular track in the grounds of Hillsborough Castle, one of the country seats of the Marquis of Downshire. Here an engine, declared to be one of the most perfect ever built in England, affords the Marquis diversion in plenty, and he is as capable a fireman as he is an engineer.

The Duke of Portland has not a private road, but he has to his credit several thousands of miles as engine driver of regular trains, the paid engine driver riding in the cab and enjoying his novel vacation.

Several other titled persons take an absorbing interest in machinery, and Viscount Cole, elder son of Lord Enniskillen, worked as stoker on board a battleship from Australia to Gibraltar.

The Duke of Connaught has had practical experience running a locomotive in Egypt, and not long ago the young Khedive of Egypt on a trip to England put in an entire morning firing on the locomotive, alighting at the end of the run as dirty and as greasy as the regular fireman whom he replaced, to the great horror of the Reception Committee.—[Chicago Chronicle.

Doubtless, as you suggest, the Navy Department acted with proper courtesy in postponing the final interment of Paul Jones out of deference to the presence of an English Prince on a British battleship. But have you noted the fact that the visiting battleship bears the identical name of the first British ship of war taken by Jones, and that the day now set for the interment of the great sailor is the anniversary of his capture of that other "Drake" in the Irish Sea?—[Letter to New York Times.

Unskilled Labor.

EDWARD MOFFETT, the labor editor who has gone with Chairman Shonts to Panama, was talking one day last month to a reporter.

"Good labor, skilled labor," he said, "will always command a high wage. It is in good, skilled labor's interest that I am going to Panama, equally to the canal commission and to the men I represent.

"The men I represent," said Mr. Moffett, "are skilled men. They are not like the young lady typewriter whom a Camden politicism hired.

"This politician was preparing to deliver a four-hour speech on municipal corruption or some such topic. He spent a week in getting his notes together and reading up articles. Then, one afternoon, he sat down with the young lady typewriter, and began to reel off the speech as he was to speak it at the meeting.

"She didn't take shorthand notes. She said she didn't need to. Instead, she took the speech direct on the machine. As soon as the politician would finish dictating she said, there would be the speech all typewritten before him, as neat as a newspaper page.

"So on and on he spoke, fingering his notes thoughtfully, and clackety—clack—clack went the typewriter, keeping up with him bravely.

"The sun rolled westward and sank, a red wafer amid golden flame, as this lengthy speech ended.

"Then the politician sighed with relief, got up, and lit a cigar. He was glad to be through.

"But the young lady typewriter said in a calm voice:

"'Would you mind repeating that speech over again? I forgot to put any paper in the machine.'"

In Fly Time.

CHARLES J. BONAPARTE, the new Secretary of the Navy, writes a neat and beautiful hand.

A reporter, on a hot afternoon not long since, complimented Mr. Bonaparte on his chirography, and to the compliment the secretary replied:

"At the seaside I once heard a little girl make a remark about her father's writing that would not have applied to mine.

"The little girl was reading with her mother in the hotel office. On the table before her was an ink bottle and some clean stationery, and as she read a fly got into the ink. The fly, after a hard struggle, emerged from its black bath, and in an exhausted and draggled condition it trailed itself slowly and with great difficulty across a sheet of snowy paper.

"The little girl, regarding the fly's track across the page, exclaimed:

"'Oh, mamma, look. Here is a fly that writes just like papa.'"

The Impolite Audience.

MISS ETHEL BARRYMORE, whose engagement to an English soldier-poet has been announced, will not, after her marriage, leave the stage.

"I shall never leave the stage," Miss Barrymore said to a Philadelphia woman the other day. "My audiences are so kind to me, I could not bear to desert them.

Then she smiled, and out of her store of anecdote she resumed:

"My audiences have never treated me as a western audience once treated a comedian, a distant cousin of mine.

"This comedian appeared in a four-act comedy in a western mining town. At the end of the third act the miners rose in a body, gathered up their belongings, and started to depart.

"The comedian, in dismay, rushed before the curtain.

"'Gentlemen,' he said, 'there is another act yet.'

"'Yes. That's why we're going,' said the miners."

The Wrong Door.

TIMOTHY THRIFT, the new president of the National Amateur Press Association, described on the night of his election by the Cleveland convention, an awkward predicament into which he had fallen at the beginning of his journalistic career.

"Yes; that contradiction," he ended, "made matters worse. I stood, when it appeared, in the position of the widower at the Philopatrian ball.

"This widower attended the Philopatrian ball with his sister, and in the second two-step he so exerted himself that a rip appeared in the shoulder of his coat. Accordingly, for repairs, he retired with his relation to one of the dressing-rooms.

"The lady secured from an attendant a needle and some thread; the widower took off his coat; the mending operation began.

"As the widower stood in his shirt sleeves and his sister plied her needle, voices suddenly were heard, and a group of gorgeous dames came down the corridor toward the dressing-room.

"'What shall I do?' said the widower. 'I don't want to be seen like this. Can't I hide somewhere?'

"'There's a door,' said his sister, pointing to the left. 'Go in there I'll call you when they leave.'

"So the widower in his shirt sleeves leaped on the door, tore it open, and popped in. It had a spring lock, and banged to with a click. But no sooner was this shirt-sleeved gentleman inside than he wanted to get out again.

"Bang! bang! bang! Rattlety-bang!

"'Let me out. Mary, do you hear. Confound it all, let me out.'

"The ladies who had entered the dressing-room looked amazed and mystified. The sister, greatly embarrassed, whispered to the widower through the door:

"'Oh, George, I can't leave you out yet. Don't make so much noise. The women are still here.'

"But George continued to bang and shout and protest worse than ever.

"'Hang the women,' he cried. 'I'm out here in the ballroom.'"

An Incident of the Road.

AN automobilist who was touring through the country saw, walking, ahead of him, a man followed by a dog. As the machine drew near them the dog started suddenly to cross the road; he was hit by the car and killed immediately. The motorist stopped his machine and approached the owner. "I'm very sorry, my man, that this has happened," he said. "Will $5 fix it?"

"Oh, yes," said the man; "$5 will fix it, I guess."

Pocketing the money as the car disappeared in the distance, he looked down at the dead animal.

"I wonder whose dog it was?" he said.—[Harper's Weekly.

An Appropriate Tune.

THE chaplain of one of His Majesty's ships was giving a magic lantern lecture, the subject of which was "Scenes from the Bible." He arranged with a sailor who possessed a gramophone to discourse appropriate music between the slides. The first picture shown was Adam and Eve in the Garden of Eden. The sailor cudgelled his brain but could think of nothing suitable. "Play up," whispered the chaplain. Suddenly a large idea struck the jolly tar and to the great consternation of the chaplain and the delight of the audience, the gramophone burst forth with the strains of "There's only one girl in the world for me."—[The Tatler.

Too Low.

ONE night recently a party of tourists at a hotel were telling stories of famous shots and how many ducks and other birds had been killed at a single discharge. After listening for some time to what seemed a wilfull exaggeration by different narrators, a man who was present, volunteered his first and only experience of the fatal double-barreled gun. He began: "I went into a field one day to try shootin'. The only game discovered was an immense flock of blackbirds. I should say there were 10,000 in the flock. Yes, quite 10,000. Slowly I crawled up to them and when not more than thirty yards away the birds rose in a solid mass. I fired both barrels, and how many do you think I killed?" Different guesses were made ranging from twenty to one hundred birds. "Not one," said the stranger, "but I went out with my brother to look for results and we picked up thirty bushels of legs. I had shot a little too low." That was the last story told that night.—[The Tatler.

Minerva's Wisdom.

THE following anecdote is being told of Miss Helen Gould: Miss Gould, who is noted for her wit, recently entertained at luncheon a party of little girls from some charitable institution. Afterward Miss Gould showed the children about her house, pointing out some of its interesting contents.

"This," she said, stopping before a bronze in the hall, "is a statue of Minerva."

"Was she married?" asked a little girl.

"Oh, no, my dear," replied Miss Gould; "you know Minerva was Goddess of Wisdom."—[Harper's Weekly.

A Timely Warning.

AT a certain high school in this city it is the custom to discuss briefly the morning's news before taking up the regular work of the day. In this connection an instructor in the school in question tells of a funny incident.

One day the teacher ascended to her desk, paper in hand. She spread the paper on the desk, and glanced at the headlines of the first page. "The first head that I observe this morning," said she, is, "'Pool Room Raided.'" She then raised her head, and with the utmost feeling in her voice said:

"Boys, never, never touch a cue!"—[Harper's Weekly.

Changed His Mind.

NEAR Charleston, S. C., some years ago, there lived an old negro who went by the name of Gumbo. Like most of his race in the South, he made a precarious living from day to day by doing odd jobs. But when the yellow fever ravaged that part of the country, he found his means of livelihood destroyed. Becoming discouraged, he made up his mind that the best thing for him to do was to die. He was unwilling to imperil his chances in the next world by taking his own life, so he resorted to prayer as a means of getting assistance.

He betook himself to what he thought was a secluded spot and prayed thus:

"Oh, Lordy, guess you all bettah tek ole Gumbo. He ain't good fo' nothin' no mo'e. He cain't get nothin' ter eat, an' he jes' reckons he better die ob de feber dan starbe ter death. You-all jes' [illegible] Gumbo, Lord."

BIRDS AT IDYLLWILD.

[illegible]CTS AND FANCIES ABOUT SURGERY AMONG BIRDS.

THE following letter to this page from Idyllwild has a touch of nature in it noticeable beneath or beyond the questions asked about the birds.

IDYLLWILD (Cal.) Sept. 1.—[My Dear Mrs. Grinnell:] Knowing that you love birds, no matter where they may be found, I wondered if you would not be interested in hearing about birds at Idyllwild.

We have been living in camp here among the great pines and have been almost as much out of doors as the birds themselves. Through the early part of August we were surprised to see many what we called "golden orioles," though we do not know very much about birds and this may not be their real name. They were certainly orioles, however, and grew so tame they would circle around timidly, then fly right down and take cake or other sweets from our hands. None of the birds seem afraid of human folks up here, and the bluejays are dreadfully tame and their color is very bright. The orioles all disappeared suddenly about the 20th of August and haven't been seen since. Does that mean anything? We surely did not frighten them away. The woodpeckers are so thick up here that many of the big pine trees are perforated with their "peckings" until they look like giant nutmeg graters. I wish you could come up here and tell us about the birds, for they do not seem like those at Altadena, but perhaps that is only because we have had more time here to notice their cunning ways. ELSIE KASSON.

Of all the reports I have received from many points in the mountains no place so charms me in anticipation as Idyllwild. I mean to go there and look up the birds as soon as possible. The "golden orioles" mentioned in this letter are no doubt tanagers, as our orioles do not frequent that zone. The tanagers are golden reds and yellows, and seen in a cool moist mountain forest must be like rays of valley sunshine. The tanagers nest the entire length of our mountain range. Had Miss Kasson looked for their nests she would have discovered them probably not far from camp, possibly right in it. They are flat, saucer-shaped structures, made of bark and grasses; lined with hairs probably from the very burros in camp. They are usually high on the limb of an evergreen. The eggs are three to five, bluish green, speckled with browns and purples. The fact that these birds ate cake and other sweets from the hands of Idyllwild folk proves what has been so often claimed, that nearly all animals are fond of sweet things by nature, if but opportunity be given. I marvel that the tanagers would come to one's hands for any sweet thing. Certainly Idyllwild must be an Eden. That the tanagers disappeared in August indicates that even when under the influence of such hospitable neighbors, they understood it to be their duty to migrate, and off they started for Mexico. They will return next summer.

Do Birds Understand Surgery?

A correspondent sends this clipping from a magazine and asks if it be true that birds are surgeons in the sense of professional skill guided by reason:

"Many birds, particularly those that are prey for sportsmen, possess the faculty of skillfully dressing wounds. Some will even set bones, taking their own feathers to form bandages. A French naturalist writes that on a number of occasions, he has killed woodcocks that were convalescing from wounds previously received. In every instance he found the old injury neatly dressed with down plucked from the feather stems and skillfully arranged over the wound, evidently by the long beak of the bird. In some instances, a solid plaster was formed and in others bandages had been applied to wounds or broken bones in the manner described. One day he killed a bird that had been wounded at some previous period. The wound was covered and protected by a sort of network of feathers which had been plucked by the bird from its own body and so arranged as to form a plaster completely covering and protecting the surface. The feathers were fairly netted together, passing alternately over and under each other and forming a textile fabric of great protective power."

This clipping is very suggestive and of course interesting, but unless the name of an authority is given, many will take the story with salt. I have asked taxidermists and bird collectors who have examined thousands of specimens, if they have ever observed a single instance of attempted surgery such as suggested, not only by the above clipping but by many writers who trust to what is told them without investigation. Each assures me that he has not. Healed wounds are observed and broken bones have united naturally, but there is no proof that birds themselves "carry their wings in a sling or sew up scalp wounds."

I have myself seen many wounded birds and always there are feathers sticking criss-cross over the wounds, and dried on in plaster form, which to the imagination might mean much. When a bird is wounded by shot more or less feathers are carried into the wound, and down is scattered in all directions. Broken bones will unite sometimes almost in correct apposition when the victim is in his native haunts and naturally kept quiet.

Information Asked for.

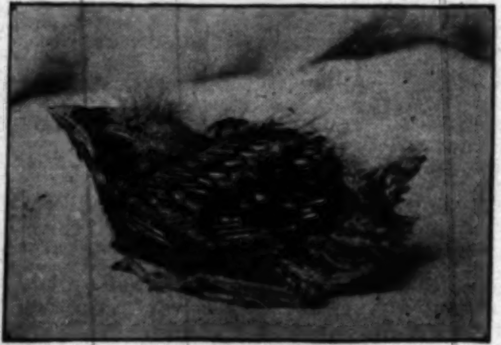
LOS ANGELES, Sept. 4.—[Editor Bird Page:] Your articles on birds are very much enjoyed by me and I venture to ask you what kind of a nestling I have found and am caring for. It is a soft-billed bird about three weeks old, I should think, brownish, white breast or gray-white, white tips to upper wing feathers, a ruff around the neck, white feathers over the eyes and extending from below the bill, meeting the ruff. Yellow in middle of head and slighfly yellowish feathers on breast. It has a tongue apparently hung in the middle, quite a heavy bill and not so long as a mocker's, nor is the bird [illegible] quite so large as a mocker. The legs and feet are small. I think the tail will be swallow shaped. I found it [illegible] in Monrovia unable to hop. I fed it beef, egg, [illegible] potato, gravel and a little fruit, though it does not care for the fruit. I am greatly interested in birds of all kinds and would much like to have you identify this. I have named it Adios, as it makes a noise that sounds like that. It is very healthy, but does not feed himself. Thanking you in advance, I am, MRS. P. J. WALLER.

I was not quick to identify this little stranger until I came to the name Mrs. Waller had given it, when I knew at once that it must be a young grosbeak. These birds do say "Adio" as plainly as anyone. They are among our most beautiful and familiar summer birds nesting anywhere, especially in our gardens, low as one can reach, especially near the fruit and berries. They eat "all sorts," and so Mrs. Waller guessed right and gave it whatever she herself ate excepting gravel. The question of gravel for birds should always be considered in the light of uses. Grit is teeth with which a bird chews its food. A bird fed on mashed potato or soft egg needs few teeth. But as soon as whole seeds are taken the teeth are in demand. A person need have no fear in feeding little birds on potato, egg, or milk, especially egg. Should it chance to be a nursling, the eggs are "close to nature."

How Soon to Look for the Sparrows.

EAGLE ROCK, Aug. 30.—[Editor Feather Kingdom:] How soon may we look for the white and yellow-crowns? I am anxious to see them again and to hear their happy songs. Every year the first I see of them is in the chicken yard when I go out to feed the fowls in the morning. There are the dear little sparrows with their yellow beaks and pretty striped heads just as much at home as when they went away last spring. Will they come soon? G. L.

We may look for them very soon now. First there will be one or two and then the whole large flocks. The birds with the brown stripes instead of white stripes on their heads are the juveniles, just able to come down from Alaska with their parents. They will evolve the white crowns later. I have never seen the yellow or golden crowns here in flocks, hardly more than just singles. Both white and yellow-crowns nest as far north as the Arctic Circle. A member of our family observed these birds at Cape Blossom from May to August, where they were much more shy than with us; possibly the perils of their long migration had frightened them. But the song was sweeter than ever we hear it, for it was love notes. These sparrows often cheer the hearts of the gold hunters of Alaska long before the ice-bound rivers give way to canoe and river steamer.



A YOUNG GROESBEAK.

Incubators in Schools.

Mrs. Negus of San Gabriel, called to say how much she approved of the suggestion of incubators in schools. She told me that she had been familiar with incubators both in Iowa and California, and knows of nothing so instructive and entertaining for children. She says she has an original tester for the eggs, which she has received no patent for and which our readers are free to use. It is simply a section of The Times cut to twelve inches and rolled into a cylinder, just the size of an egg. "Put an egg in at one end, hold that end against the sunshine or electric light and the other end next your eye and you can see what is going on behind the shell." She says she distinctly sees the head of the chick at term move in rhythm to the breathing. That the chick does breathe through the porous shell she is positive of since she often hears it peep before a crack is found in the shell. She thinks all these things would be more instructive to children than some things the knowledge of which they will have no use for when school is done. Several other people have spoken to me about the incubator for schools, and others still about the practical poultry plant for the older pupils.

Corn for Laying Hens.

I was visiting a little family poultry plant in the Highland Villa tract, yesterday, when my friend, Mrs. Pederson, said: "I give my hens corn and that's what makes them lay so well."

"Corn," I exclaimed, "corn in summertime! Why I wouldn't think they would lay eggs on corn. I like corn in winter to keep the fowls warm. I have not read of any poultry men feeding corn here."

"Well," she replied, pointing at a little flock of hens of several nationalities, "There are eight hens and I have been getting six and seven eggs every day for many weeks."

Here was positive proof. I am wondering if it is not a mistake, after all, our holding off on the corn because it is warm. I shall give it a test myself and see if I can get seven eggs from eight hens in moulting time. From the Farmer's Buletin No. 186, Washington, I find that corn stands first for hens in full work.

The Massachusetts Station decides in favor of corn for the laying hen as compared with buckwheat, as do also several other stations, though a mixture is recommended.

Is it Superstition?

I found a good many families in the suburbs of Los Angeles are favoring ducks for family use, eggs in winter and fowls for the table. "They eat up everything in sight," said one suburban farmer, but that is in their favor. "We like them."

When duck eggs are being discussed, I find a universal objection to their free use on the part of those who are not personally familiar with them. The complaint is, "Oh, duck eggs are too strong. Duck eggs are not intended to be eaten." Is this a superstition? I do not find a hint of the sort among those who actually keep ducks and eat the eggs. I cannot see an objection myself; really there is no difference to my taste, only the duck egg is large. The North Carolina Station, in connection with some of its recent poultry experiments, recorded the weight of eggs per dozen as well as the number of eggs produced by pullets and old hens of a number of well-known breeds, and by Pekin ducks during six months. Generally speaking, larger eggs were laid by hens than by pullets of the same breed. The eggs laid by the Pekin ducks, old and young, were heavier than those laid by any breed of hens.

Flavoring Eggs to Suit the Taste.

SANTA BARBARA, Aug. 25.—[Editor Bird Page:] Is it true that eggs have a distinctive flavor corresponding with their environments or with the food of the producer? Please let me hear through the columns of The Times. W. M.

I believe it to be true that eggs washed, if necessary, and placed in a basket of flowers or herbs will extract a flavor corresponding with their environments. It has been proved that eggs left in dirty nests or in the litter of the barnyard do suffer loss of toothsome flavor. As to the food of the producer affecting the flavor I quote from a Washington experiment station bulletin. Housewives who use many eggs, and all who habitually eat them, boiled, know that there is much difference in the flavor of even those which are undeniably fresh. There is very general belief that the flavor is influenced by the feed which the hens receive and that materials possessing strong flavors like onions and turnips, impart an injurious flavor. Chopped wild onion tops and bulbs were fed to hens at the North Carolina Station, and the length of time before there was a change in the flavor of the eggs was noted, as well as the length of time which must elapse after onion feeding was discontinued before the objectionable flavor would disappear. At the beginning of the trial a half ounce of the onion was fed to each fowl daily to twelve hens of different breeds. Repeated tests did not show any onion flavor until the fifteenth day, when it was marked. The amount of onion fed was doubled for four days, and then discontinued. The eggs laid while the larger amount of onion was fed were so strongly flavored that they could not be used. After discontinuing the onions the flavor decreased until at the end of a week it had disappeared. The main point brought out by the test was that flavor can be fed into eggs.

Feeding Mouldy Grain.

Now and then a lot of grain has been wet or otherwise injured and the owners advertise it for sale cheap. Such grain is not suitable for fowls. Mouldy corn has been known to cause fatal diseases among fowls. To keep them in good health and spirits our fowls should be fed only such food as we ourselves would be willing to eat were we good, clean, healthy fowls, with our present idea of sanitary diet.

ONEIDA'S SACRED STONE.

Just within the gates of Forest Hill Cemetery at Utica, N. Y., the visitor sees a curious oval stone resting upon a grass plot. A century ago Oneida county was the reservation of the powerful tribe of Oneida Indians, the second nation in the confederation of the Iroquois.

The first settlement of the Oneidas, so their history runs, was near the lake which bears their name, a century before Columbus steered his ships into western seas. It was there that they found the stone and adopted it as their sacrificial altar. "Onia" is the dialect word for stone and from it comes "Oneida," the tribal name, "children of the stone."

As the tribe increased in numbers, veneration of the monolith grew until it became the indispensable shrine of the Oneidas. When the nation removed from the region of the lake to their encampment, where now is the town of Stockbridge, the rock, according to their legend, went before them without the assistance of human hands, and deposited itself in the center of a butternut grove overlooking a wide and fertile valley. In this wood it remained until the influx of the white settlers and the march of civilization dispersed the tribe. In 1849, when the Forest Hill Cemetery at Utica was laid out, the trustees learned that James Gregg, of Stockbridge, on whose farm the stone rested, was desirous that it should be removed to some public inclosure. Its removal was thereupon secured.—[New York Sun.

HOW AN ELOPEMENT BECAME AN AFTEROON TEA.

"TOMORROW, then?".

"Yes, I'll catch the 10:50 at Waterloo. Don't miss it."

She laughed. He looked at her curiously under the dim lights of the conservatory. He could not have laughed to save his life. He wondered that she could.

"No. I'll be there. Is that someone coming?"

"I don't think so. . . . You'll be very good to me, Tom?"

"Good to you!" The boy was almost choking. "Do you think I could ever be anything else, Evelyn?"

She laughed again; a light, indifferent laugh that rang musically in the silence. He did not notice its indifference.

"You're a dear boy. But it's dreadfully serious, isn't it? There's no going back afterwards. I'm leaving everything for you, Tom."

"Yes, dear. I can't thank you—now. I'm not good at saying things, don't you know. But I'll never forget it. I know I can never make it up to you, but——"

"I must go now, or someone will be starting out to find me. Waterloo—10:50. Good-night, Tom!"

He took her in his arms and kissed her passionately. She made a little resentful movement as he released her, like the fluttering of a ruffled dove. Then she gave a final glance at his white face and smiled—the small society smile which showed just the becoming gleam of her pretty teeth, and no more. There are so few people in the world who have mastered the art of an artistic smile.

Then she left him, and floated away under the subdued radiance of the lamps with a whisper of shaken silks. The boy she had left stood motionless for a second with his eyes fixed upon the point at which she disappeared. His face was very grave, and there was a great light in the eyes that followed her departure.

So it was over at last. She was coming. She was ready to give up everything for him, as she had said—her husband, her family, her friends. Was there anyone else in the world who would have done such a thing for him? His eyes were very grave, almost sad. He could not thank her; he was not good at saying things. But he would never forget it—never. He had managed to say that, and he meant it, from the bottom of his heart.

He let himself into his rooms. The gorgeousness of the apartment was not of his own choosing. He remembered, as he looked round it, how she had chosen this, and suggested the other, and declared, in her charmingly autocratic manner, that it was quite imperative he should have that. So he had it—because she said so, not because he cared about it for himself. He was a young man of few and simple tastes, upon whom the millions which he had inherited seemed rather thrown away. He did not care about odd Eastern wares with unpronounceable names. He was not interested in ancient Persian rugs. The things he cared best for were simple, wholesome things—horses, and dogs, and guns, and the blue, breezy sea breaking into white foam over the bows of his yacht. But better than all these things, he loved pretty Lady Papillon, with her whims and caprices, and fleeting art enthusiasms. Therefore he had cultivated a superficial acquaintance with these strange subjects that interested her. He grew to be an authority upon the genuineness of hideous china cats. He became an adept in shades, and a person whose word was final upon the all-important question of contrasts. Evelyn Papillon told her friends that he was a dear boy, and so useful, and the friends smiled, having ideas of their own as to his usefulness. But they were always particularly civil to Tom Hetherington, for he really was a dear boy, and, besides, he had such a lot of money.

So Tom Hetherington talked art jargons, medieval painters and endured Wagner trilogies with a secret consciousness of heroism which deserved a better cause. He was very useful, as Lady Papillon said. A man with several millions of money generally is. Tom Hetherington appraised their value chiefly at the rate at which they provided entertainment for Evelyn Papillon, who found that view of the matter entirely to her taste. All things considered, she made a very good profit on the devotion of Tom Hetherington.

But now it was over. Now he was free, because he was to take her out of it into the life that he wished to live, and which he had given up for so long for her sake.

He realized suddenly how he had hated it all—this life of pretense, of poses, of words that meant nothing, and actions which meant, if possible, less. He would never come back to it again—never.

. . . .

Tom Hetherington, whirling toward Waterloo, saw only a prospect of blue skies and sparkling seas. He put up the collar of his coat as he jumped out upon the curb stone, but that was merely a matter of caution, and because he did not want to be recognized. He was quite unconscious of the weather. If anyone had asked him, he would have said it was a beautiful day.

It was 10:35 when he reached the station, and the Southampton train was waiting. There was still nearly a quarter of an hour to wait, and he knew Evelyn Papillon well enough to know that she certainly would not arrive before her time.

Suddenly he slipped behind a truck full of luggage. Two men whom he knew had come upon the platform. They were quite certain to settle on him like flies if they saw him. When the platform filled up he would be able to get away unnoticed.

The two men sauntered slowly down the platform until they reached the truck. There, by the usual piece of ill-luck, they decided to stand. They were in very close and earnest conversation, and Tom could have slipped away, but a name arrested his attention. He hesitated.

"It's a tremendous piece of luck for Papillon," the first man said. "Who'd have thought he'd a chance of succeeding with a boy like that? Strong as a house, poor little chap."

"How did it happen?"

"He was climbing a tree—the Duke, I mean—and the bough gave way. He was dead when they picked him up. Deuced hard luck, too."

"Yes—infernal hard."

"Well—it's good for Papillon, I suppose?"

"Yes—and for his wife. Let's hope she'll learn wisdom—and be careful of the Tame Cat."

"The Tame Cat? Oh—Hetherington! He's safe enough."

"I don't know. She's been going the pace no end with him lately. I've thought that we should wake up one of these days to find that she had made tracks with him."

"Well, she won't do that now. She'll be Duchess of Flamborough. There's no Tame Cat in the world that will make her give up that."

"No—she told me she'd give up anything to be a duchess—it was such a pretty, picturesque kind of title."

"She always did know which side her bread was buttered."

"Rather!" The other man laughed with a kind of contemptuous admiration. "Trust her for that!"

"When a man's a fool he can't see through a woman like Evelyn Papillon. I think I'll get in now. Don't trouble to wait, old man. Ta-ta!"

"Have a good time. Ta-ta!"

They went their several ways and Tom Hetherington was left alone. A stray quotation sang tauntingly in his ear:

"The harmless, necessary cat."

Where in the world was Evelyn? He looked at his watch—10:49. One minute more and she would miss the train. There was a shriek, a puff of white smoke, and the long serpentine thing moved slowly out of the station. She had missed it.

It was provoking, but there was another soon. He walked up and down, waiting. The next train went out. He hailed a hansom, and went back to his rooms.

. . . .

A small, pink note, with an elaborate "E" on the seal, awaited him. Hetherington's heart sank. He tore the pink paper roughly with fingers that shook. There were only half-a-dozen lines written within, and he read them twice over before he moved. Then he threw it on the nearest table and sat down.

She had thrown him over—at the last moment. Who would have believed such a thing possible? She had changed her mind. He needn't think it was because she didn't love him, but when it came to the point she couldn't do it. Would he forgive her? She hoped they would always be friends. She hoped—underlined heavily this time—that he would really forgive her, for she was very miserable. And she remained his—was it sincerely or affectionately?

She couldn't do it—no. She was Duchess of Flamborough. She wanted "the harmless, necessary cat" with his millions, though she did not want Tom Hetherington.

He laughed savagely. In that little quarter of an hour his face had changed oddly. It was drawn and haggard, and there was an unpleasant light in his eyes.

He began to walk up and down the room. There was a photograph on the mantelpiece—a photograph of Evelyn Papillon, in a filmy white dress, with a smile on her pretty face.

"The new Duchess of Flamborough," he said to himself.

He put down the smiling photograph.

"Damn her!" he said through his teeth. "She shall come, though. I have not played the Tame Cat, as they call it, for nothing."

An hour later she was pouring out his tea, and asking how many lumps of sugar she should put in. She had denied herself to the world at large on account of the sad event, etc., etc. She had forgiven him—or he had forgiven her. Which was it?

She was far too excited to conceal her feelings. It was dreadfully sad—poor, dear little Anthony. . . . She had been crying all the morning—didn't he see how red her eyes were? . . . What a nuisance to have to go into mourning just at the beginning of the season! It was an awfully transparent pose, of course, but then her complexion could stand anything. . . . Had he ever seen the famous Flamborough diamonds? The old duchess never wore them. They would be perfectly lovely when they were reset.

So she chattered, rattling the teacups. She had quite forgotten her appointment of the morning. She was voluble, charming, heartlessly elated, and childishly hypocritical.

But a devil—of patience—possessed the soul of the Tame Cat.

Old World royalty agrees with President Roosevelt that a falling birth rate constitutes a sign of national decadence, and the Princess of Wales has lately given a manifestation thereof by publicly expressing her approval of the steps taken by the Mayor of the important manufacturing town of Huddersfield, who has promised a bonus of $5 for each baby born during his term of office, and has induced the corporation to inaugurate a scheme of municipal baby inspection and instruction for mothers. It is said that the action of the Mayor has already led to a rapid increase in the birth rate of Huddersfield, King Edward, like the late Queen Victoria, makes a point of presenting $15 to the parents in each case of the birth of triplets brought to his notice, and Emperor William has adopted a similar course when the triplets happen to be boys, on the ground that it means so many more soldiers for his army.—[Washington Post.

The Rest Cure.

HOW BELINDA BAXTER FOUND IT NEAR AT HAND.

By a Special Contributor.

WELL, well, Margaret, I'm awful glad to see you, an' no mistake. Come right up on the stoop an' set down. There, take that willow rocker. It's a new one I just bought down to the furniture store. Yes, I do think it's pretty an' comfortable lookin', but somehow I like this old squeaky Boston rocker the best.

Set right down an' make yourself to home. Here's a pa'm-leaf fan. Yes, I'm a-piecin' patchwork. Now that I've got so much spare time, I thought 'twould be nice to work up all the pieces I've been collectin' for thirty years. You didn't know I was takin' it easy? Well, well, I s'posed everybody in the hull valley was talkin' about me by this time!

Well, I'll tell you. You know, of course, Abner passed away just a year ago. Let me see, wasn't you to the funeral? No? Well, of course you know about it.

All my life I'd worked, an' skimped, an' pinched, an' saved, an' turned, an' twisted, an' made over, an' made over, an' pieced down, an' everything a woman could do to get along. Your ma could tell you how I was left at thirteen to bring up our family, an how, pa not bein' a very good pervider, I had to manage every which way to run the house an' bring up the children.

So when Abner Baxter begun to look my way at meetin', an' finally asked me to marry him, I felt competent to take hold an' manage this big house an' raise his four children, him bein' a widower.

But landy sakes, child, I didn't start right! You'll learn sometime that there's everything in the way you start out managin' a man. If I'd expected more I'd have got more, for Abner wasn't a real close man when I married him. But I'd been so used to pinchin' an' savin' an' managin' that it was like second nature to me an' I kep' right on.

Well, men folks ain't apt to notice what their wives need in the way of clothes, an' so, just because I never asked for a silk dress, I never got one, an' I only had a new bunnit once in six or seven years. I used to get a black straw shape, an' in summer I'd trim it with flowers an' ribbin, an' in winter I'd take them off an' put velvet on it. That was jest the way I got along, an' Abner was proud of my faculty. He said he never did see as good a manager as I was, an' I know I done my duty by his four children. We never had any of our own—mercy knows where the time would have come from to take care of 'em, for I worked every day an' all day, from sun-up till bed time, as hard as ever a woman could.

Well, you know how the children turned out—all married an' done well—an' jest a few years after the last one was gone, Abner was taken away. The dress I wore to the funeral was the only good black dress I had had for twenty-five years, an' it had been turned an' made over till I was sick of the sight of it. But I had always said it would do. It was clean an' whole, an' that was enough—no use spendin' good money on clothes I didn't need!

Well, after Abner had been gone a few months I broke down an' had to send for old Dr. Phillpotts over to Bristol. When he come an' looked me over an' asked some questions, he scowled at me over the tops of his specs, an' says he, as gruff as you can imagine: "Worked to death—played out—broke down—nervous wreck, an' if you don't git complete rest you'll lay alongside of Abner in less than three months, Nature ain't goin' to stand everything." He says: "Pack your trunk an go away to some nice quiet place an rest. Don't do a thing in the world—not a single thing! Don't even think of a thing. Perfect, complete rest," says he, "that's the only complete cure."

"But," says I, "it'll cost a lot, an' I don't know as I'd ought to. Why I haven't spent $5 jest for my own pleasure in all the time I've been married to Abner!"

Well, you ought to have seen him! Up he got an' stomped around the room. "Money!" he hollered, "What's money for, I'd like to know, if not to use? Money! what you savin' it for? So other people can fight an' quarrel over it, when you're gone? What's money for, I'd like to know! Belindy Baxter," says he, "don't be a downright idot! Use your money—you've got enough an' more than enough—take it an' spend it an' enjoy life the rest of your days. You've worked hard enough an' long enough to deserve a good rest now, an' you go ahead an' take it. Leave off that abominable mournin," says he, "it's enough to make a well person sick jest to wear it an' see it all the time. Get you some white dresses an' ribbins an' fixin's, an' get you a hat, not a bunnit! An' go off to some good hotel or quiet boardin' place in the mountains an' stay there!"

I was about scared out of my wits to hear him go on that way, but I says: "But, doctor, what's the use of goin' away from home? All these years—all my life—I've wished I could take the time to set on the front stoop an' look at the mountains across the valley, an' enjoy the sunset, an' watch the birds a-buildin' in the maples, an' I hain't had time, no I hain't. I've drove myself to work an' save as bad as any poor slave was ever drove. I thought it was my duty."

"Well," the doctor, he says, "would you rest if you stayed to home? Will you get a good stout woman to keep house an' do everything, an' a man to tend to the farm, an' will you jest let yourself be lazy for at least a year? I mean jest lazy. Go visitin' if you want to, have comp'ny, piece patchwork an' crazy quilts, sleep daytimes in a hammock out under them maples, get you some new light clothes, read some, do jest what you want to an' never touch the dishpan or go near the cook stove? No, don't even make your bed! Live out doors all the time, raise posies, an' fool with fancy chickens, if you want to. An' never think of the money it's costin'. Will you do all this?" says he. "If you will, you'll get well, if you won't you'll lay beside Abner inside of three months, So take your choice."

Well, I took my choice, I done everything he said. I've got Abigail Taylor keepin' house, an' she's a master hand at goin' ahead without bein' told. I don't have a word to say about the meals. She gets what she wants to, an' she's a splendid cook. I set out here an' rock, an' piece, an' read the papers, an' have comp'ny, an' go visitin' an' take naps in the daytime. An' I've gained nine pounds in two months. I've give away all my clothes an' bought everything brand new. I remember once when I was a girl I went visitin' to one of ma's old friends who had married rich, an' I slept in a beautiful room all furnished in Brussels carpet an' marble-topped, walnut furniture, an' everything was perfectly beautiful. In the mornin' there lay a wrapper across the foot of the bed for me to put on, an' I'll never forget it—never! It was nothin' but white lawn with little blue figures in it, an' tied with blue ribbins, but it had a train to it, an' when I'd put it on an' looked in the long glass, I could have cried for joy. I felt like a queen. I never forgot that, an' to this day I can feel the thrill of wearin' that lawn wrapper with a train to it.

So I says to myself, I'll have some jest like that. I'll have blue an' white dimity, an' pink an' white, an' plain white, an' have a little train to all of 'em. An' I got me some white shirt waists, An', dearie, you can't guess how much younger I do feel! And rested! And I declare to you that I'll never wash another mess of dishes or bend over a washboard again in my life! There's money enough, an' I'm goin' to enjoy it at last. They do say there's been some talk about my layin' off mournin' so soon, but I don't care a mite. I can think of Abner jest as lovingly in a white dress as I could in a black, an' if he's a-wearin' a white robe up in heaven, why can't I wear one down here?

Yes, it's a great change from the years that's gone before, but I believe it's what the Lord likes to have me do, for He wants us to be happy, an' I am. Folks can say I'm giddy an' frivolous, an' tryin' to appear young, an' all that—but I don't care.

Jest look at that pink light on the mountain over yonder! It's from the sunset, but to me it seems like the smile of God. An' look through them trees at the river slippin' an' slidin' along like a ribbin of pure silver! Ain't it all beautiful? An' to think of all the years I might have enjoyed it if I hadn't made myself work an' drudge an' save, jest to accumulate an' lay up money! It makes me ashamed!

Well, there comes Abigail, Yes, Abigail, we're comin' right in. Margaret's goin' to stay to supper. Oh, there ain't no way out of it, my dear. Abigail's fritters an' maple syrup are splendid, an' I smelt bacon an' eggs fryin' a spell ago. Come right an' set down to the table—everything's all ready.

LEOLINA.

Angels kissed her, and the sunbeams,
  Bright, caressed her;
Dimpled, dainty Leolina,
  In our care they left her.

With the light of heaven beaming
  From her eyes of blue;
With the cooing, dove-like murmur,
  Of her life so new.

Song birds, on the air of morning,
  Loving notes addressed her;
And radiant Leolina smiled,
  And God, He blessed her.

Flowers, in fragrant censers, swing,
  Their incense on the air.
And opening petals homage paid
  At shrine of Leolina, fair.

Twinkling stars at night, like diamonds,
  Brightly shone above her;
Keeping guard o'er Leolina,
  Just because they loved her.

Moonbeams streamed like silver ringlets
  O'er her sleep, benignly;
And white wings came at God's command,
  To do His will divinely.

Angels kissed her, and the sunbeams,
  Bright caressed her;
Dimpled, dainty Leolina,
  Tender life had left her.
Snowy pinions upward soaring,
  With her spirit like a star,
Bore our darling Leolina,
  Back to Heaven afar.

THE SKIPPER.

The boat drifted on the clear lake. The man and the maid were silent and a little sad. Already the leaves were turning. Summer was drawing to a close.

"Dear," he breathed softly; "dear?"

She looked up, and blushed.

"Dear," he said, "will you float with me always—down the stream of life?"

"The same as now?" she whispered.

"The same as now," said he.

"I will, gladly," cried the young girl.

He, you see, was rowing, doing all the hard work. She had the helm. She steered.

Medical Legislation—XXXI—Bacteriology.

IN a paper read before the Sunset Club of Los Angeles, last spring, and subsequently published in pamphlet form, the editor quoted as follows, from a book entitled "Physician vs. Bacteriologist," by Prof. Dr. O. Rosenbach of Berlin:

"The history of medicine teaches us that any and every method of treatment has always been followed by a method based on exactly opposite principles; and it further demonstrates that all these differences have been upheld by fanatic adherents with the same fervor, under cover of equally good statistics, so that as a matter of fact, every form of treatment, at least in the opinion of its chief supporters may justly claim identical value as to efficacy and healing virtues."

The book referred to is an epoch-making volume and has caused something like a sensation throughout the medical world, as Dr. Rosenbach is a physician of international reputation, whose views cannot be lightly brushed aside by the medical fraternity, as are those of a "layman."

Dr. Rosenbach aims to show what many intelligent laymen have for some time past maintained, that a majority of the medical fraternity are becoming "bughouse," to use a slang phrase, in attributing every ailment to the presence of some special microbe, and in attempting to treat patients, not after a careful study of their individual cases, at the bedside, but by study of cultures in a laboratory, the effect of which, as Dr. Rosenbach conclusively shows, may be, and usually is, entirely different from that produced under other conditions in the human body.

On the title page of the book the author quotes the following passage from Goethe: "The truth should be constantly repeated, because error all around us is preached again, and again, and not only by the individual, but by the masses. In newspapers and encyclopedias, in schools and universities, everywhere error has the upper hand, and it feels happy and comfortable in knowing that the majority is ranged on its side."

In regard to the exaggerated use of antiseptics, the author says: "The conclusion has been arrived at that many cases of death and complications in confiñements and in surgical operations are not due to the actions of nature, of the fight of carriers of infection with the body, but to the deleterious by-effects of antiseptics. The time is not far off when antiseptics will, in most cases, be used only for disinfecting the external skin and instruments. Water and soap will be reinstated in their place of honor as cleansing material."

The author devotes a chapter to show that experiments with animals are to a great extent useless, so far as human beings are concerned. And this, after the awful amount of hideous suffering that has been inflicted upon innocent animals, in medical laboratories, and is still going forward. He says:

"All laboratory methods, by whatever name they may be called, are only makeshifts, because they artifically imitate disease; they are able to touch upon only the extraneous aspect of matters."

Here are some sensible remarks:

"We would never be able to exterminate malaria by administering quinine to every patient while permitting the stagnant pools to exist. The search for specific remedies, therefore, is not the prime end to be attained; it is but a limited one. It protects the individual, but not the species, whereas hygienic precautions, if properly handled, not only deliver the external media in which we live of our enemies, but also improve our mode of living, and so go to the root of the evil and protect one species by destroying another. . . ."

"This truth is exemplified by the relatively small prophylactic and curative utility of quinine in malarial districts (small in proportion to the action of this drug in our latitudes,) some observers even warning against the prophylactic employment of quinine, as the attacks are only postponed but not prevented, and they occur later on with renewed vigor. A specific remedy against all individual cases of a certain disease does not exist in any instance. . . ."

"Experiment and the predominating study of test-tube cultures have served to obscure the true state of affairs, since they tend, most unjustifiably, to minimize the individual predisposition of the infected person, and to overestimate the ability of the microbes to infect in every instance. It is true, in producing experimental infectious disease in which the micro-organisms from cultures are introduced in great numbers and directly into the circulation, the effect of the microbes alone is in evidence, but it is manifest against an almost defenseles enemy.

"Therefore, the results of culture experiments upon artificial soils must not be generalized and utilized for inferences upon the conditions of the living organism, since the living tissue is capable of leading to the fight independent means of defense, trained and tried in the struggle for existence."

The author wisely says that prevention of diseases should be the principal aim of physician and nurse. This is something that is far too frequently overlooked by the average physician. As the editor has said, they are content to be cobblers of old shoes, instead of being first-class shoemakers.

Here is a statement that should be considered by those who are scared at the very mention of a microbe.

"There are many reasons for assuming that the germs which are present in the digestive canal contribute materially to the splitting up of the food material ingested, which is essential to a productive process of digestion, and in this manner play an important part in the course of this process, especially in individuals with enfeebled digestion."

The author devotes two long chapters to a review of Prof. Koch's theories, that created such a sensation a few years ago. He criticizes them severely, showing once more that demonstration in the laboratory in the trial animal, and demonstration at the bedside are altogether different. He declares that no proof has hitherto been furnished that tuberculin exerts a specific effect upon tuberculosis. The preparation creates a fever, owing to its immense irritating and pus-producing effects in larger doses. In other words, the author might have said that the symptoms of tuberculosis are simply the effort of nature to throw a morbid matter—a poison—out of the system.

Referring to physicians who are so ready to rush off after some new and wonderful remedy, so called, Dr. Rosenbach says:

"He must not, like an enthusiast of fashion, be ready, in the presence of new views, even if they confront him in the lime-light of experimental facts, at once to discard the familiar standard of old and tried knowledge."

Dr. Rosenbach asserts that many deaths have been due to Koch's treatment, while undoubtedly thousands of unfortunates, buoyed up by false hopes, have refrained from taking proper hygienic measures until it was too late.

In regard to the true physician the author says:

"Not he is a scientific physician who early appropriates the precipitate of new formulas and ideas, and who, as it were, mechanically applies with uniform lack of criticism everything that is new, simply because it is new and modern, but only he is entitled to lay claim to the designation of scientific physician who thinks and investigates independently, who, by long-lasting and careful observation of the vital conditions of the body in health and in disease, has also acquired the faculty of measuring new theories with true, lasting, objective standards, and of not mistaking the external appearance of objects for their true nature."

Here is another extract, showing the vast difference betwen laboratory experiments and the treatment of sickness in human subjects.

"The experimenter in the domain of infectious diseases, cuts, as it were, the Gordian knot in his experiments, in which from the very onset the effect of individuality is eliminated, in that he poisons all animals in the same manner with large quantities of the same irritant (microbes, toxins, etc.,) but he does not cause them to fall sick, thus creating very simple conditions, which, however, are not natural and entirely different from those that are in reality observed by the physician."

A number of pages are devoted to a discussion of the comma bacillus and cholera, and the attitude of the medical profession toward these diseases, which, in common with other so-called diseases, Dr. Rosenbach does not regard as infectious. Further reference to this section of the book will be made next week in this department.

The author declares that the presence of tuberculosis cannot be decided merely from an examination of the sputum, but only from the results furnished by a careful examination of the whole diseased organism. He declares the comma bacillus to be surely an accident, not an essential cause, in a logical sense. In the same manner, a noted English physician has declared that micro organisms are the result, not the cause of disease. He shows how medical opinions in regard to this comma bacillus have almost entirely changed during the past decade. Here is a shot at the laboratory practice:

"What opinion is the layman to form of the position of the physician, and of the importance of the examination of the patient, and of the diagnosis, if possibly three to four days may pass before the decision is received from the laboratory whether the patient has succumbed "only" to cholera nostras or—a horrible death—to Asiatic cholera? Must not doubts be aroused whether, in view of the much-emphasized difference between both diseases, the physician in charge, who for so long remains in complete ignorance with reference to the nature of the pathological process, might not likewise have made a mistake in treatment?"

The author deplores the craze that constantly places a greater number of forms of maladies in the category of infectious diseases, and thinks that it is doing great harm to the medical profession as well as to the public.

Dr. Rosenbach shows that in tuberculosis, enteric fever and other diseases, the number of so-called specific bacteria is often in no proportion whatever to the form and severity of the affection, while, on the other hand, they frequently abound in very mild cases. He characterizes the bacillus theory as a deplorable mental epidemic.

It is impossible, within the limits of a brief article like this, to adequately do justice to a book of this size and importance. Further refeφence to the contents must therefore be brief and condensed.

Taking sea-sickness as an object lesson, Dr. Rosenbach declares it is just as absurd to expect to make one person immune from a disease by injecting matter from another living organism, as it would be to inject serum from a person immune from

Is it not more probable that in the laboratory any kind of food may, under suit- conditions, be transformed into uric acid, if the elements necessary are present?

I notice that you ocasionally assert that a well person may without injury, sit, or go in wet clothes until they are dry. It may be persons of a very robust constitution may do without noticing any serious effects; but sure that there may not be some serious, though remote, consequences? Many cab drivers in climates are troubled, in later life, with rheuma- the shoulders and back; and many who have exposed to cold and dampness in the lower limbs afflicted. A cool, dry climate, as a change from a warm, will often speedily effect a cure where the have not suffered serious injury from the con- effect of the uric acid or 'other poison. Even there is distortion in the joints, benefit will be from such a climate. Would it not be wise accentuate the influence of climate as well as treating of rheumatism. Spider Bites.

A COVINA corespondent says the following is a cure for the bites of spiders:

"Take lump blueing, powder the same and apply to the bite. It will draw out all the poison."

This is certainly simple. So, also is the receipt for a cure for snake bite, recently published in this department, namely, to saturate a cloth with chloroform, and apply it two or three times. It would probably answer in the case of spider bites also.

Any comment upon this would be altogether superfluous.

Fruit Fasts.

THIS is an excellent idea, occasionally, in hot weather. It is much easier than going entirely without food, and at the same time the soft water and the acid of the fruit aid to eliminate impurities from the system and to cool the blood.

Unfortunately, in this land of fruits and flowers, city people often find it difficult to secure an abundant supply, at a reasonable price, where they have anything of a family. As previously suggested, in this section, where so much fruit goes to waste every year, why would it not be a good idea for some horticulturists, who have orchards of mixed fruits to arrange plain accommodations, and invite people to come and help themselves to fruit, when it is ripe, for a stated price per week? In this way, they would save the cost of picking, packing and shipping, while their customers would obtain fruit at a much less price than they can get it elsewhere.

Prof. E. B. Warman writes that he recently undertook a fruit fast of a week. He says:

"I ate but one kind at a meal. This, however, is not necessary, but if more than one kind is eaten they should belong to the same class. It is not wise to mix the acids and the non-acids. No sugar should be taken with the fruit and, of course, no milk. The sugar neutralizes the effect of the acid fruit and thereby defeats the very end desired."

Prof. Warman says his weight dropped from 186½ to 178 during the week. The editor must again express the opinion—Brother Warman to the contrary notwithstanding—that the loss of so much weight in a week, while eating liberally of fresh fruit, tends to show that his normal weight is somewhat greater than it should be. In warm weather, when there is little loss to the body from heat, an ample diet of fresh fruit should be almost sufficient to keep the weight of the body from falling off.

Many people would find themselves greatly benefitted if they would undertake such a "fast" as this, say for a week at a time, in the spring, in midsummer and in the fall.

Prickly Heat.

A CORRESPONDENT who has been out on the desert inquires about prickly heat. The chief cause of prickly heat is the eating of heating foods, and too much foods, in hot weather, which, as previously remarked, is about as sensible as would be the lighting of a fire in the parlor on a hot July day. In such sections as the southwestern desert, the summer diet should consist chiefly of foods and salads, avoiding sweets, starches and fats, and eating very little, if any, meat.

To relieve the itching from prickly heat, washing with soda and water is a valuable assistance.

Climate for Asthmatics.

A CORRESPONDENT, referring to an inquiry, praises the foothills north of Ontario as excellent for asthmatics. As the editor has said, no particular section of the Sierra Madre foothills has any monopoly of climatic attractions. At a similar elevation above the sea, they are all about equal, from Altadena to Ontario, or beyond.

On the other hand, as previously mentioned, there are some people—notably a well-known pioneer of Los Angeles—who can only find relief from asthma when they go to a moist, foggy climate, like that of San Francisco. Consequently, it is entirely misleading and foolish to generalize in this, or in any other ailment. Each individual case presents peculiarities, and must be judged separately.

Finally, remember this. A change of climate will be of little benefit to asthmatics or consumptives, or others, so long as they maintain wrong habits of living, especially of diet. That is why so many people fail to receive benefits from visits to health resorts.

The King's Cure.

FOLLOWING is an extract from a letter from Marienbad, in Germany, where the King of England makes a "cure" every year, in order to reduce his superfluous weight:

"The cure itself begins on the following day and is continued for three weeks. The King rises at 6 a.m. and a glass of water taken from the famous Kreuzbrunnen well is brought to him by his valet while he is dressing. The King then proceeds to the public promenade and drinks a second glass of Kreuzbrennen water between 6:30 and 7.

"The promenade is crowded with visitors of all countries who gather around the monarch and stare at him with extraordinary persistency. The rules of the cure require every patient to walk hard for two hours before breakfast, so the King paces up and down the promenade until his set time has elapsed. After consuming the plainest of breakfasts he is obliged to walk hard all the morning, ascending as many hills as possible. Afternoon and evening are also devoted to systematic exercises and a plain diet is strictly enforced from beginning to end of the cure."

Some people might be inclined to suggest that similar beneficial results might be achieved under such treatment, drinking common soft water in London, Sandringham, Balmoral, or "any other old place."

Ozone.

ANOTHER medical fad is endangered. A German profesosr declares that ozone belongs to the poisonous gases, and that while breathing the gas at first produces a feeling of exhilaration, it afterward has a depressing effect on the nervous system.

Just like any other stimulant. Take the usual amount of this stimulant, as found in common air, and the usual amount of other stimulants as found in common foods, no more, no less. As soon as you begin to do anything that is unnatural you begin to invite trouble. There's no royal road to health any more than to knowledge. Be assured of that.

Climate Sekers in Mexico.

DR. ARTHUR A. COTTEW sends the following communication from Guadalajara, Mexico:

"Although I am living here temporarily, I, as also many others here, get the Los Angeles Times supplement. I notice in an article Sunday before last, on this city, many errors. It was evidently written by someone who had a full purse and who was not long here. This is no place for any American to come who has not capital and who cannot speak the language. There are quite a number of United States citizens here who wish they were back in the States and don't know how to get there. Sanitary conditions here are not as we would require them to be. The natives have the drug habit badly, and fly to the drug store for every ache or ailment. Much of their food is such that a white man's stomach won't digest it, and therein lies the cause of many complaints from tourists.

"Most of the lower orders are affected with lice and fleas and it is a common thing to see women sitting on the edge of the sidewalk picking them out of each other's heads. In conversing with a native he asked me 'why the Lord troubled them with such vermin,' and I could not make her understand that it was due to personal uncleanliness. Many Americans come here for climate and health and also through being misguided by just such articles as the one on Guadalajara

SUNBRIGHTS CALIFORNIA FOOD CO.

Gentlemen: I nursed my baby until she was six months old, then began giving her cows' milk diluted with water every day. She did not like it, and only took three or four ounces and threw part of that up. I then began with Sunbrights and gave her three meals a day. She took seven ounces at a feeding, liked it, and it appeared to be perfectly digested, so that I could see it combined very well indeed with what mother's milk the child got, as one could not find a healthier baby. She sleeps soundly all night with one feeding about midnight. Your truly,

Care of the Body.

above mentioned. Now, the well-to-do Mexicans are conservative and won't mix with every Tom, Dick or Harry. Consequently those with whom the unintroduced Americans do associate are not the desirable ones, and the foreigner then loses caste and gets into the lazy, shiftless habits and ways of the people, from which it is very difficult to break away. Many of these lie in wait for the tourists and try the role of guide and general sponger.

"The climate here is undoubtedly excellent, but no one should contemplate coming unless they are provided with ample means. During the summer months there is not a night when a blanket or two is not welcome and one can sit in the open air till bedtime without discomfort.

"It will take many years before the people here learn the value of the care of the body. They don't like innovations and instead of being instructed by many of the Americans who come here, many of these degenerate to their level. Native food and fruits are excellent and cheap, but all imported articles are very dear. In this city I have found the meals at the native hotels much better than those at hotels with an English name."

The Ice Habit.

A DISPATCH from London announces that Americans in London have begun to get the slow-going Britishers to consume iced beverages, and that they are becoming very popular. So much the worse for the Britishers. Hitherto they have been sensible enough to refuse to endanger their stomachs in this manner. There is no country in the world where ice is so plentifully used as in the United States. Also, there is no country in the world where there is so much dyspepsia, or where there are so many dentists and doctors. When the stomach is chilled by swallowing frozen stuff, it is absolutely incapacitated from performing the office of digestion. More cases of kidney diseases are caused by the temperature of ice-cold beer than by the beer itself. Moreover, this is a foolish thing to do, to quench thirst. It only does so for a brief period, when you are thirstier than ever.

Instead of drinking a lot of ice cold liquids, in very hot weather, next time try a cup of hot black tea made weak. Also live almost entirely on fresh fruits and salads, avoiding entirely fats, starches and sweets.

Healthy Jews.

THE remarkable health and vitality of the Jews has been frequently commented upon. As has been previously observed, in this department, it is doubtless largely due to the excellent hygienic laws of Moses—especially the avoidance of pork—which are still followed more or less strictly by a large percentage of the Jewish race. Here is another suggestion of a reason why Jewish children grow up more vigorous than the average Christian children. It is from Emanu-el, a Jewish paper published in San Francisco.

"The Jewish mothers are better mothers than English mothers. They feed their children from the breast, and not from the bottle. Jewish children at twelve years of age weigh several pounds more than English children of the same class, and stand two inches higher."

Wanted—A Cure for Boils.

THE editor of this department of The Times, inculcating the gospel of how to keep well, writes that he has been suffering keenly from a boil on his leg. If the department is any more painful than usual this week, it may be attributed to the boil and not to the editor. There is nothing the "matter" with Brook; it is all in the boil. Although careful readers of the philosophy of "The Care of the Body" are supposed not to have boils, spavins or ring-bones, and to stand without hitching, the philosopher is not bound by his own precepts. To inquirers as to how not to catch boils, the whooping cough and such things, Dr. Brook says that the best way, after all that has been written, is not to let 'em catch you.—[Office Cat.

MAKING OF LEAD PENCILS.

The number of pencils used in the United States annually, if divided evenly, would leave only two for each one of its population. A pair of pencils a year would be a small allowance for those requiring them every day. Yet, at this rate, when the total of about 160,000,000 for the whole country is calculated, one can not help wondering how it is possible to consume such a vast number of pencils.

Some of the pencils are "made in Germany," but of the entire number that Americans use nine-tenths are of home manufacture. A considerable quantity of this article is also exported as well as imported. The pencil factories of the United States employ upward of 2000 persons, paying them about $700,000 in wages every year. America's annual output of pencils is worth $2,000,000.

The wood most commonly sought for making pencils is Virginia or red cedar, which grows abundantly in the South, especially in Alabama and Florida. Europe, having nothing as good among its own trees for pencil-covering as Virginia cedar, obtains its supply of this material from the United States. But the American manufacturer is compelled to go abroad for the graphite contained in pencils. Mexico, Bohemia, Ceylon and Siberia yield the best qualities of graphite. The preparation of graphite, of which, with clay, pencil lead consists, is an important industry in itself, and it has its home in Germany.—[Exchange.

INDIVIDUAL WARS.

INSTANCES WHERE FOOLHARDY MEN HAVE DEFIED THE POWER OF GOVERNMENTS.

[St. Louis Globe-Democrat:] Most people can remember how Jules Guerin, president of the anti-Semitic league, shut himself up in "Ft. Chabrol," in Paris, in the summer of 1899, and defied the entire armed forces of the French republic for the space of six solid weeks.

His "fort" was merely a private dwelling house, but strongly barricaded, the windows and doors protected with sandbags and the walls loopholed. Inside were a round dozen of desperate men, armed to the teeth. And, although among the battalions of regulars that day and night surrounded the place were doubtless many brave men, none cared for such short odds as would have been entailed by being the first to enter.

So day and night succeeded day and night, and still the "garrison" held out. The government troops blocked up the drains, cut off the water and stopped all food supplies.

Jules and his friends caught the rain that fell on the roof in improvised cisterns, and some small quantities of provisions were smuggled in somehow by sympathizers from outside. But in the end, one of their number having meanwhile died of starvation, they were forced to capitulate (September 20, 1899,) after one of the most remarkable single-house sieges on record.

M. Guerin was tried on a charge of "conspiring to overthrow the republic and waging war against the French nation," found guilty and sentenced to ten years' detention in a fortress.

George Dosza was a Szekler, or peasant of Szekelyfold, a district of Hungary. He was a quiet, law-abiding man, notable only for his great strength and tall stature.

One day, however, an Austrian noble thought fit to decoy away from her father's house Dosza's only daughter, a maiden of 14. The distracted parent sought the abductor far and near, but failing to find him, journeyed to Vienna and laid his case before the Emperor.

The latter only laughed. Whereupon the peasant returned to his own village and pasted upon the door of his little cabin a formal declaration of war against his sovereign. A month later he was marching on Vienna at the head of a huge, but undisciplined and ill-equipped army.

At first the luck was all on his side. He defeated the regular troops in a number of pitched battles, carried by assault several large and strongly fortified towns, and was actually within sight of the capital, whence the Emperor had already fled, when he was betrayed into an ambush through the treachery of a guide.

The misfortune constituted the beginning of the end. The bulk of his followers fell away from him and were hunted through the mountains and woods like wild beasts. Altogether it is said that over 150,000 of them were put to the sword.

The "Jack Cade of Hungary," having been taken prisoner, was seated on an iron throne, beneath which a huge fire had previously been kindled, crowned with a red-hot iron crown, and his flesh torn from his bones with red-hot pinchers.

Not always, however, are heroes of Dosza's stamp equally unfortunate. John Ziska, for instance, who made war on behalf of the persecuted Hussites against the Emperor Sigismund, was only once defeated, and forced his sovereign in the end to treat with him on terms of equality.

Ziska lost one eye very early in his career, and the other at the storming of Prague. Nevertheless, though totally blind, he continued to lead his adherents from victory to victory. He died eventually of the plague, while besieging the castle of Craslau.

But, even then, his usefulness was not at an end, for his skin was tanned and made into a drumhead, in accordance with his last wishes, and its martial music served to inspire the Hussites with an arder that eventually overcame all obstacles.

DYSPEPTIC PHILOSOPHY.

ALLERTON ENCOUNTERS THE SISTER OF THE "SMUG."

By a Special Contributor.

Fordyce and Allerton were leaning out of Allerton's windows—a window to each—taking a contemplative survey of the Great Court of Trinity across the geraniums in the window boxes. There is always something to be seen in the Great Court, and the most comfortable way of seeing it, whatever it may be, is through a haze of tobacco smoke from a first-floor window in the [illegible]west corner. You can see all that is worth seeing in the court itself without turning your head—the hall, the chapel, the great gate, the master's lodge, and the fountain. The green of the level lawns, the colors of the flower beds and the window boxes, and the sky on a soft June day make up a picture which remains with you.

It was in the May week. There was no work to be done, the weather was perfect, Fordyce and Allerton were in their second year, and as yet, free from troubles, financial or otherwise. Their souls, therefore, were full of content.

"That little beast Henty has got his people up," said Fordyce.

"[illegible] mother, frisky aunt, sister with spectacles and [illegible] with Cambride blue ribbon?" hazarded Fordyce.

"Don't know," said Allerton. "I haven't seen them." "Henty is a disagreeable little smug," said Allerton. "I was playing the piano the other morning and he came to say I was interfering with his work."

"Well, I'm a bit of a Wagnerian myself," remarked Fordyce, "but I might get a trifle shirty if I lived underneath a fellow who was always playing the overture to [illegible] with one finger."

"It wasn't his finger," explained Allerton.

"Didn't you have a row with him before?"

"Yes, I'm always having rows with him. The other night I got his bath out and filled it with water, and [illegible] just inside his door, and he tripped over it and fell in."

"And he objected to that, did he? What a funny, cross-grained chap!"

"I didn't do it without a reason. I hate your little goggle-eyed smug who walks about as if the place belonged to him."

"Of course you do. The place belongs to you and [illegible] it?"

"Holy poker, what a blaze of beauty!" was the next observation.

A small party had come through from Neville's Court and were standing on the top of the hall steps. There was a stately matron in voluminous skirts, two small and somewhat insignificant men, who seemed to be doing the honours of the place, and two young girls, tall and graceful, in all the airy charm of their summer bravery.

"If it isn't Henty and his party!" exclaimed Allerton.

"Capital little chap, Henty," said Fordyce. "I was introduced to him at breakfast at my tutor's a year ago. I always meant to look him up. I think I shall [illegible] this afternoon."

"Perhaps I was rather a cad to put that bath in his way," said Allerton, reflectively.

"So, you were," replied his friend. "However, it's done and can't be helped. The best thing you can do is to keep out of the way while you are both up."

Then he laughed. "Do my eyes deceive me," said Fordyce, as the little party came down the steps and [illegible] staircase, "or is that my old friend, Ethel Mainwaring? It is, by Jove! How the deuce does [illegible] with Henty?"

One of the girls looked up at the window and smiled and nodded at Fordyce. The rest of the party looked up with interest, but a low-spoken word from one of them changed interest to frigid displeasure.

"They won't have anything to do with you, my boy," said Fordyce. "You're the naughty man who nearly gave dear George Augustus his death of cold. But I wonder how Ethel Mainwaring got here?"

"Who the deuce is Ethel Mainwaring?" asked Allerton, who seemed a trifle out of temper.

"They've got the next place to ours in the country. We have always been great pals. Why, bless you, she used to think nothing of cutting me over the head with a croquet mallet, and many's the time I've lugged a handful of her hair out by the roots in the dear, dead days beyond recall."

In the rooms beneath, Henty's party were resting from the fatigues of inspection. "I didn't know you knew Fordyce," said Henty to his cousin.

"Dicky Fordyce!" replied Miss Mainwaring. "I should think I did, little wretch; I've had to keep him in order all my life. Why, they live at Willeby, next to us. You must have heard of them, Harry."

"I don't remember," said Henty. "He's rather a swell though, in the cricket eleven, and all that."

"Yes, I know, little object! It does seem ridiculous. I've bowled him out hundreds of times at home."

"Is he a friend of that young man upstairs who nearly drowned poor Harry?" inquired Mrs. Henty.

"He is," answered poor Harry, "If you know him Ethel, you might ask him why he goes about with such a cad as Allerton."

"I think I'll leave Dick to choose his own friends, Harry," said Miss Mainwaring with a glance at her pretty cousin, "I have heard him speak of Mr. Allerton. Doesn't he row in the university boat?"

"Yes," admitted Henty.

"That makes it all the worse," said Henty's sister; "a big man like that bullying a little weak man like Harry."

Harry was not so much taken with this view of the matter. "I can hold against anyone, thank you, Lilian," he said, "but Allerton is a cad, for all that."

"Yes, dear, I know," said Lilian. "You always said you were very plucky and of course we believe you."

That afternoon was the last day of the races, and Henty's party found themselves in due course walking up and down the meadow at Ditton Corner, or watching the boats from their carriage. Fordyce came up to greet Miss Mainwaring, and was kindly received by the Hentys.

"You are more fetching than ever in that get-up, Ethel," he said, as they walked down the meadow between the carriages and the line of people on the banks. "Any amount of fellows have asked to be introduced to you, but I said you had just recovered from the measles and it wasn't safe. However, we'll see what we can do tonight. You are coming to our ball, of course. But what are you doing with the Hentys?"

"Oh, they are cousins of sorts, and Lilian is a great friend of mine."

"The youth's rather a trial, isn't he?"

"Conceited little silly! I should like to take off his spectacles and pull his nose."

"Well, I should, if I were you. Look, there's the First Trinity boat going up. They are bound to make their bump tonight. There's Allerton rowing seven, the chap you saw me with this morning, I must introduce him to you at the ball."

"Didn't he cause dear Harry to take an unwilling bath, or something of the sort?"

"Yes, You don't mind much, do you?"

"Oh, not a bit. But they do. They look upon Mr. Allerton as a ruffian of the deepest dye."

"Poor old Job! We call him Job you know, because he's a row man, and rowing men sometimes get ——"

"A little impatient—yes, I know. But why should he mind?"

"Because, my dear young lady, ever since Adam first saw Eve in the garden of Eden——"

"What—Lilian! What fun! But she is awfully pretty, isn't she. Don't you think so?"

"Well, you see, when you are about you can hardly expect me to——"

"Talk like anything but an idot—no, I never do. Well, if you don't admire her, lots of people do."

That night the Trinity Hall ball took place in the Guildhall. There were many pretty girls there, but none prettier than Henty's sister and cousin. Very early in the evening Allerton, relieved from the exigencies of training, was brought up by Fordyce to be introduced to Miss Mainwaring. After securing a dance with that young lady, he was introduced to Mrs. Henty, who barely acknowledged his bow, and to Miss Henty, who said that her programme was full up, and then ostentatiously gave two dances to a friend of her brother's.

"That's a facer," said Allerton to himself. "I'm going to dance with her tonight or tomorrow, all the same."

"You are a donkey, Lil," whispered her cousin to her on being brought back after Allerton's dance. "He dances beautifully. I am going to cut that red-haired thing for him later on."

"A little horror!" Miss Henty crossly. "He has been dancing on my shoes, if you call it dancing, ever since we began, and I've promised him another."

"Well, it serves you right for treating Mr. Allerton so badly. He feels it very much. He almost cried about it."

"I don't care. I think it was great impudence coming up to us at all after the way he behaved to Harry. But I hate this. I wish we could go home. I must say I don't think much of Harry's friends."

"I don't think anything of them at all," replied Miss Mainwaring. "I'm going to cut them for the future, and dance with Dick Fordyce's."

Miss Mainwaring pursued that shameless course for for the rest of the evening, and enjoyed herself very much. Poor Lilian was reduced almost to the verge of tears, for it had never befallen her before to dance time after time with series of partners whose idea of waltzing was to clasp her waist and run around and around her, while she made the best of her way through the other couples. When it came to her turn to dance again with her brother's red-haired friend, who was dangerous as well as incompetent, she suddenly felt that she could stand it no longer. She saw him coming across the hall, and looked around with an agonized longing for escape.

"Ask her now," said the kind Miss Mainwaring, who was coming back with Allerton. The next moment Lilian found herself gliding over the floor with the first decent partner she had had that evening.

After two rounds, Allerton began to slow down, "Go on please," she commanded, and he went on. After two more rounds he opened his mouth to say something. "Don't talk," she said; so they went through the remainder of the dance in silence. Then they went into a sitting out room.

"I'm not going to talk to you," she said. "I hate you for behaving as you have to my brother, and I wish I hadn't danced with you now—only I'd had such a lot of miserable partners."

"Oh, all right," said Allerton. "Only, shan't we look rather idiots sitting here and saying nothing?"

"I don't mind if we do. I'm not going to talk to you again."

"Are you going to dance with me again?"

"No."

"Not tomorrow, at our dance?"

"No."

"I didn't hurt your brother, you know."

No answer.

"And I shouldn't have done it at all if I had known he was your brother."

Still no answer.

"I say—can't you forgive me for it?"

Miss Henty fanned herself elaborately, and looked round the room with interest.

"Aren't you going to answer anything I say?" Still not a word.

"How could I tell he was going to turn out to be your brother? You're not a bit like him."

"I should hope not, indeed."

"There, you've spoken at last."

"I haven't."

"Yes, you have. Look here, Miss Henty, I'm awfully sorry about it. I'll apologize to the little—to your brother, or do anything else you like—only do say you will dance with me tomorrow."

The music from the ballroom was heard. Lilian jumped up with alacrity and made her way out.

"I shan't go to the beastly dance at all," said Allerton, as he followed her.

She looked up at him out of pretty china blue eyes. "Then how can I dance with you?" she asked demurely.

Allerton enjoyed the rest of that May week exceedingly. So did Miss Henty.

SILENT READING.

In reading silently one ought to be as little conscious of the printed page as possible. If one can read a description in Scott and see the picture like a painting or an actual scene, without consciousness of the printed page, one does his best reading. From this it follows that in teaching a child to read we ought not to make him needlessly conscious of the printed page. All needless analysis of words into letter and sounds is harmful. Words, like window panes, are things to look through, not things to look at. The more transparent and invisible they are the better they perform their function in reading. This condemns needless phonetic analysis in our primary schools.

Furthermore, in reading in adult years, we see words, phrases, and even sentences as wholes. We are never conscious of the letters in a word. The smallest unit to the eye in reading is the word. Hence the habit of taking in words and phrases as wholes should be formed in the primary school before there is any analysis of words either into letters or into sounds. It is a familiar psychological fact that of two habits formed to do the same thing, the first tends to persist much more strongly all through life than the last. The habit of seeing words and phrases as wholes, which is to persist through life, should therefore be taught first. —[T. M. Balliet, in School Work.

BISHOP'S

The sign of good eating

The sign of good eating is hung out at every grocery store that sells Bishop's goods. Is hung out at every home that serves Bishop's goods.

There's a product bearing the Bishop name, for almost every course, every meal.

Try the "Bishop" Crackers, Catsup, Soups, Baked Beans, Jellies, Preserves. You'll find each and every one to be "good eating."

Bishop's Jellies--Preserves

The housekeeper knows the care necessary and the time it takes to put up good Jellies and Jams.

She can appreciate why the Bishop Products must necessarily be so dainty and good, when she knows only the finest California fruits are used; that they're cooked slowly, a little at a time in small cooking pans; that no preservative of any kind is used and no substitute for pure fruit or sugar.

Bishop's Jellies and Jams come out of the glass and jar as dainty, as true in flavor, as good as any home-made preserves.

Filters are Dangerous

DRINK PURITAS

> "Neither boiling nor filtering impure water renders it fit for use. Boiling does not destroy all the worst disease germs, but condenses all the other impurities in the water and makes it more impure than before. Disease germs breed with great rapidity in the best filters and pass through with the water. The only safe water to use for drinking and cooking is that purified by distillation."

Progressive physicians all over the United States recognize the futility of attempting to purify water by filter. Yet some people think that a filter attached to the kitchen faucet renders the city water pure and perfectly safe for drinking.

Experience has proved the contrary. Perhaps the most undesirable feature of the city water is the large amount of mineral matter it contains. This matter is entirely dissolved in the water—just as sugar dissolves if you put a few grains in a glass of water. No filter can possibly rid water of minerals so dissolved—they have really become a part of the water. Filters sometimes hold back decayed vegetable matter that is floating in the water. Then your filtered water flows through this layer of filth inside the filter.

There is just one method of thoroughly purifying water—by distillation. There is just one scientifically distilled, scientifically aerated, carefully bottled water obtainable hereabouts—Puritas Distilled Water. Puritas is absolutely pure water—wholesome, healthful, reliable—every demijohn, all the time. Inexpensive, easy to get.
